J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Harlingen, Texas

Dear Herald:

If the audience will come to order we would like to introduce Mr. Lew Snyder. The most of you boys living outside of Texas have most likely heard of Roosevelt and Jim Farley, but probably some of you have never heard of Lew Snyder. Lew is one of the Snyder boys and the Snyder boys have always been pretty strong for watermelons and red-headed women, but Lew was never overly particular about the color of the hair, although his appetite for watermelons has been something to write home about.

Lew is the district manager of the Rio Grande circuit of theatres, which circuit is known as Interstate Theatres Corporation, with headquarters at Dallas, and we understand that this circuit is composed of something like 120 theatres, more or less, and we don't know whether it is more or less, but we do know that this circuit here in the Rio Grande valley is composed of theatres at McAllen, Weslaco, Harlingen, San Benito and Brownsville, and Lew is the general manager, and our guess is that the Interstate showed good judgment when they put him in charge. Lew says he wants to have a long visit with us. He doesn't know that we could tell him all we know in a very few minutes, but, anyhow, we are going to go back there and see him again.

A little girl from Manitoba, Canada, who is living next to us, said to our housekeeper, "Say, Miss Bessie, do you know what a Canadian Plymouth Rock hen says when she lays a square egg?" And Elsie said, "Why, no, I don't; what does she say?" And she replied, "She says, 'Ouch'."

Shine Mason of the Palace theatre in McAllen invited us down to the Palace to see "Banjo on My Knee." This picture is based on the story of the folks living in houseboats on the Mississippi river, which, we believe, was written by Edna Ferber. This picture was especially interesting to us because we have seen these houseboats on the Mississippi, and on Lake Union in Seattle, Wash., and on the Williamette river in Portland, Ore., and it described these folks, and how they lived, so vividly that we were carried right back to the water front. If you have never seen houseboats and the people who live in them it will be interesting for you to see this picture. Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea have the leads, and they give a very creditable performance and play their roles in a very realistic way. We can't recall the name of the man who did the comedy work on his "musical contraptions" (Walter Brennan), but he was exceptionably good and you will like him.

There is an old Hoosier from Newton county, Indiana, the county we came from, who operates the apartment where we live, and he told us of a couple of neighbors he had back there whose farms joined. One was Casey and the other one was Murphy. Murphy's cows made a habit of getting into Casey's corn and Casey tried to get Murphy to fix his fence, but he wouldn't do it. One morning he saw Murphy's cows in his corn and it aroused his Irish and he went over to call on him, but Murphy saw him coming and ducked out of the house and went over to a neighbor's house. When Casey rapped at the door Mrs. Murphy came out and he said, "Good marnin' to yez, Mrs. Murphy. Is Patrick at home?" and she replied, "He is not, Mr. Casey; did yez want to see him?" He replied, "I did that, Mrs. Murphy; I came over to bate hell out of him, but another day will do just as well."

Every time the weather man reports a "norther" on its way down here these vegetable and citrus fruit growers in the valley get cold feet and the chills run up and down their backs like a hound dog after a cottontail. There is one time in the year that they all pray, Mexicans and all, and that's when there is danger of frost. A freeze down here in December, January or February would be as bad as a drouth up in the corn belt, and that's bad enough. California's loss of fruit by freezing is certainly a disaster to the whole country, though it may be beneficial to the fruit growers of the valley, but that benefit is only sectional.

Our Manitoba neighbor told us a story which may be old to most of the folks, but it was new to us. He said that a Scotchman, an Englishman and an Irishman were walking down the road, and they came to a deserted cabin and they looked in and saw a skunk inside and they made a bet as to who could go in and stay with the skunk the longest. The Scotchman went in and stayed five minutes and came out, and the Englishman went in and stayed eight minutes and he came out, and then the Irishman went in and stayed 10 minutes—and the skunk came out. We don't believe a word of it.

We'll bet that everybody is happy here in the valley today. Last evening it began to rain and kept it up all night and is still at it today and it looks like a rainy spell, and this will ward off any likelihood of frost, for the present at least. The canning factories, the juice plants and the packing plants are all running full blast trying to get the fruit harvested.

We just received a letter from Andy Anderson of Detroit Lakes, Minnesota, saying he would start for Brownsville, Texas, the last of the week and hoped to see us. That's a mighty sensible hope. We hope he does, too. He also says he hopes we can go fishing. That boy is chock full of good hopes. We hope we can, too. Andy, you know, helps Herb Anderson operate one of Minnesota's most popular playhouses at Detroit Lakes. Of course, Herb does the most of the work, but Andy helps some.

The other night we went down to Shine's Palace theatre and saw "Come and Get It" with Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer and Joel McCrea. This is a picture of lumbering in the north woods, and is mighty realistic. We have seen them cutting down pine trees and hauling them to the river in the deep snow to be rafted down the river to the sawmills, and this picture took us back to the lumber woods of northern Michigan and northern Wisconsin, where we ate sowbelly and beans with the rest of the boys and liked 'em. If you want a he-man's picture you better get this one. It may not please the feminine part of your audience so good, for there is no mushy stuff in it.

W. H. Blair, manager of the Blair Enterprises of Belleville, Kan., writes and says he wants the HERALD for four of their houses. Now, there is some sense to that. We like to hear from the boys, and we wish they would remember that Jim's boys send our mail to McAllen, Texas, and probably will until about April 1st, or until it warms up up in the corn belt. A letter from any of you boys thrills us about like hearing the nurse say "Hello, Papa." You guys stop being so doggone lazy.

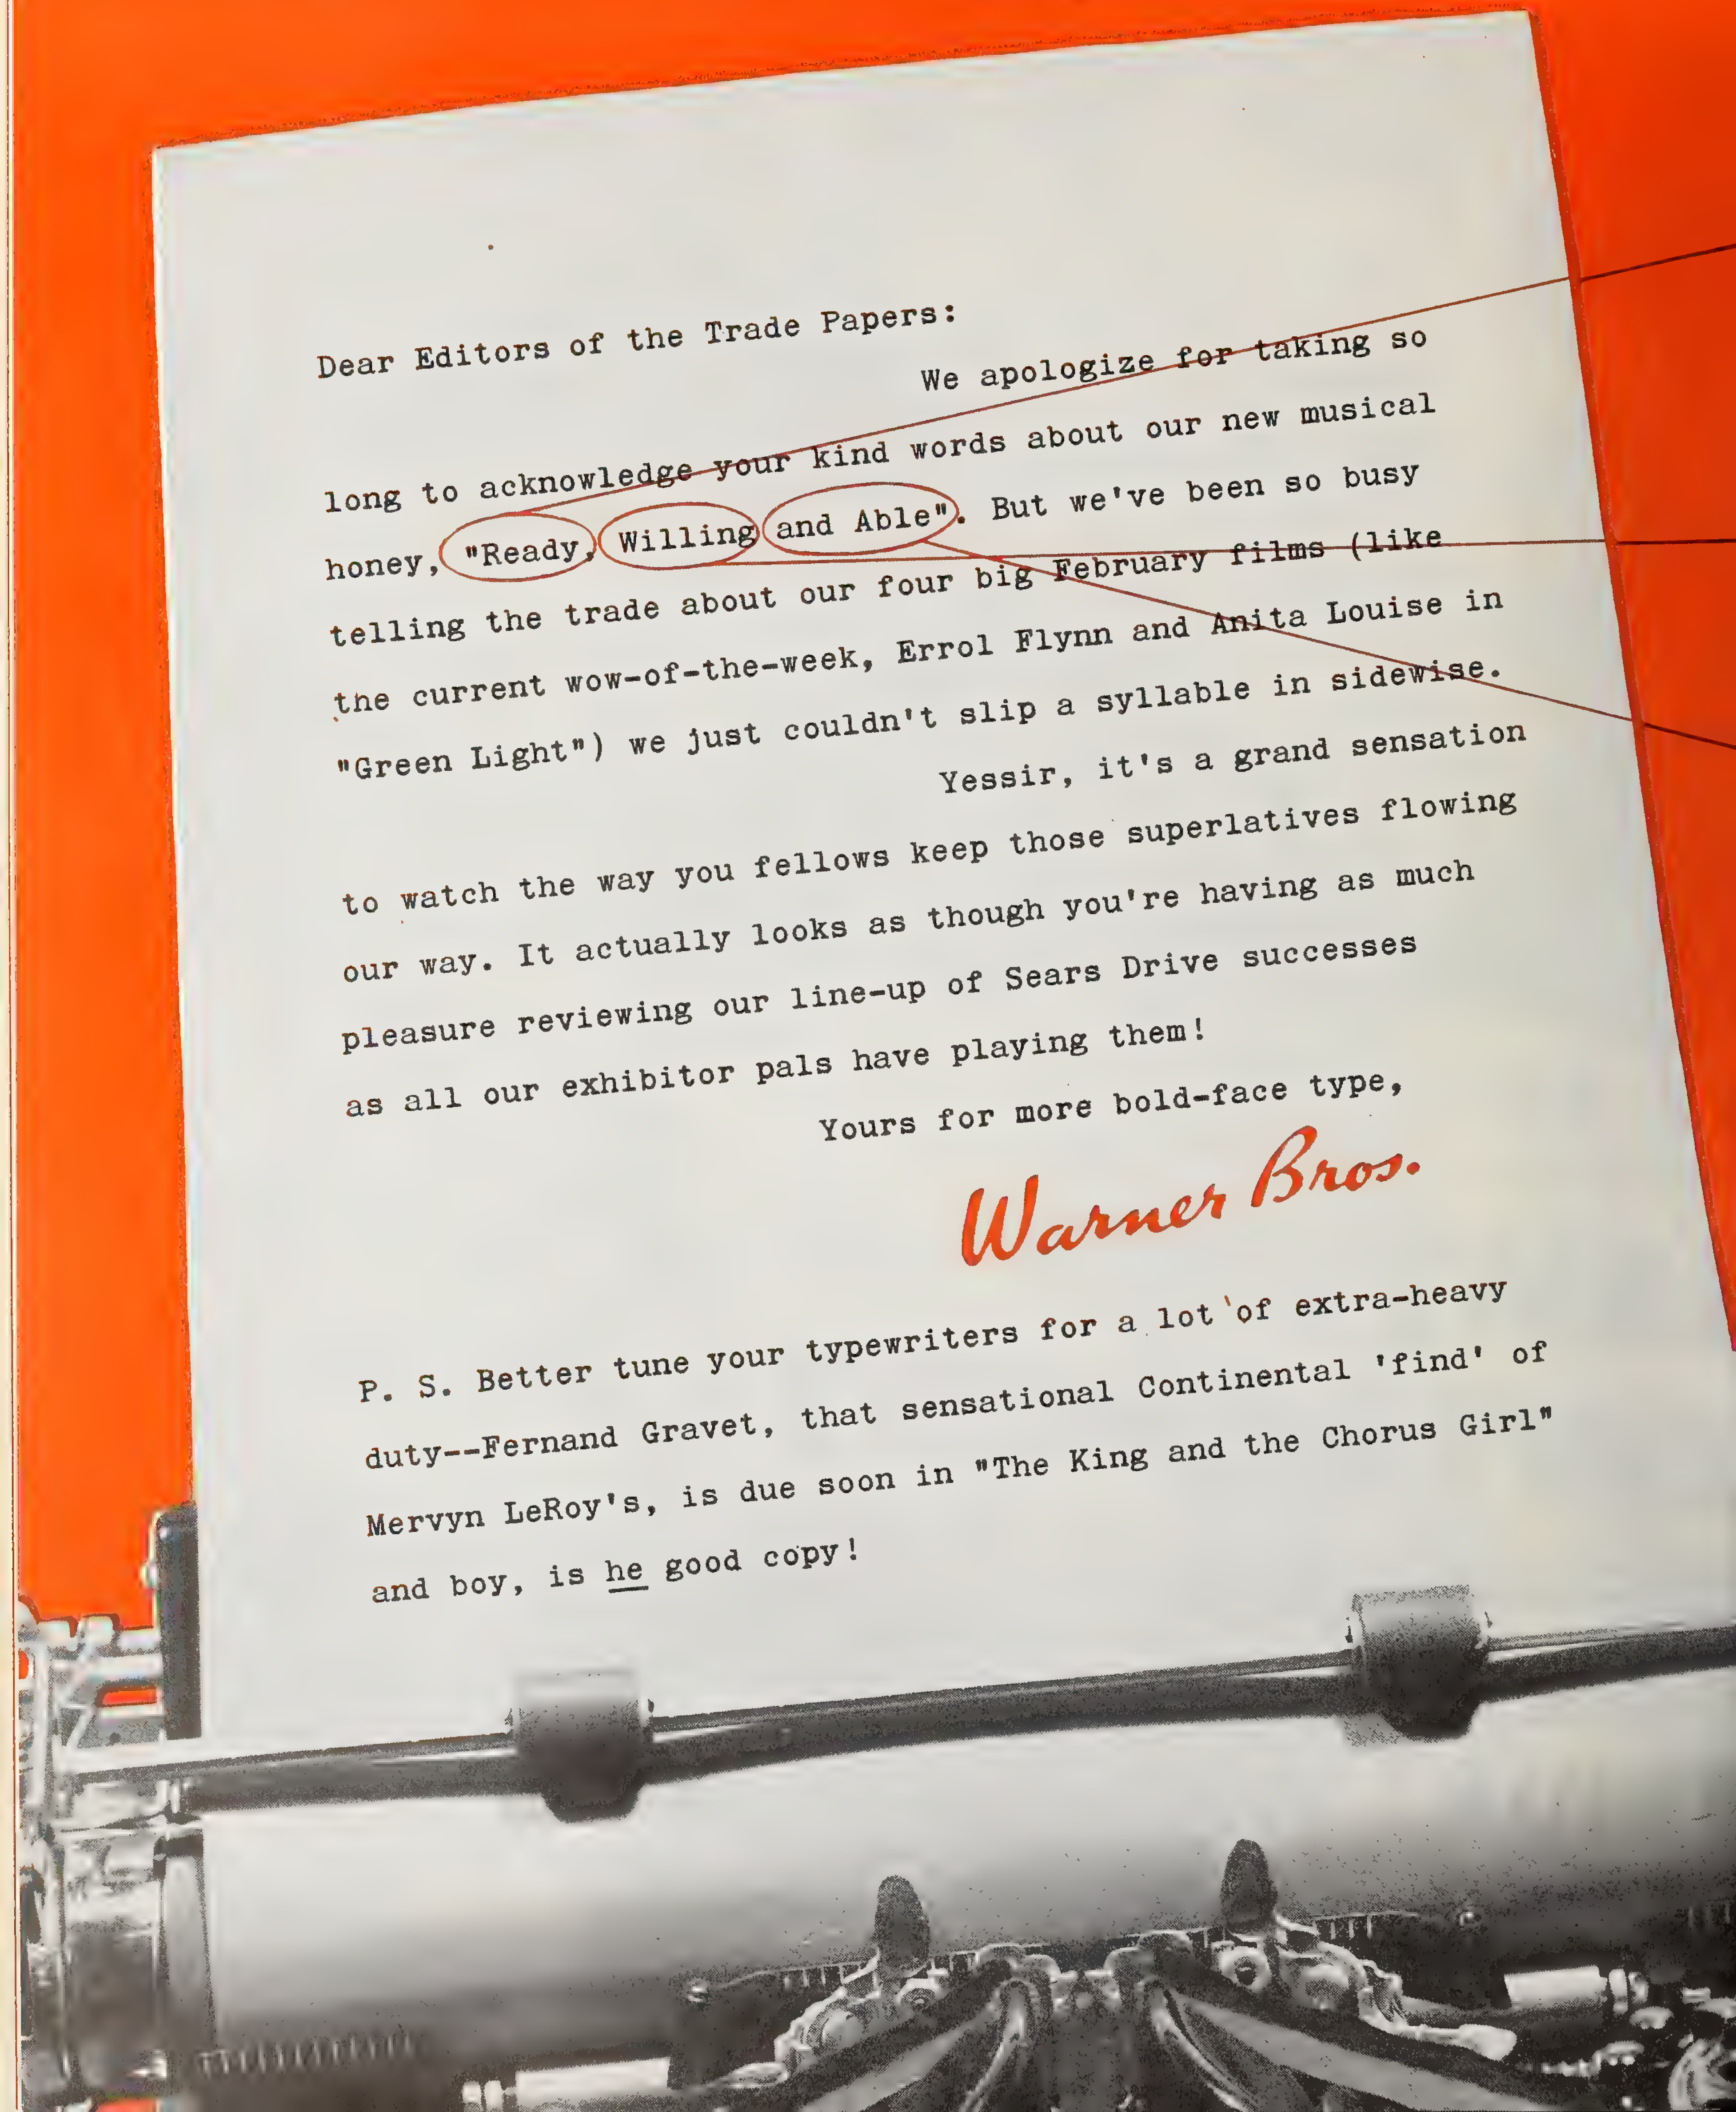
LETTER to the EDITORS



Dear Editors of the Trade Papers:

We apologize for taking so long to acknowledge your kind words about our new musical honey, "Ready, Willing and Able". But we've been so busy telling the trade about our four big February films (like the current wow-of-the-week, Errol Flynn and Anita Louise in "Green Light") we just couldn't slip a syllable in sidewise.

Yessir, it's a grand sensation to watch the way you fellows keep those superlatives flowing our way. It actually looks as though you're having as much pleasure reviewing our line-up of Sears Drive successes as all our exhibitor pals have playing them!

Yours for more bold-face type,

Warner Bros.

P. S. Better tune your typewriters for a lot of extra-heavy duty--Fernand Gravet, that sensational Continental 'find' of Mervyn LeRoy's, is due soon in "The King and the Chorus Girl" and boy, is he good copy!

LET 'EM ALONE

PEARL BUCK, who is also Mrs. Richard J. Walsh, now of filmland fame for her "The Good Earth," has given public utterance with piercing cries against " . . . the enormous, stupid and silent censorship of the mass mind," compelling, she thinks, the producer and his playwrights to abandon artistic integrity in favor of happy endings, success stories and similar "abominable fodder," which is "not necessarily true to life."

Miss Buck estimates that a typical motion picture audience contains not more than five per cent of persons intelligent enough to enjoy a "worthwhile film."

The poignant lady is entitled to a theoretical sympathy. More practically it should be observed to her that it would be much more difficult for the movies, and for writers, too, to make a living if the customers were all as intelligent as she would demand. They are hard enough to please, now.

WE have been reasonably patient, but the time has come when it is necessary to list for oblivion another word worn ragged in motion picture criticism—it is "nostalgia" and all its derivative forms. "Nostalgia" was brought into the lexicon of the picture writers by the late Mr. Andre Sennwald, who used it with propriety. It will be appropriate to consider that he took it away with him.

ETAOIN, also CMFWYP!

THROUGH all the depression years, your editor was wondering what might be the source of his unquenchable, ebullient optimism, that cheery glow of faith that, we trust, has ever shone from this page. And now he has found it.

It is, of all places, in a catalogue, the type specimen book of the O'Brien Press, that typographical super-machine which once a week prints for you the multicolored and ponderous Motion Picture Herald at the speed of ephemeral newspaper production. Whenever the editor has decided to interfere with the staff's orderly process of producing the Herald and turned to the typebook for dressy notions in the art of printing, he has been confronted with this specimen sentence: "How much of the unparalleled prosperity of the United States is due to the extensive use of printing!"

Consider the reiterative effect of that, year after year, dropping on the editor's subconsciousness like limeladen water in a cave, building stalagmites. Steel went to 25 and Paramount to a whisper on the "Big Board" but the typebook kept talking of "unparalleled prosperity", in Caslon Old Style, in True Cut Caslon Italic, in Roman, in Gothic, in Scotch Old Style, in Century, bold and italic, too, in Gothic Extended, black and blatant, in nonpareil, brevier and minion, up to 72 point even, in lowbrow Hobo and classic Della Robbia, all the big parade that Gutenberg started.

"How much of the unparalleled prosperity of the United States is due to the extensive use of printing!"

It rings. It stings. It lingers.

After consulting the document, one is left in doubt whether it is a questioning, an expository statement, flat like that, or a New Deal exclamation! Sometimes it stops short, without punctuation, when the compositor is engaged in displaying big letters. Also every now and then it is followed by vast numbers, figures in the millions, just to display the numeral style maybe, but there is a suspicion that that is but a crafty device of E. J. Mordaunt, the author and editor of the typebook, to give a semblance of statistics to his theme song!

"How much of the prosperity of the United States, etc. . . ."

Anyway, in answer to how much, we say—"lots."

NOT all of Hollywood's "finds" get the limelight of attention. Just for instance, while the tumult and the shouting is going on about "Three Smart Girls" you haven't heard that the story of it came from a "let's see what you can do" assignment from Mr. Charles R. Rogers to Miss Adele Comandini, who after a futile round of the studios appeared with a give-her-a-chance note from Dr. A. H. Giannini. For the protection of that amiable endorser it should, incidentally, be said that he is just as hard to convince as any two studios, also.

A WICKED GLEE accompanies the discovery that Mr. Rudyard Kipling, writing his autobiography, misquoted himself in: "For East is East and West is West and never the twain should meet." The first time he said it the verb was "shall." That, to be sure, is trivial beside the celerity with which his countryman, Mr. George Bernard Shaw, puts his foot in his mouth in his discourses on the motion picture.

NOW that Mr. David Selznick has officially received a League of Nations medal for his "Little Lord Fauntleroy," we may observe that Hollywood seems to have done better at Geneva than Ethopia.

This Week

Product

Eleven production companies have delivered approximately half of the features scheduled for the 1936-37 season. March 1st marks the beginning of the second six months of the film year. Studio activity indicates that the remaining half of the schedules will follow through on time. Most of the companies have several features completed and ready for release within the next month.

A table showing the status of production at the halfway mark and a list of the titles released to date are on page 13.

Newspaper Influence

Sixty-eight per cent of the average neighborhood motion picture theatre audience is influenced by film reviews in newspapers; 60 per cent read such reviews regularly.

These are the conclusions from a survey of film review habits of Kansas City and are explained on page 15.

High Definition

High definition, the transmission of television images which are scanned at the rate of 441 lines per frame instead of the old rate of 345 lines, is claimed as the latest development in the field. The new method is said by engineers of the Radio Corporation of America and the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, two companies most active in the field, to produce clear images without flickering. Philco gave a demonstration of its progress in Philadelphia last week. RCA engineers have confined themselves to private tests.

The Philadelphia show and other developments are on page 25.

Paramount Refunding

Paramount held the financial attention of Wall Street this week in connection with a new $15,000,000 plan of refunding, the while Warners definitely abandoned at this time any idea for its refinancing.

Columbia Pictures and Eastman Kodak have declared new stock dividends, as reported, along with other film financial news, on page 24.

Export Record

The United States Government reports that motion picture exports from this country are now going to 101 markets in the world, and that exports of both negative and positive film in 1936 reached a six-year high, Hollywood sending 209,651,404 linear feet of film last year to foreign countries.

A breakdown of the exports appears on page 23.

"State" Theatre

America's first "state" theatre is ending its first season, "highly successful" claims attending the anniversary, based on a 40,000-person audience in the State of Washington. The project will be continued, on grants from the Rockefellers.

Enlistment of government and private aid for the idea was required, as explained on page 64.

Brockliss Visits

J. Frank Brockliss of London, for many years a leading figure in Europe's film industry and the head of J. Frank Brockliss, Ltd., prominent distributor of motion picture equipment in England and Continental countries, is in America on an extended business trip. His company represents a number of American projection equipment manufacturers. He became connected with the motion picture in 1908 as a dealer in equipment. Later, however, he acquired distribution rights to the films of George Melies, Carl Laemmle and others. In 1912 he added production. That year he persuaded Sarah Bernhardt to come to London to appear in a film. The picture was "Queen Elizabeth." Mr. Brockliss is accompanied by Fred Tims, an official of his company.

Tricolor Stopped

Technicolor this week obtained a temporary injunction in the federal court of Los Angeles preventing Tricolor Corporation from issuing any more letters to exhibitors warning them they may be made defendants in patent infringement suits if they continue to exhibit color pictures. Tricolor and Technicolor are scheduled to air their differences in court next month with Tricolor claiming that Technicolor is infringing on a patent it claims to control.

See page 33.

Argentine Market

American films dominate the Argentine market according to a survey made by N. Bruski in Buenos Aires. Of 468 pictures released in that city during the first 11 months of 1936, 332 were American. Germany was second with only 34.

Mr. Bruski's report is on page 64.

Flood Relief

The efforts of the motion picture industry this week to aid the American Red Cross in the relief and financing of the rehabilitation of Mississippi-Ohio River flood zones resulted in thousands of dollars being raised. A monster benefit was held at the Music Hall in New York where over $60,000 was realized, and theatres in innumerable towns are holding similar affairs or collecting donations. At the same time, the reopening of theatres in the stricken zones is going ahead, although slowly.

Details are found on page 34.

Sol Lesser on England

Sol Lesser, back in Hollywood after a visit to England, expressed optimism with regard to the future of British production and the distribution of American films in Europe.

Mr. Lesser is quoted on page 31.

Alien Actors

Representatives of all branches of the stage and the motion picture industry are converging on Washington to protest the alien actor bill proposed by Representative Dickstein. Hearings on the measure opened on Wednesday and witnesses heard on the first day included Lawrence Tibbett, Walter Damrosch and Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA.

The hearing and other legislative news from Congress and the states is on page 16.

Paramount Partners

It was indicated this week in New York that Paramount's theatre operations may be placed on a permanently localized basis with the negotiations scheduled for next month between the company and A. H. Blank, last of the operating partners. It is expected that Mr. Blank will continue to operate his houses in the same manner that other former Paramount partners are now doing.

See story on page 23.

RKO Hearings

With a legal victory scored over Orpheum Circuit preferred stockholders who contested RKO's acquisition of Orpheum's assets, it was reported in New York this week that the way was about clear for federal court hearings of RKO creditors on the company's reorganization plan. The hearings, thrice postponed, are scheduled for this week.

See page 26.

Dismissal Upheld

The United States circuit court of appeals in Philadelphia on Tuesday, in handling down the opinion that it does not have legal power to compel patent pool syndicates to issue licenses to all applicants, upheld the dismissal by Federal Judge John P. Nields of Wilmington, Del., of the suit of F. A. D. Andrea, Inc., Woodside, N. Y., against Radio Corporation of America. The suit charged RCA with violating both the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws through "monopoly" of radio patents.

Studios on Air

The long discussed deal between General Mills, through its advertising agency, and the major studios in Hollywood calling for the broadcasting of actual production of motion pictures from the sound stages of the studios, was signed this week and the first program is scheduled to be heard shortly. Twentieth Century-Fox will be the scene of the first broadcast and the other studios will be covered in rotating order.

Details of the broadcast are found on page 32.

Box Office Influence

Revision of product in the making to bring it into conformity with current public predilection defined by theatre executives visiting Hollywood is expected to become general practice if current activity of two studios in that direction fulfills present promise.

See page 31.

British Renters Protest

Four of the most important recommendations of the socalled Moyne Committee come in for some sharp criticism in the report of the Kinematograph Renters Society to the Board of Trade. The distributors object to the proposed Film Commission for general control, to the flexible quota, the footage basis for determination of quota, and to the suggestion that registration of pictures for quota be based upon committee assessment of entertainment value, the socalled quality test.

The British distributors' conclusions are detailed on page 55.

Epidemic Wanes

Waning of the influenza epidemic expedited studio activity. Nine pictures were started and twelve finished.

Titles, players and directors are listed on page 31.

Censors Attacked

The Cleveland News has attacked the Ohio board of censors for the banning of the Amkino film, "Spain in Flames." An editorial criticizing the ban said that suppressing the picture violated the American principle of free circulation of opinion.

The paper is quoted on page 23.

23,000 in WPA

Harry Hopkins, Public Works Administrator, says there are 23,000 actors and musicians on Government works program theatrical relief rolls, musicians outnumbering actors four to one. Every state in the Union, except South Dakota, has such workers in the WPA.

A breakdown appears on page 26.

The Selznick Expansion

Selznick International Pictures, Inc., assumed control of the RKO Pathe studio in Hollywood on February 11th.

The story is on page 31.

Germany's Problem

Increased production costs without concomitant spread of profits and a continuously shrinking export market are making themselves felt upon the industry in Germany, particularly upon the smaller companies, writes J. K. Rutenberg from Berlin. Ufa and Tobis, the while taking a smaller loss than other concerns, have disposed of fully-owned sound studios, recording sets and printing plants. The exhibitor has borne a heavy share of the burden.

The problems before the industry in Germany are detailed on page 50.

Open Market

While Palestine is under Great Britain as a mandated territory, the land of International Jewry gives preponderant favor to American motion pictures. The annual turnover in receipts at the 35 theatres is estimated at a million dollars.

The situation in Palestine, as described by Isaac R. Molho at Jerusalem, is described on page 70.

Chinese Films Gain

So great has been the popularity of the product of the Chinese studios in their homeland that the income from their showings is far exceeding that of foreign productions. While technical deficiencies still are manifest, the distribution has reached its highest point.

The story of the film situation in China appears on page 59.

Convicted

Fourteen Balaban & Katz corporations, operating 32 theatres, have been convicted and fined $15 for each theatre on charges of operating chance games in violation of a Chicago ordinance. Attorneys for the circuit have petitioned for a new trial and arguments on an injunction to restrain the police from interfering with the games were to be heard in the Illinois supreme court on Wednesday.

The story of the trial is on page 17.

Exhibitor Conventions

National exhibitor organizations, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, are busy with plans for their annual conventions. The MPTO of Virginia held its yearly session in Richmond last week.

Convention plans and the Richmond meeting are reported on page 32.

UP BEFORE BREAKFAST (above) to see "Garbo Loves Robert Taylor", sometimes also known as "Camille". And in Los Angeles right where they make 'em, too.

This showing also included a giveaway with some sense to it, too—a free breakfast for the early bird patrons, who came to the show at 6:50 a.m. Pacific standard time. Unlike crockery and cash prizes for lucky numbers, this premium had something to do with the business, and everybody wins. Meanwhile, orange juice with movies sounds like a Chamber of Commerce notion.

IRENE CASTLE, she is Mrs. Fredric McLaughlin now and her husband is a coffee magnate in Chicago, but here she is in Hollywood and the show world again, this time signing an RKO contract to be an adviser on a Fred Astaire production in a story based on the Castle saga. Witnesses include Ned Depinet and, between them, George Stevens, director. Remember Irene Castle in "Patria" of World War days?

THE KID CYCLE, that is to say the newest one, is full upon us, with newcomers every day. The younger set just will not stay young, like Mickey Mouse, as is evidenced in the camera recording at the right presenting "Our Gang" of yesterday and today rejoined in the cast of a production entitled "Reunion in Rhythm", which sounds like a great place for a reunion.

Below, of the new procession of young hopefuls, we have a mischievous pair, Billy and Bobby Mauch, getting studio conscious at First National where they have the title roles of Mark Twain's—or it used to be his—"The Prince and the Pauper".

And at the lower right Master Desmond Tester of GB's "Non-Stop New York", now in production in England.

278 FEATURES DELIVERED BY ELEVEN DISTRIBUTORS

Producers Up to Schedule at Halfway Mark; Year Calls for 98 More Features from 11 Companies Than Last Year

Exhibitors, promised a total of 558 features by eleven producing companies, will have received approximately half that number on March 1st, the beginning of the second six months of the motion picture year. The 278 releases made available to date include 21 holdovers from the 1935-36 schedules, but the companies have completed, ready for release, an additional 48 features.

Production, geared to a higher numerical tempo than last year when only 460 features were listed for release, not only has kept pace with the increased schedules made necessary, among other factors, by the more widespread use of double features, but, as pointed out by high gross receipts and admission figures, has maintained a steady level of quality.

Studio activity indicates that most of the 287 features listed for the second half of the season will be ready for release on time. Completed or in work are many of the larger productions announced for this year, and ambitious historical and classical subjects programmed at the season's start are being kept to schedule.

The Production Record

The table appearing on this page shows the production record of the eleven companies as of March 1st.

Columbia, GB, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox have released more than half of their scheduled totals. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal are each halfway through their schedules, but MGM has five more ready for release, two of which are now being roadshown, and Universal is holding three for later release.

Grand National has completed only 20 of its promised 52 features and of these four have not yet been released, but its program did not begin until October 4th. Thirty-three Republic features have been released with 35 still to come. RKO Radio has delivered 23, of which five were holdovers from the 1935-36 program, but has five others ready for March and April. United Artists has released 11 and has eight more completed. Warner Brothers has delivered 29, including four holdovers, but six completed features bring the company's total to more than half the scheduled number.

Concentrating on Drama

Drama, vivid and vigorous, is the entertainment element upon which producers are concentrating, it is indicated in mid-season plans and activities at the studios. Analysis of subjects in preparation, on the stages, and recently completed, shows that of 136 pictures 85 can be classified as either drama or dramatic romance.

Typical of the straight drama classification into which 64 of the subjects fall are "Parnell," "Michael Strogoff," "The Good Earth," "Souls at Sea" and "Maid of Salem." Another group of 21, including such types as "When You're in Love," "Criminal Lawyer," "Wings of the Morning" and "Prisoner of Zenda," further illustrate the trend toward drama.

The remainder of the list is divided among comedy romances that follow the vogue of "My Man Godfrey," "Theodora Goes Wild" and "Libelled Lady" as well as straight comedies and musicals. Musicals comprise the largest group with 23 of this type in preparation or set for shooting. Twenty-one are comedy romances and seven are straight comedies.

Supporting the productions which by their number and importance define these trends is a full complement of secondary features. Westerns are not ignored, all the popular stars being slated to ride again many times, and the Charlie Chans, Jones Family, the Perry Masons and Jeeves again will appear.

Unprecedented mid-seasonal sales activities are being carried on by the distributors this year. In the last month most of the large companies have held regional sales conferences, and home office sales executives have made numerous field trips to confer with district managers. Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, United Artists, Universal, Gaumont British and Warner Brothers have held such meetings in recent weeks and are conducting special sales drives.

Eastern district branch managers and home office executives of RKO Radio met on Wednesday and Thursday of this week in New York, the third and final such conference for the company. Previous sessions were in San Francisco and Chicago. Following several sales meetings held by Warner Brothers forces, Norman H. Moray, general sales manager for Vitaphone short subjects, was on a tour of exchanges for discussions of trends in short subjects with salesmen and managers.

Convention Plans Undertaken

The annual conventions at which plans and policies for the 1937-38 product and sales will be defined are already being discussed in the home offices. Paramount executives are considering a plan to hold two sales meetings this year, one for the western offices and a second for the eastern group. Cities and dates have not been decided. Twentieth Century-Fox has scheduled its sales meeting for May 30th at Movietone City, and the sales executives are laying plans for the fifth anniversary Sidney R. Kent drive which is to open August 15th. The Grand National convention is tentatively set to take place in May at the new Grand National studio in Hollywood.

The 1936-37 productions which have been released by the 11 companies to date are:

MEETINGS PLANNED ON SCREEN TRENDS

RKO executives, meeting recently on the coast, discussed plans for holding four meetings a year in Hollywood to follow changes in subject trends and consequent alterations in production schedules. The theatre and production departments would be represented at the quarterly sessions. Better understanding between the divisions of the company is reported to have resulted from the meeting and one concrete result is said to have been the scrapping of several stories by the studio department at the request of the theatre division.

85 PER CENT OF PATRONS PREFER FACTUAL REVIEWS IN NEWSPAPERS

Exhibitor Finds That Sixty-eight Per Cent of His Customers Are Influenced by Numerous Critiques in the Daily Press

Comparatively Few Like the "Wisecrack" Type of Critique of Motion Pictures, Kansas City Showman Is Advised

by KENNETH FORCE
in Kansas City

Eighty-five per cent of the patronage of the average neighborhood motion picture theatre prefers the informational type of review, the kind that gives the facts of content of a production and leaves it to the patron to make up his or her own mind. Sixty-eight per cent is partly or wholly influenced by the newspapers' critiques, though regular readers of the reviews totaled 61 per cent.

Always a debatable question in and out of the industry: How much do newspaper reviews affect film theatre attendance?—E. E. Webber, owner and operator of the Mary Lue theatre at Kansas City, Missouri, conducted a study which reduced the foregoing conclusions. Mr. Webber circularized the following questionnaire among several thousands of patrons actual and prospective:

1. Do you read newspaper reviews of motion pictures regularly? .... Occasionally? .... Not at all? ....
2. Do these reviews decide whether or not you will go see the picture? Yes .... No ....
3. What type of review do you prefer: The clever sort whose fun is usually at the expense of the picture? .... Or the sort that simply gives you a clear idea of the picture and permits you to decide for yourself? ....

Although 68 per cent of those replying said that reviews affected their attendance, there were many qualifications expressed, such as these: "They do not altogether," "To some extent, but I form my own opinion," "Generally, but not always," "Usually," "Occasionally," "Sometimes," "To an extent," "Not always," "Not altogether," "Also reviews in Parents Magazines," "Most of the time." All these were classified as being influenced by the critiques, however.

"Reviews are not dependable," commented one woman who checked the question. A man wrote "Almost never."

Those who read film reveiws regularly are more likely to have their theatre attendance affected by them, it appeared from the questionnaire. Fifty-one per cent of those who answered read reviews regularly and were affected by them. Seventeen per cent who read reviews occasionally are influenced in their attendance. Eleven per cent read reviews regularly and are not affected. Twenty-one per cent read reviews only occasionally and are not at all influenced by them.

Eight of those who answered the questionnaire liked both the clever and the clear type of review, but the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the review which permits the moviegoer to do his own thinking.

It has been the consensus of exhibitors in this territory, Mr. Webber explained, that theatre attendance has been adversely affected by the apparent desire of critics to wisecrack the pictures in their reviews.

Presentation of information regarding product to the exhibitor is the objective of the "Showmen's Reviews" in Motion Picture Herald. Appearing on the first page of the department each week are the following words:

> "This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public."

One of the reasons prompting Mr. Webber to conduct the survey was that during his years in exhibition he has seen many pictures prove successful after negative reviews, and many fall down at the box office after favorable reviews. If the practical purpose of the newspaper review is to discuss a motion picture in such a manner that the public may judge before seeing it whether it is of the type and quality they are likely to enjoy, then the review does not attain its objective always, he added.

"During the past year or two I have watched several excellent movies go begging at first-runs," Mr. Webber said. "As the suburban houses played them, word got about that they were good, and they accumulated box-office punch rather than losing it as they went down the schedule of clearance. Either the reviewer could not convince the public that the picture was good, or his own idea of the picture did not coincide with the picture's entertainment qualities."

Prefer to be Own Critics

It has been the general belief, said Mr. Webber, that readers do not like the "wisecracking" type of review. The questionnaire bore this out.

"I prefer to be my own critic," was one women's comment. "Yes, then judge," was another. A man suggested, "I like an honest review;" another, "I like a clear idea." "I prefer a clear idea," "I care nothing for a critic's opinion," were other comments.

One woman replied that she liked both the factual critique and the opinionated kind because "after reading both I know whether I want to see the picture or not." Said another, "Entertaining in the reading, then I can form my own opinion after seeing the picture." "No reviewer yet pours it on enough about every picture being the same old stuff," asserted one man. "Not too much at the expense of the picture," suggested another.

Twenty-six per cent of the woman replied and 20 per cent of the men.

Sixty per cent of the answers came from women, indicating that the preponderance of attendance was by women, even at neighborhood theatres in the evening. Of the women, 72 per cent said they read reviews regularly, 74 per cent were affected in their attendance by reviews. Of the men, only 47 per cent read reviews regularly, with 59 per cent declaring their attendance was more or less determined by them.

An analysis of the relationship between review reading and film attendance in the case of men and women showed that only 37 per cent of the men both read reviews regularly and attended theatres in accordance with them, but this held true of 62 per cent of the women. The conclusion might be drawn, suggested Mr. Webber, that men were less easily affected than women by what they read about pictures. The figures showed also that of the men, .08 per cent read reviews regularly and were not affected; of the women, 11 per cent. Twenty per cent of the men read reviews occasionally and were influenced; 15 per cent of the women. And 35 per cent of the men read occasionally and were not affected at all, while this held true for only 12 per cent of the women.

Eighty-two per cent of the men liked the clear type of review; 18 per cent the clever sort. Of the women, 87 per cent preferred the clear review to the "clever" type.

Twenty per cent of the answers to Mr. Webber's questionnaire were from husbands and wives. Sixty-four per cent of them answered the questions identically.

"This should, but probably doesn't indicate that those who attend movies have very little disagreement at home over relative entertainment values of pictures," said Mr. Webber.

Only two husbands, and only one wife voted for reviews clever at the expense of the picture.

Cards Mailed from Homes

Patrons received cards as they entered or left the theatre. This procedure made it necessary that the cards be taken home, filled in with name and address, and then mailed.

Mr. Webber pointed out that in addition he gave the cards only to those he thought would answer them, and answer them with judgment and sincerity. None went to children or to young folk in noisy groups. He gave special effort to reaching regular patrons.

Twenty per cent of the replies came from husbands and wives.

The persons who answered the cards reside in the southeastern section of Kansas City, probably the city's most typically middle class area, where residents are neither rich nor poor, where there are many homes and few apartments or apartment hotels.

STAGE, MUSIC, FILMS ATTACK ACTOR BILL

Dickstein Hearings Open in Washington; State Legislatures Study New Taxation

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Widely divergent views as to the desirability of the Dickstein Alien Actor Bill were presented before the House Immigration Committee on Wednesday as hearings opened on the measure.

Interrupted by verbal tilts between members, the committee sought to obtain from witnesses information as to the exact number of American actors and artists permitted to appear abroad and the number of foreigners on the American stage.

As the hearing opened, Chairman Dickstein explained that the purpose of the bill is twofold. First, to provide reciprocal exchange of actors, and, second, "to close up a gap in this law under which thousands of hams came in." It is not intended, he said, to keep out artists of distinguished ability.

Most of the first day of the hearing was devoted to hearing witnesses representing the musical world and the legitimate stage, most of whom admitted they knew little about conditions in the film industry. John Seagar, representing the Lambs Club, however, asserted that when he was in Hollywood some four years ago there were a large number of foreigners working for the screen. He was contradicted by Representative Kramer of California, who said that Labor Department figures showed the entry of only a few over a hundred in 1930 and that the number declined thereafter from year to year. At the present time, Mr. Kramer asserted, there are only 61 foreign actors employed and during the past year the eight largest producers made contracts with only 534 aliens.

Also appearing for the Lambs Club, E. J. Blunkil asserted there are 789 legitimate actors on WPA rolls in New York City, but admitted that depression conditions and the gradual waning of the legitimate theatre probably had more to do with this than the usurpation of roles by foreigners.

Opposed to the bill were Lawrence Tibbett and Walter Damrosch. Mr. Tibbett recommended the elimination of the reciprocal provision and substitution of a clause that if any country discriminates against American artists their own talent may be barred from the United States. Mr. Damrosch asserted that the bill would not achieve any practical results and suggested it would be as sensible to require that foreign countries play an American composition for every composition by Brahms, Wagner and other foreign composers played here. The conductor pointed out that the United States is in greater need of foreign artists than the foreign countries are of ours, and, in response to questions by members of the committee, agreed that we produce more films than any other country, the inference being that we need alien talent to greater extent than any foreign producing country.

Members of the committee have revealed that the list of persons desiring to express their views on the bill is the longest they have ever had on a measure of this nature. Included are Charles Pettijohn, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., for which, however, Gabriel Hess, counsel, is expected to make the major presentation: Ed Kuykendall, head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Jean Hersholt, J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president, and Joseph Seidelman, foreign head of Columbia.

AMERICAN FILMS BETTER? COMMONS ANSWERS 'NO'

Angry cries on Tuesday greeted a suggestion in the House of Commons in London that American motion pictures were better than those made in England, the United Press reported.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal leader, asked whether the Board of Trade realized that all of Britain's principal film companies soon would pass into American control. "I have no such information," Dr. Edward Leslie Burglin, Under Secretary of the Board of Trade, replied.

Campbell Stephen, Independent Laborite, from Glasgow, asked:

"Is the Minister aware that United States films are much better than British ones?"

As soon as shouts of "No, No!" died down, Mr. Burglin replied icily:

"I am well informed regarding the British film industry."

Opposition of the MPTOA to any legislaiton which would reduce the available talent supply for Hollywood was voiced by Mr. Kuykendall who told the committee that such a bill would bring about retaliation by foreign theatres and their governments thus precluding the showing of many hundreds of American-made films abroad.

Sabath Probe Upheld

Continuance of his committee investigating bondholders' protective committees is not only desirable but necessary in order that the inquiry may be extended into a number of additional industries, Representative Adolph J. Sabath declared this week.

Outlining the situation for new members of Congress, Mr. Sabath touched only briefly upon the motion picture phase of the investigation in connection with his charge that "collusion by the committees has resulted in the discharging of guarantees, releasing of claims against insiders and outrageous reductions in lease rentals."

"In the Chicago hearings of this committee in November and December," he said, "evidence shows that the prospectus which was sent to the public, urging it to invest in bonds, specifies that the Harding theatre was rented for $135,000 per year. Without consulting the bondholders, however, this rental was reduced first to $100,000, and later, with the sanction and approval of the court, to $25,000. You can form your own conclusions as to what happened to the bonds as a result."

State Legislatures Act

Besides actions before the National Congress in Washington, the industry this week concerned itself with legislative measures introduced or being considered by legislators or legislative committees in the governing bodies of the state. A majority of these called for additional taxation, booth ordinances and affected Sunday shows.

In Colorado it was promised there would be no new tax threats while Connecticut proposed to assess one cent on the first 10 of all admissions. Georgia revealed it would continue to permit Sunday shows while in Kansas a discussion of a 10 per cent tax on amusements was contained in the report of the research department of the Kansas Legislative Council. Louisiana discussed a two per cent tax on gross business and Maryland launched a measure calling for a 10 per cent tax on admissions. Twenty-two measures were revealed as pending before the Massachusetts body and in Nebraska it was proposed to levy a tax of $1,000 on distributors.

An admission tax bill, imposing an assessment of one cent on the first 10 cents, has been introduced in the Connecticut Legislature. In the event of passage and approval by the Governor, the plan would go into effect on July 1, next.

Confusion resulting from a misrepresentation of a ruling of the supreme court of Georgia has been cleared up by J. R. Parhan, who said that the decision would result in Sunday shows in the state. Mr. Parhan explained that the ruling had the effect of approving the American Legion's operation of Sunday performances for charity.

Twenty-two measures affecting the motion picture are now pending before the Massachusetts legislature in Boston, according to a survey of the bills on the present calendar. A number of these would prohibit shows on Sundays and certain holidays and others include the control of projection, legalizing dancing on theatre stages on Sunday, regulation of theatre attendance of minors and the prohibiting of shows on Christmas, Armistice Day and Memorial Day as well as on Sundays. A hearing before the taxation committee on the bill calling for a levy of one cent for every 10 cents or fraction thereof on theatre tickets, as well as on passes, has been postponed indefinitely.

Distributors Face Tax

A proposal to tax distributors $1,000 each annually for licenses to operate in Nebraska has been submitted to the legislature at Lincoln by Senator John Comstock. It is estimated that this will raise $20,000 annually to be administered by the State Railway Commission for the State Assistance Fund. Additional levies before the house call for a tax of one cent on every 10 of admissions and a tax on distributors of 10 per cent of all income derived from the rental or lease of films.

Five measures have been introduced in the Ohio Legislature as follows: extending the three per cent admission tax, banning giveaways, establishing seven per cent tax on admissions over 25 cents, increasing censor fees from $3 to $5 per foot and a footage tax of two cents per lineal foot.

Oregon Tax Proposed

At Portland, Ore., Representative Hogan has introduced a measure calling for a tax of one cent for every 20 cents of admission or fraction thereof. Another measure increases the tax on income two per cent on each $1,000 of taxable income and the tax, instead of starting at one per cent on the first $1,000, starts at two per cent, increases to four per cent on the next $1,000, and on up the scale to a maximum of 10 per cent.

A three per cent gross receipts tax on theatres is included in a bill designed to yield $4,000,000 in additional revenue to cover the Tennessee Social Security program being sponsored by Governor Browning at Nashville. The taxation measure provides an effective date of July 1.

Under a bill introduced in the Washington state legislature by Representative Taylor of King County, theatres in the state would pay an

B&K Fined $15 A Theatre for Chance Games

Arguments on the validity of the Chicago ordinance prohibiting change games in theatres, in an action which stemmed from the conviction of 14 Balaban & Katz corporations and which were to be heard in the Illinois supreme court on Wednesday, headed chance game developments this week. Other activity on the chance game front included minor court cases in New Jersey and Connecticut.

Conviction of the B. & K. corporations, operators of 32 theatres, came last week in municipal court under Judge Sonsteby on charges instituted by the city that the theatres were violating a city ordinance by operating chance games. The defendant theatres, which included such first-run houses as the Tivoli, Granada, Uptown and Will Rogers, were each fined $15.

The circuit immediately moved to obtain a new trial and a hearing of the motion was set for May 3rd in order to permit the state supreme court to pass upon the constitutionality of the ordinance.

Edmund Adcock and Edward Blackman, attorneys for the theatres, are pinning their hopes on an injunction against the city through which they will seek to restrain the police from interfering with prize night drawings. Arguments on this matter were to come before the supreme court on Wednesday.

It was indicated that the city authorities are not deeply interested in the outcome of the actions brought against a number of other theatres in view of the fact that the circuit operators were convicted. The remaining cases were to be heard on Thursday.

In Hackensack, N. J., a temporary order restraining the Bergen County prosecutor from interfering with chance games in theatres was granted Harold Blumenthal, manager of the Ritz, Garfield, by Advisory Master N. Demarest Campbell. The prosecutor in January ordered discontinuance of the games on the ground that they violate anti-gambling regulations. He had given the theatres two weeks to end them.

The appeal of David Magliora of the Rialto, Windsor Locks, Conn., from the conviction and fine in town court on a charge of operating Bank Night on a proxy basis has been set for April 5th in superior court at Hartford.

Empire Union Merger In Discussion Stage

Discussions have been started with a view to a consolidation of the Empire State Operators' Union, a Brooklyn, N. Y., organization, with Local 306 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. An agreement similar to that recently concluded between Local 306 and the Allied Union is sought.

Hanff-Metzger, Inc., advertising agency, after May 1, again will handle the Paramount advertising account, with the company taking offices in the Paramount Building in New York.

"Faked-up females..Half-savage Half-wits..fools...boiled, baked"

For a long time now, in fact ever since Mr. George Bernard Shaw made his disclosures of judgment on the cinema art, the world has been awaiting the opinion of that other younger but somewhat similarly gifted Irish author and dramatist, Mr. St. John Greer Ervine.

Now by the grace of his contribution to a recent issue of the London Observer, Mr. Ervine's judgment is rendered, thus:

"In these times when the chief function of Mayors and Lord Mayors, especially of places like Plymouth and Southampton, seems to be the reception of faked-up females from Hollywood who say their piece about England two seconds after they have landed on its shores for the first time, somebody ought to be blasphemous about cinema persons. I am that somebody. Jazz journalists, a demented crew, seem to think that the rest of us are burst with desire to read about illiterate and half-savage women who have been dragged out of some slum in the Middle West of America or hovels in the Ukraine and, after being boiled and baked and generally pulled and pushed about by manipulative surgeons, are let loose on the screen to the great edification of halfwits of both sexes. A film star, generally speaking, is a fool. I have never met any person of average intelligence who, having come in contact with film stars, does not regard them with contempt . . . "

The institution of the screen is obviously indebted to the gifted Mr. Ervine, not perhaps so much for the intrinsic content of his appreciative comment, as for his exemplification in that paragraph of the virtues of restraint, cultured expression, calm, poised approach and knowledge of the subject, the common attributes of competent writers.

ST. JOHN GREER ERVINE

It chances that this attention most likely will be the first that many persons of the cinema will have heard of Mr. St. John Greer Ervine, and there is an even larger probability that it will be the last. Difficult as it may seem, someway Hollywood and the screen may be able to struggle on without him. —T. R.

SMPE Committee Scores Mutilation of Prints

Continuing its campaign against the mutilation of motion picture release prints, the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at its recent meeting passed a resolution condemning certain devices for cueing prints now on the market. The resolution reads:

"The Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers does not approve of any structural modification, injury, or mutilation of the standard release print by the projectionist, and views with disfavor the sale of devices capable of causing physical damage to film for cue marks or the like. The committee regards cue marking as a function exclusively of the laboratory or exchange which is involved."

Universal has signed Leopold Stokowski, symphony orchestra conductor, to lead his orchestra in "100 Men and a Girl," which will feature Deanna Durbin.

National Decency Legion Classifies 14 New Pictures

Of 14 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in the current week six were approved for general patronage and eight were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The new pictures and their classification follow:

Class A1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Beloved Vagabond," "The Gold Caballero," "Clarence," "Head Over Heels in Love," "Letze Rose" (German), "Ready, Willing and Able." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Le Bonheur" (French), "Everybody Dance," "John Meade's Woman," "Lac-aux-Dames" (French), "Scotland Yard Commands," "Mysteres de Paris" (French, "Verrater" (German), "Ein Walzer um dem Stefansturm" (German).

A jury decided in favor of Pathe News and Courtland Smith last week in the suit brought against them by Arthur G. Montaigne over an alleged breach of contract.

E. J. Ludvigh Dies; Began with Zukor

Elek John Ludvigh, one of the founders of Famous Players Film Company with Adolph Zukor, and later general counsel of Paramount Publix Corporation, died at his home in New York at 2:30 Wednesday morning from bronchial pneumonia. He had suffered a cerebral thrombosis last September and since that time had been confined to his home. His widow, Mrs. Rene Ludvigh, survives.

Born in New York 68 years ago, Mr. Ludvigh was educated in the public schools and graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1891. Four years later he was admitted to the New York Bar. He then entered the private practice of law and was a New York State Civil Service Commissioner from 1910 to 1912.

At this time, Mr. Ludvigh had been handling law business for the Marcus Loew Enterprises and for Daniel Frohman. He had also attended to certain legal affairs for Mr. Zukor, and when Mr. Zukor, now chairman of the board of what has grown to be Paramount, created Famous Players Film Company he called on Mr. Ludvigh to become a partner in the enterprise, handling all his legal matters.

Up to 1924, Mr. Ludvigh also had handled other legal business, but in that year he gave up his private practice to become general counsel of Paramount. Two years later he was made a member of the board of directors and he remained with the company until January, 1932, when he resigned and sailed for a long European vacation. On his return he again went into the private practice of law, in which he continued until last September.

John Barrymore Files Under Bankruptcy Act

John Barrymore filed a debtor's petition of bankruptcy under Section 74 of the National Bankruptcy Act in the federal court at Los Angeles on Tuesday. He said he was unable to meet his debts as they matured and desired to effect "composition or extension of time" to liquidate them.

Attaches of the court explained that under the law, if Mr. Barrymore's plan for the adjustment of his debts is accepted, he does not go into bankruptcy. The law, they said, provides that a debtor may call his creditors into court and offer part payment on a percentage basis, or obtain an extension of time in which to make full payments.

Distributors Accused Of Price Discrimination

Charging seven distributors and two individuals with price discrimination, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Gore of the Broadway theatre, Tampa, Fla., filed a petition for an injunction on Wednesday in the United States district court at Atlanta, Ga. Judge B. S. Beaver took the case under advisement. The defendants are United Theatres, Inc., a Florida circuit operated by E. J. Sparks, and Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Universal and RKO Radio.

Decision Is Withheld In A. B. Momand Action

Arguments were presented Tuesday to the United States circuit court of appeals in Denver in the action of A. B. Momand of Oklahoma City against distributors and theatre companies, Mr. Momand appealing from the order of the United States district court of Oklahoma dismissing the case because Mr. Momand would not amend his petition as ordered. Mr. Momand is asking the court to order trial of the case on its merits. The action covers about 25 theatres in some 12 Oklahoma towns and charges distributors and theatre companies with restraint of trade and violation of anti-trust laws. Decision is not expected for several weeks.

Leases Pathe Studios

Selznick International this week took a long-term lease on the 60-acre studio plant of RKO-Pathe in Hollywood in an expansion move to provide for a $12,000,000 program for the coming year. The studio will bear the name Selznick International Pictures Studios and immediately will undergo remodeling to include executive offices, sound stages and dressing rooms. The company has also acquired an additional 40 acres in the Baldwin Hills behind the studio.

Erpi Elects Treasurers

Charles Olajos and Robert A. Quin have been elected assistant treasurers of Electrical Research Products, Inc., by the board of directors. Mr. Olajos, in New York, will have charge of financial matters, and Mr. Quinn, at Los Angeles, will handle contact, credit and financial matters arising at that point.

Empire Hearing Set

A further hearing in receivership proceedings of Empire Laboratories, Inc., is scheduled for February 26 at the Post Office Building in Jersey City, N. J. Referee John Grimshaw, Jr., has ordered all creditors and parties in interest to appear and show cause why an order should not be made directing sale, either private or public, of the remaining assets of the company.

Paramount Plans To Keep Partners

Paramount's theatre operations may be placed on a permanently localized basis, without exception, with the negotiation early next month of a new and presumably permanent operating agreement with A. H. Blank for the approximately 40 houses in his Illinois and Iowa circuit, it was said in New York this week.

The present operating agreement with Mr. Blank expires March 6 and is the only remaining contract with a Paramount theatre partner which retains an option under which the company may repurchase from the operator his 50 per cent interest in the theatre company. Indications are that in the forthcoming negotiations Paramount will either relinquish its buy-back privilege, thus putting the partnership operation with Mr. Blank on a permanent basis, or will extend the present agreement for a long term period, in preference to the short term extensions which have been granted from time to time since the inception of the agreement two and one-half years ago.

Mr. Blank is expected in New York in about two weeks to confer with Paramount home office officials on the new agreement. The so-called buying back deals were negotiated during the Paramount reorganization period for five or six of the company's most important circuits. Paramount deals, however, were worked out one by one following the company's emergence from reorganization in 1935, until at this time only the Blank deal continues subject to the company's option to recover the operator's 50 per cent stock interest. The last operating deal to be placed on a permanent basis by Paramount was that with Karl Hoblitzelle. Last December, Paramount relinquished its buy-back privilege to Mr. Hoblitzelle for $600,000, and the operations were continued on a 50-50 ownership basis, as in the case of the operating agreements for the company's other first rank theatre units.

Press Protests Ban on Picture

The Cleveland News in an editorial appearing in its issue for February 13th attacked the Ohio board of censors for banning the Amkino film, "Spain in Flames." The editorial said in part:

"Whether such films represent communistic or fascistic bias, there appears to be no cogent reason why they should not be shown, in accordance with one of the most important American beliefs—the belief in free circulation of opinion, which more than anything else distinguishes us from both communists and fascists."

Roy Reichelfelder, supervisor of the division of censorship, defending the board's action said: "We believe that it was not in accord with the policy of neutrality adopted by this country to allow exhibition of a film which takes one side or another in a civil war of another nation. We believe the showing of this picture might have harmful effects."

U.S. Shipped 10,000,000 More Feet Of Film in 1936 Than in 1935

Exports of Hollywood motion pictures to 101 markets in 1936 compared with 1935 as follows:

1936	Feet	Value	1935	Feet	Value
Negative silent....	2,143,939	$ 92,167	Negative silent....	3,025,950	$ 179,865

HOLLYWOOD EXPORTS REACH SIX-YEAR HIGH

Increase of Ten Million Feet of Film to 101 Markets, Says Commerce Department

Hollywood's motion pictures now reach 101 markets in the world. American motion picture exports for 1936 show a 10,000,000 feet increase in negative and positive sound and silent films over those exported during 1935, according to Nathan D. Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Section of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. For the year 1936, a total of 209,651,404 linear feet of motion picture film, with a declared value of $4,531,639, were exported to 101 markets as compared with 199,690,621 linear feet, valued at $4,597,339 for 1935. The 1936 exports of film are the largest since 1930, when 270,000,000 feet of film were exported.

During 1936, exports of negative and positive sound film to the ten leading markets were in the following order:

Argentina, as in 1935, was the largest consumer of American motion pictures in point of footage. During 1936, 18,085,518 linear feet of American motion pictures, with a declared value of $323,988 were imported, as compared with 17,065,229 feet, valued at $327,965 during 1935.

Second in point of footage, but still our best revenue producing market, is the United Kingdom, importing during 1936, 18,071,389 feet valued at $525,031 as compared with 15,874,353 feet with a value of $476,392 during 1935.

Brazil again maintains third position as a leading consumer of American pictures. During 1936, importing 12,785,110 feet of films from the United States valued at $252,655 as compared with 11,568,669 feet, valued at $247,125 for the year 1935. Fourth market of importance is Panama. During 1936, 9,823,975 feet of American motion pictures were taken by Panama with a value of $123,126 as against 9,944,990 feet valued at $133,362 during the year 1935.

Fifth important importer of American motion pictures during 1936 was Mexico, consuming 8,911,061 feet of film, valued at $284,968 as compared with 5,010,762 feet valued at $234,181 for the year 1935.

The next five leading markets for American motion pictures in 1936 are listed in the following table:

COUNTRY	NO. OF FEET	VALUE
France	8,163,358	$178,949
British West Indies.......	7,161,528	25,802
Australia	5,885,000	132,951
Cuba	5,445,359	107,600
Spain	5,793,805	123,749

Export of sensitized not exposed motion picture films were for the first time broken down by various widths, during 1936. The following table does not indicate comparative figures by breakdown for 1935, but does, however, give the totals for all widths.

	1936		1935
Less than 1 inch width	Feet	Value	Feet	Value
	33,365,406	$550,384	....	....
Over 1 inch width
Positive...	170,623,461	$1,794,351	....	....
	80,330,101	2,014,909	....	....
Total......	284,318,968	$3,349,644	132,837,545	$2,616,709

Mr. Golden pointed out that during 1936, motion picture equipment exports have shown an upward trend. During the fiscal year just finished, a total of 1,454 motion picture projectors of 35 mm. standard gauge, with a value of $383,078, were exported to all markets as compared with 1,243 projectors valued at $353,216 for the year 1935. Sub-standard, or 16 mm. gauge projector exports to all markets during 1936, show a remarkable increase of over 5,000 projectors. During 1936, 7,388 projectors of this type valued at $304,278 were exported as against 1,981 projectors valued at $124,933 during 1935.

Sound motion picture equipment exports during 1936 have increased over $600,000. During this period $2,105,288 worth of American motion picture reproducing and recording equipment was exported to all foreign markets as against $1,482,281 worth during the year 1935, Mr. Golden advises.

PARAMOUNT REFUNDING ON $15,000,000 ISSUE

Columbia and Eastman Declare Dividends; Warner Refinancing Plans Are Delayed

Motion picture financial developments of the week included Paramount Pictures' announcement of plans for refunding, dividend declarations by Columbia Pictures and Eastman Kodak, abandonment of refinancing plans by Warner Brothers, disposal of Technicolor shares by the Atlas investment trust, and the issuance of earnings reports by Heywood-Wakefield and the Roxy Theatre, New York.

The board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., at its meeting on Tuesday, authorized the creation of an issue of $15,000,000 of 3¼% convertible debentures, dated as of March 1, 1937, and due March 1, 1947. The debentures will be convertible until five days prior to redemption date or maturity into common stock of the corporation at $33⅓ per share until March 1, 1942, and thereafter until February 23, 1947, at $40 per share. The debentures are redeemable in whole or in part at any time upon at least 30 days published notice, at par plus accrued interest.

The three and one-quarter per cent convertible debentures will be issued pursuant to an indenture between the corporation and the Manufacturers Trust Company, of New York City, as trustee, which will provide, among other things, for annual sinking fund payments to the trustee commencing April 15, 1941; the sinking fund payments to be 15 per cent of the consolidated net earnings of the corporation, as defined in the indenture, for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year 1940. The indenture will provide that the sinking fund payments may be made in cash or in debentures, with a credit to the sinking fund of the amount of debentures converted into common after December 31, 1939.

The corporation will offer to the holders of its present 20-year six per cent sinking fund debentures, the right to exchange as of March 1, 1937, without adjustment of interest, an equal face amount of such six per cent debentures for the new three and one-quarter per cent debentures. The right to exchange will expire March 9, 1937.

There were originally issued $24,998,182 of the 6 per cent debentures, of which $2,376,000 are held in the company's treasury. It is expected that the unexchanged balance of this issue will be retired from earnings in due course.

In the event that more than $15,000,000 in principal amount of the six per cent debentures are presented for exchange, the exchange will be substantially on a prorata basis.

The corporation holds in its treasury $2,376,000 of the six per cent debentures, which will not be exchanged under the offer.

Scrip or fractions for new debentures in denominations of less than $100 will not be issued, nor will the holders of scrip for the present debentures participate in the exchange. The 20-year six per cent debentures which are exchanged pursuant to the offer, will not be reissued by the corporation, but will either be cancelled or tendered from time to time for retirement through the sinking fund under the present indenture with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, as trustee.

The corporation announced that there is no underwriting or payment of commissions by the Corporation in connection with the proposed exchange.

CENSORS RETALIATE OVER BALCONY SEATS

The censor board of Seattle, which recently asked for front row seats and got only accommodations in the balcony from Mrs. Cecilia Schultz, operator, this week retaliated by bluntly demanding private previews of all shows booked by Mrs. Schultz into her house. They asked the City Council to warn Mrs. Schultz that her license might be revoked if she failed to comply.

The fight started over a recent performance in Mrs. Schultz's theatres of the Ballet Russe of Monte Carlo. The theatre refused the censors front row seats on the ground it was required by law to furnish only "proper" seats. The City Attorney held that back-row balcony seats were "proper."

Paramount may save in interest charges, through a maximum exercise of the exchange right, approximately $410,000 per year. Earlier refunding of old six per cent obligations of English and studio subsidiaries at lower interest rates, increase the company's total savings from its refunding program to approximately $750,000 annually.

Columbia Pictures' board of directors declared a quarterly cash dividend of 25 cents per share on the corporation's common stock, payable April 1st to the stockholders and voting trust certificate holders of record on March 18th.

Directors of Eastman Kodak Company, one of the largest manufacturers of motion picture raw stock, voted a dividend of $1.50 per share on the common stock, payable April 2nd to stockholders of record on March 5th. Previously the company paid $1.25 quarterly with occasional extras in 1936.

Warners' Plan Delayed

Warner Brothers' abrupt move of last week in canceling plans for offering of common stock, was followed on Monday by further indications that the refunding will not be discussed for at least another few months. Company officials were quoted as explaining that there is no immediate need for new money as Warners' funded debt is gradually being liquidated. The original, abandoned proposal with Hayden, Stone and Company provided for the realization of $50,000,000 at four and one-half per cent to replace existing six per cent obligations. It was understood that Hayden, Stone's underwriting was to embrace some 925,000 shares of new common to be offered in the ratio of one share for four to Warner stockholders at the reported tentative price of $12.50 a share.

"The decline in Warner common to around 15 following the announcement of the proposed plan caused the bankers and the company to conclude to abandon the offering particularly since the management of the company are said to have been reluctant to sell new shares at less than $12.50," according to Wall Street Journal. "Warner is in no immediate need of funds," continued the Journal. "Proceeds from the offering were to have been used to clean up certain current payables and serial bonds falling due in the current year. This operation was to have been followed by a permanent refinancing of the company's $31,490,000 six per cent debentures at a lower interest rate. No immediate action toward reviving the financial arrangements is expected for the time being."

Predicated on the suspension last week of stock exchange trading in the common stock of Warner Brothers, the Securities and Exchange Commission this week dispatched to brokers a formal questionnaire asking details of the trading of last Tuesday and Wednesday, days during which the suspension was in effect. Trading on those days was stopped following the publication of a Warner statement saying that the company would issue no additional common stock.

Heywood-Wakefield Report

The annual report to stockholders of Heywood-Wakefield Company, issued as of December 31 reveals that: "Net sales for the year exceeded by 38 per cent the volume of sales billed for the previous year. Operations resulted in a net profit of $548,177, (this comparing with $105,565 for the year 1935) after provision for all charges, including Federal taxes.

"The consolidated balance sheet shows a net working capital of $2,957,974, compared with $2,794,887 a year ago. Receivables and inventories increased $964,748 during the period to serve the demands of an expanding volume of business. The additional employment of working capital, combined with requirements for property expenditure and cash used for the extinguishment of preferred dividends in arrears, necessitated bank borrowings of $150,000 in cash, the amount outstanding at the close of the year."

Capital expenditures during the year amounted to $283,600, the principal item representing construction of a boiler plant at the factory in Gardner, Mass. Miscellaneous adjustments, represented chiefly by the undepreciated value of plant and machinery abandoned during the year, amount to $32,320.

The comparative balance sheet shows total current assets of $3,550,474.14 as compared to $2,951,117.12 during 1935. Total assets are $7,389,878.32 which compares with last year's figure of $6,660,676.16. Surplus as of Dec. 31 is given at $1,725,128.05.

Roxy Theatre Net

Howard S. Cullman, trustee for the Roxy Theatre, New York presented to United States District Court Judge Caffey a report for the 27 weeks beginning July 3 and ending January 7 which shows a net profit, excluding depreciation and interest on funded indebtedness, of $97,726. The weekly average profit, the report states, has been $3,619.

The attendance total has been 2,267,079; daily average attendance, 11,995; average rental per picture, $6,826.

Admissions totalled $961,532; operating expenses, $445,274, plus $329,389 as other operating expenses, maing the total $774,664. Film rentals totalled $195,174.

Interstate Moves Offices

Interstate Checking Service has moved its New York quarters from the Paramount Building to the Candler Building. The company is studying a new type of checking plan.

Jerry O'Connor has been promoted from the GB non-theatrical department to the sales office. Mr. O'Connor has been assigned to the company's Cleveland branch.

George Jessel has signed with Mervyn LeRoy as an associate in production. He joins the former Warner director's unit on April 15.

PHILCO TAKES POLE IN TELEVISION PUBLICITY RACE WITH 441 LINE TEST

High Definition Transmission Is Demonstrated at Philadelphia; RCA Engineers Conducting Private Tests

In the marathon to attract public attention to television developments Philco Radio and Television Corporation shouldered ahead last week with a demonstration of high definition transmission. Radio Corporation of America engineers have been conducting private tests with the new technique but have delayed giving a public exhibition.

Transmission under the old method, which used a definition of 345 lines per frame, was demonstrated by Philco on August 12th and by RCA in New York the first week in November. Both companies announced at those demonstrations that the sets would be dismantled and equipped for a definition of 441 lines, the standard recommended by the Radio Manufacturers Association and supposed to produce clearer images free from flickering.

Week's Developments

Predictions of the proximity of practical television for the home are tempered with statements by manufacturers that they will not risk the public sale of apparatus until it is so perfected that radical changes at short intervals will not be necessary. The technical difficulties of establishing networks and the cost of laying coaxial cables to connect stations are still in the way of regularly scheduled broadcasts on a commercial basis.

In addition to the RCA tests and the Philco demonstration, developments in the field include:

In England, where two methods of transmission have been under test for several months, the Postmaster General has selected the Marconi-EMI system for the exclusive use of the British Broadcasting Corporation. The second system was the Baird method.

The Farnsworth Television Corporation in Philadelphia has received a permit from the Federal Communications Commission and is planning regular experimental broadcasts. The company has designed new receivers which will be distributed for tests to competent amateurs in the city. The transmitter has been equipped for directional broadcasting in order to lessen interference.

On the West Coast the Don Lee-Mutual radio network has inaugurated a new series of weekly television tests which go out over ten stations. The tests are said to be the first television network broadcasts.

The Philco demonstration was a 55-minute program from the company's studios which was viewed on six receiving sets at the Germantown Cricket Club, about three miles away, by 200 publishers and editors of newspapers and magazines.

The purpose of the demonstration, as announced by officials, was to show the improvement in images at the reception end obtained through the use of a scanning definition of 441 lines, the standard proposed for the United States by the television committee of the Radio Manufacturers Association. The chief criticism at the previous demonstrations were that the images were blurred and of a greenish tinge.

PHILCO-RCA SUIT ARGUED IN COURT

The Chancery Court in Wilmington, Del., on Wednesday and Thursday heard arguments in the action brought by the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, parent company of the Philco Radio & Television Corporation, against Radio Corporation of America. Philco seeks an injunction to restrain RCA from terminating a licensing agreement giving Philco the right to use RCA basic radio patents. The argument was heard by Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott.

Clarity Disputed

At the Philco show last week the images were black and white but reports differed on the clarity of the reproductions. Philadelphia newspaper reports emphasized the great improvement noticed when the engineers compared the two methods by switching the apparatus, and pointed out that the second hand of a watch held before the transmitting camera had been scarcely distinquishable under the old definition but was easily discernable under the new.

New York newspapers, however, reported that persons who saw both demonstrations said that there was very little improvement in the clarity of the reproductions, although the new pictures could be seen clearly at a distance of ten feet from the receiving set. At the first demonstration a little over five feet was the maximum distance for clear vision.

Continual Fading Cited

The New York Herald-Tribune added:

"Engineers of the company pointed out, however, that the improvement in transmission quality with the use of more lines a picture could not be noticed by the casual observer unless he had an opportunity to observe both pictures side by side."

Continual fading, blamed by the engineers on defects in the coaxial cable used to carry the program from the studio to the broadcasting station, and uncertain lighting also were reported to have marred a fair test of the 441 line definition.

Wide Band Used

The program included stills of Glenda Farrell, of newspaper print, a dollar bill showing the serial number, a two-way conversion between a member of the viewing party and a station announcer, songs by a girl, a motion picture newsreel and a musical short subject, and a fashion show. A six megacycle band in the 42-86 megacycle range was used for the broadcasts.

The use of the wide six megacycle band was said by Philco engineers to be important because with a scanning definition of 441 lines the channel used for broadcasting must be wide enough to carry waves which will reproduce the fine details in a picture.

Postmaster General in England Selects Marconi-EMI System for Exclusive Use of British Broadcasting

In discussing the technical aspects of the new definition, Albert F. Murray, head of the Philco television laboratory, said, "The quality of the picture depends on the fidelity of the system."

"It is the quality of the picture in the observer's home that really counts at this stage of television development," he continued. "This means that not only are 441-line systems needed, but high fidelity 441-line systems are required to really interest the customer when commercial television finally arrives."

None of the officers or engineers of the company would hazard any prediction as to how soon television will be available for home use. Sayre M. Ramsdell, Philco vice-president, said that as certainly as he could predict that Christmas would arrive on December 25th, he was more certain that we would not have commercial television in 1937. The consensus among the viewing party was that unless television is still a dark trade secret, many a Christmas will pass before television will be the vogue.

RCA Engineers Claim Success

Engineers of RCA and National Broadcasting Corporation who are conducting the New York tests of high definition television say that they have been successful in broadcasts from the station in the tower of the Empire State Building. The images scanned by the iconoscope, the pickup tube, at the rate of 441 lines a frame, have been received on sets in the homes of the engineers and technicians but no public or press demonstration has been given of sets using the high definition.

That financing difficulties are among the obstacles to be overcome before television is a commercial possibility was indicated by Don Gilman, NBC vice-president in charge of West Coast operations, who in a luncheon address at the Commonwealth Club, San Francisco, said: "When it gets under way television will require the largest investment any single industry has ever known."

Coordination Factor

Pointing also to the technical difficulties still involved in establishing networks, the radio official said that NBC will not attempt to offer television to the public for some time. He denied that large scale manufacturers of radio sets have opposed introduction of television.

"I have yet to meet a manufacturer who would not accept gladly an opportunity to sell a new product at any time," he said.

The lag between experimental and commercial operation of television Mr. Gilman ascribed to the fact that, unlike radio, in television receiving and transmitting sets must be coordinated.

"Every single improvement in a television transmitter means rebuilding it," he said. "Changes will follow one another rapidly during the next year or so, and every change means an entirely new receiving set if the image is to be picked up at all."

23,000 ACTORS AND MUSICIANS IN PWA

And Musicians Outnumber Actors Four to One on Federal Works Program

Nearly 23,000 actors and musicians have been found among the 6,402,171 persons eligible for works program theatrical employment, it was disclosed this week in Washington in a report by Harry Hopkins, Public Works Administrator, based on an occupational survey just completed by the PWA.

Musicians outnumbered actors four to one, there being 18,219 musicians against 4,674 actors. Musicians comprised the second largest among the 21 groups listed as professional and technical workers, being exceeded in number only by teachers.

A breakdown of the report showed that of the actors 2,796 were male and 1,878 female. Among the musicians, 13,319 were male and 4,900 female.

The greatest number of actors was registered in New York, 2,050; California was second, with 1,100, and Massachusetts was third with 368. Only four other states, Ohio with 174, Illinois with 163, Pennsylvania with 160 and New Jersey with 123, reported more than 100 actors on their rolls, but actors were included on the roll of every state with the single exception of South Dakota.

With respect to musicians, New York reported 4,576 and California 2,984. Every state listed musicians, Nevada being at the bottom with 13.

Actors on PWA rolls, as shown by the report, were divided among the states as follows:

STATE	TOTAL
Alabama	15
Arizona	7
Arkansas	4
California	1100
Colorado	21
Connecticut	22
Delaware	4
District of Columbia	7
Florida	30
Georgia	18
Idaho	3
Illinois	163
Indiana	33
Iowa	13
Kansas	6
Kentucky	4
Louisiana	47
Maine	13
Maryland	9
Massachusetts	368
Michigan	36
Minnesota	32
Mississippi	7
Missouri	36
Montana	3
Nebraska	55
Nevada	3
New Hampshire	2
New Jersey	123
New Mexico	3
New York	2050
North Carolina	4
North Dakota	2
Ohio	174
Oklahoma	3
Oregon	9
Pennsylvania	160
Rhode Island	9
South Carolina	1
Texas	11
Utah	4
Vermont	4
Virginia	6
Washington	23
West Virginia	2
Wisconsin	16
Wyoming	3

South Carolina showed only one individual in the list, New Hampshire, North Dakota and West Virginia two each.

Poster Renters Will Oppose Warner Move

"Members of the National Poster Service Association will counteract Warners' move to rent posters and other advertising displays," a director of the organization said in New York this week. "We will do the same with Warners as we did with Paramount when it inaugurated the plan last year," he continued. "Paramount has not hurt our business and neither will Warners."

Next month, members of the independent poster renting companies throughout the country will hold a three-day convention in New York to discuss the latest distributor move. National Poster has its own process company, known as Associated Displays, which manufactures advertising material for all productions.

W. C. D. Carr, Pioneer Director, Is Dead

William C. D. Carr, pioneer motion picture director and husband of Mary Carr, character actress, died in Hollywood late last week at the age of 70. Mr. Carr began his film career as an actor with the old Lubin Company in Philadelphia in 1907. The cause of death was given as advanced age and grief over the passing of his eldest sister, Luella Carr Walsh, an actress, about four weeks ago.

Canada to Drop Duty On School Pictures

The Canadian Government is preparing to provide for the free entry of motion pictures of an educational nature intended exclusively for use in primary and secondary schools. The plan involves the signing of a reciprocal agreement with other interested countries for the interchange of appropriate films. At present the Dominion is conducting a survey into the present and prospective use of motion pictures in schools.

University Adds Films To Regular Courses

The University of Illinois has announced plans to add a course in motion pictures to its regular curriculum. As part of the requirement of the course, students will attend theatres and write comparisons of the picture seen with the dramas, novels, biographies or history on which the pictures seen were based.

Expect Start of Hearings on RKO

With an initial legal victory established over Orpheum Circuit preferred stockholders who contested RKO's acquisition of Orpheum assets and sought to oppose the RKO reorganization plan, proponents of the plan were said this week to see their way clear to beginning federal court hearings of RKO creditors on the reorganization plan.

As a result, indications are that there will be no further postponement of the creditors' hearing, which is now set for this week before Federal Judge William Bondy in Manhattan, after having been postponed three times since the filing of the plan with the court last November. The status of the plan was affected by the outcome of the Orpheum stockholders' opposition but, with Referee Oscar Ehrhorn's decisions last week, Orpheum's place in the RKO reorganization was clarified sufficiently to warrant proceeding with the creditors' hearings on the RKO plans.

Referee Ehrhorn advocated acceptance of RKO's offer to acquire the Orpheum assets and denied petitions by the Orpheum stockholders to permit Orpheum to intervene in the RKO reorganization proceedings and to file objections to the RKO plan. Indications now are that the principal objection to the RKO plan will come from the general creditors' committee and a committee of independent stockholders, with particular fire being directed at the plan's provisions for the settlement of the Rockefeller Center claim against RKO. The plan proposed to grant 500,000 shares of new RKO common stock to satisfy the $9,150,000 Rockefeller Center claim, and in consideration for new operating agreements for the Music Hall and Center in which RKO would participate in the earnings.

Block Booking Protested By Ohio Pastors Group

Block booking and "blind selling" were condemned in a report of the motion picture committee of the Ohio Council of Churches which was submitted at the annual pastors' convention in Columbus. The practices were condemned as policies which "by all the rules of fairness to the exhibitor and the public and eventually to the producer, should be abolished by legislation."

The report commended the motion picture industry for "the very obvious improvement in the quality, both dramatic and moral, of many screen productions."

Recording Discussed At Meeting of Erpi

New recording methods, advancements in technical developments and new roadshow equipment for the showing of 35mm. non-theatrical material were discussed last week in the course of the three-day semi-annual conference of district managers and superintendents at the home office of Electrical Research Products, Inc. The meeting was under the direction of G. L. Carrington, operating manager. Present were: S. W. Johnson, Obie Hunt, A. Fiore, W. W. Simons, A. J. Rademacher, W. S. Weatherspoon, J. A. Cameron, P. Jones, B. L. Turner, A. S. Lyman, J. L. Patton and A. A. Ward.

RKO RADIO PICTURES

Selznick Expanding

Requiring additional space and facilities to accommodate its $12,000,000 1937 production program, Selznick International Pictures, Inc., assumed full control of RKO Pathe Studio and its 60 acres of property in Culver City on February 11. In addition to the studio property the company also took over 40 acres in the rear of the site in Baldwin Hills. The enlarged plant will bear the name of Selznick International Production Studios.

The biggest major physical expansion made by the company since its exception a little more than a year ago was made necessary, according to Henry Goldberg, general manager, to secure more space and buildings to take care of greatly increased production schedules. The newly acquired property will undergo a program of up-to-date remodeling. Present stages, executive buildings and dressing rooms will be renovated and new buildings erected.

Independent producers Sol Lesser, George Hirliman and David L. Loew, now operating in the studio, are expected to seek new quarters.

Lesser Optimistic

Sol Lesser, just back in Hollywood from an extended tour of Europe, was impressed most by the production situation in England.

"England has tried to do in five years," says Lesser, "what it has taken thirty-five years to do in America. Though the financial stability of most British producers is sound the London studios have been terrifically handicapped by lack of talent. This includes technical production talent as well as actors, writers, producers and directors.

"However, I believe that effort is being made to correct the more serious mistakes of the past and in my opinion more system will be used in British production in the future."

Mr. Lesser expressed optimism as to the prospects of European distribution of American films during the coming year. He believes that American producers will find an expanded market for their product on the continent for 1937-38.

During his stay abroad, the producer signed Oscar Strauss to compose the score of the next Bobby Breen picture. The Viennese composer will leave for America in March and is due in Hollywood before April 1.

Start 9; Finish 12

Nine pictures went into production and twelve were finished as tapering off of the influenza epidemic enabled Hollywood studios to catch up on shooting schedules. Product on both sides of the firing line is of mixed character and sponsorship.

Republic embarked upon two pictures. The more ambitious of the two, "The Hit Parade," to which a $500,000 budget is reported to have been allotted, is a musical romance featuring a topical personality talent revue. It will feature Phil Regan, Frances Langford, Sammy White, Louise Henry, Pert Kelton, Monroe Owsley, Max Terhune, Pierre Watkin, J. Farrell MacDonald, Edward Brophy, George Givot, the Tick Tock Girls, Duke Ellington and his band, Eddie Duchin, Al Pearce and his gang, Molasses and January and Peggy Bernier. Gus Meins, long with Hal Roach, is directing. "Get Along Little Dogies," a western, will present Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Judith Allen, Weldon Hayburn and Frankie Marvin. Joseph Kane is directing.

STUDIOS WELCOME THEATRE VIEWPOINT

Recent visits of Paramount and RKO theatre executives to the studios, followed by alteration of plans to fit forthcoming films more snugly to public demand as analyzed from the theatre viewpoint, are expected to result in more or less general standardization of periodic conferences between production and exhibition representatives at the product source.

Plans being discussed would bring RKO theatre men to Hollywood at quarterly intervals.

Final outcome of the development may be the foreshortening of time lapse between first hand analysis of patron requirement and its fulfillment on the screen dreamed of, until now a little mistily, since the passing of overnight, from-the-cuff split-reelers.

Columbia Starts Two

Two pictures also were started by Columbio. "The Devil Is Driving," which Harry Lachman directs, stars Richard Dix with Joan Perry and Nana Bryant, Elisha Cooke, Jr., Henry Kolker, Walter Kingsford, Ann Rutherford and John Wray. In "Venus Makes Trouble," comedy romance, James Dunn, Patricia Ellis, Gene Morgan, Astrid Allwyn and Thurston Hall will appear. Gordon Wiles is directing.

"Fly Away Baby" started at Warners. The cast lists Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane, Hugh O'Connell, Marcia Ralston, Gordon Oliver, Raymond Hatton and Tom Kennedy. Frank McDonald is the director. Featuring John Boles and Doris Nolan, Universal started "As Good As Married," a romance with music, which Eddie Buzzell directs. The support includes Ernest Cossart, Walter Pidgeon and Mary Phillips, with more names to be added.

MGM elected to start "Night Must Fall," a picturization of a realistic European thrill drama. Only Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell are familiar to film fans. The supporting cast is made up of British players who presented the play on British stages. They are Dame Mary Whitty, Kathleen Harrison, Merle Tottenham and Matthew Boulton. Richard Thorpe is directing.

Although the cast is far from complete, 20th Century-Fox started "Think Fast, Mr. Moto." Based on a Saturday Evening Post story in which the central character is a suave and sinister Japanese, the film will feature Peter Lorre, Virginia Field, Thomas Beck, Sig Rumann and John Rogers. Norman Foster is directing.

"Gold," a George Hirliman feature for Grand National release, went into production. The cast includes Conrad Nagel, Eleanor Hunt, Fuzzy Knight, Charles Delaney, Ed LeSaint, Karl Hackett, Warner Richmond, Paul Wiegel, W. L. Thorne and A. Smith. Louis Gasnier is directing.

Warners Finish Four

Warners accounted for four of the finished pictures. "Miracle Mountain" will present Dick Foran, Helen Valkis, John Merton, Glen Strange, Mira McKinney, Henry Otho and Wilfred Lucas. Noel Smith directed. "Dance, Charlie, Dance," features Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Charles Foy, James Robbins, Gordon Hart, Hugh O'Connell, Joseph Crehan and Veda Ann Borg. Frank McDonald directed. In "Public Wedding" Jane Wyman, Marie Wilson, Dick Purcell, Raymond Hatton, William Hopper, Berton Churchill and Zeni Vatori will be seen. Nick Grinde directed. "Talent Scout," which Louis King directed, will present Donald Woods, Jeanne Madden, Fred Lawrence, Rosalind Marquis, Joseph Crehan and Charles Halton.

Two productions were completed at 20th Century-Fox. "50 Roads From Town" will present Don Ameche, Ann Sothern, Slim Summerville, Allan Lane, Jane Darwell, John Qualen, Douglas Fowley, Stepin Fetchit, Paul Hurst and Spencer Charters. Norman Taurog directed. Names in "That I May Live" are Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent, J. Edward Bromberg, DeWitt Jennings, James Flavin, Mary Gordon, Fred Kelsey, Frank McGlynn, Jr., Gloria Roy and Baby Mondshine. Allan Dwan directed.

"The Last Of Mrs. Cheney" finished at MGM. The cast includes Joan Crawford, William Powell, Robert Montgomery, Frank Morgan, Jessie Ralph, Nigel Bruce, Colleen Clare, Benita Hume, Ralph Forbes, Aileen Pringle, Melville Cooper, Leonard Carey, Sarah Haden, Wallis Clarke, Lumsden Hare and Barnett Parker. The picture, which was started by Richard Boleslawski, was finished by George Fitzmaurice.

Paramount checked in "Murder Goes To College." The long cast includes Roscoe Karns, Marsha Hunt, Lynne Overman, Astrid Allwyn, Harvey Stephens, Larry Crabbe, Purnell Pratt, Charles Wilson, Terry Ray and Nick Lukats. Charles Riesner directed.

Two films came off the line at Universal. "When Love Is Young" will offer Virginia Bruce, Kent Taylor, Walter Brennan, Jean Rogers, David Oliver, Jack Smart, Greta Meyer, Sterling Halloway and William Tanner. Hal Mohr directed. "We Have Our Moments" lists Sally Eilers, James Dunn, David Nevin, Mischa Auer, Warren Hymer, Marjorie Gateson, Virginia Sale, Thurston Hall, Grady Sutton and Raymond Brown. Alfred Werker directed.

Crescent Pictures completed "The Louisiana Purchase." Tom Keane is featured with Rita Cansino, Robert Fiske, Raphael Bennett, Allan Cavan and Bud Buster. I. V. Willat directed.

VIRGINIA EXHIBITORS ELECT W. S. WILDER

MPTOA Board Is Expected to Reelect Kuykendall; Allied Outlines Legislative Aims

Activity in exhibitor organizations this week was centered on plans for spring conventions. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will meet in Miami on March 16th and general committees have been appointed to carry out the plans. Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, preparing for its annual session in Milwaukee in May, has published a pamphlet outlining the organization's federal and state legislative aims. The MPTO of Virginia had its yearly convention in Richmond last week.

Reelection of Edward Kuykendall as president of the MPTOA for another year is expected when the board of directors convenes in Miami in advance of the convention. While Mr. Kuykendall has insisted that he has not decided whether he will be a candidate, it is known that the organization has not considered any alternate for the post.

Invitations have been sent to all Hollywood studios to send executives, stars and directors to the gathering. Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount, has indicated that he will attend, as have Carole Lombard, Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye and others.

Committee Chairmen

The following have been named by Mitchell Wolfson, general chairman of convention arrangements, to head the various committees:

Robert C. Frost, Olympia theatre, Miami, reception; O. C. Lam, Rome, Georgia, registration; Gus Grist, Sheridan theatre, Miami, housing; Sonny Shepherd, Lincoln theatre, Miami, entertainment; Mrs. Mitchell Wolfson, Miami Beach, ladies' events; Burton Clark, Rosetta theatre, Miami, banquet; Major Albert Warner, golf tournament; M. C. Moore, Riverside theatre, Miami, display booths; Edward G. Levy, program; Al F. Weiss, Olympia theatre, Miami, printing; L. A. Johnson, Wometco theatres, Miami, auditing; L. J. Boone, Coral Gables theatre, Coral Gables, decorations and signs.

Virginians Elect Wilder

William S. Wilder was elected president of the MPTO of Virginia at the organization's convention in Richmond last week. Charles A. Somma was named vice-president, Sam Bendheim, treasurer, and Harold Wood, secretary.

Remodeling of antiquated theatres and emphasis upon safety in new construction was recommended by Morton G. Thalheimer, retiring president, in his address at the opening session. Colonel John A. Cutchins, director of public safety of Richmond, welcomed members in the absence of Mayor J. Fulmer Bright. Colonel Robert T. Barton, Jr., counsel of the organization, discussed the social security act as it applies to theatres. Jay W. Johns, president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, Lieutenant Governor James Hubert Price, Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied, were other speakers.

Directors Named

New directors of the organization are: Walter J. Coulter, Richmond; C. L. Abercrombie, Danville; Sam Bendheim, Jr., Richmond; Sam Carver, Roanoke; J. Frank Falls, Danville; Sidney Gates, Portsmouth; Nat Glasser, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Bertha Gordon, Newport News; Elmore Heins, Roanoke; George A. Jones, Richmond; A. E. Lichtman, Washington, D. C.; J. E. Loth, Waynesboro; A. Frank O'Brien, Richmond; Hunter Perry, Charlottesville; Benjamin Pitts, Fredericksburg; Frank Ponton, Richmond; W. Harmon Reed, Alexandria; W. H. Rippard, Farmville; Charles Roth, Harrisonburg; Herman Rubin, Petersburg; Charles A. Somma, Richmond; Morton G. Thalheimer, Richmond; I. Weinberg, Lexington; William S. Wilder, Norfolk; Harold Wood, Richmond; W. A. Byers, Norton, and W. F. Crockett, Virginia Beach.

Frederick W. Twyman, former mayor of Charlottesville; Otto Wells of Norfolk, and R. C. Overbey of South Boston were elected honorary directors.

The Allied States bulletin to members setting forth the legislative aims of the organization, which had been prepared after the meeting of the board of directors last month, was printed in pamphlet form and given wide distribution.

Appended were the names of the members of the Senate committee on interstate commerce, the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce and the Senate and House patents committee. Members and friends of the proposals were urged to communicate with the committee members in behalf of the Allied-indorsed legislation.

Shearer Buys Slipper Company

The B. F. Shearer Company in Los Angeles has purchased the business of J. S. Slipper and Company, pioneer theatre supply dealers. Guy Slipper, head of the company, is retiring and his son, Glenn Slipper, will remain in the office as assistant to C. Frank Harris.

Guild Honors Deanna Durbin

The Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood this week named Deanna Durbin as the best actress for December as a result of her work in "Three Smart Girls." Teddy Hart won the supporting player award for his work in "Three Men on a Horse."

Butcher Joins Selznick

E. W. "Ted" Butcher has joined Selznick-International in Hollywood as studio manager. He was formerly production manager, studio manager and a producer for Fox and has been affiliated at various times with Paramount, the old Griffith Studio and RKO. His first assignment at Selznick will be with "The Prisoner of Zenda."

American Pictures Gain in Denmark

The position of American motion pictures in Denmark improved in 1936 compared with the preceding year, a report to the United States Department of Commerce from its Copenhagen office shows. During the first nine months of the year 229 features were released, of which 147, or 64 per cent, were American. During the corresponding period of 1935 total releases numbered 285, of which 147, or 59 per cent were American. The proportion of German films also increased from 14 per cent in 1935 to 18 per cent last year, but the ratio of British releases declined from 10 to five per cent, the report said.

Six feature films were released by three Danish producers in 1936 compared with 10 in 1935. According to the latest available figures there are approximately 350 motion picture theatres in Denmark, all of which are wired for sound.

Dutch Theatres Win Music Rights Ruling

The Dutch Motion Picture Federation in Amsterdam has won an important decision with respect to the use of music in pictures played by theatres. The controversy arose between the Federation and the BUMA, an organization handling the music rights of composers, which requires payment from theatres for the use of the music.

The BUMA had set an embargo on the receipts of the Rembrandt theatre in Amsterdam in connection with the showing of a UFA production. A decision was rendered in favor of the Federation. BUMA was forced to remove the embargo, the court holding that in the contract between the composer and the producer for the use of music, the rights of reproduction are also included.

New Zealand Government To Make Short Films

The government of New Zealand is proceeding with plans to produce scenic and industrial motion pictures for exhibition in foreign countries, according to the Department of Commerce in Washington.

Advance orders for the pictures are reported to have been submitted by the Imperial Institute in London for distribution to colleges, schools, technical and social institutions in Britain.

In addition, it is anticipated that industrial films for advertising New Zealand produce and manufactures will be produced for exhibition abroad. It is understood that an American company has placed an advance order for a number of these films for exhibition in Far Eastern countries.

Nicaraguan Film Tax To Support Hospitals

The government will collect a motion picture admission tax of 10 per cent with the proceeds being used to help maintain hospitals throughout Nicaragua, it was announced in Managua this week. President Anastasio Somoza declared a large hospital will be constructed in Managua to take care of army men, government employes and the general public.

Tricolor Letter Stopped by Court

Technicolor has been granted a temporary restraining order by Federal Judge William P. James in Los Angeles prohibiting Tricolor from issuing written "warnings" of infringement of patents to exhibitors showing Technicolor productions. The order was granted pending trial on March 16 of Tricolor's infringement action against Technicolor.

Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, Technicolor head, pointed out that the legal controversy involves the Jones patent, issued in 1922, which relates only to the color cameras in use. He said that the notice issued to exhibitors appeared to be "unwarranted intimidation," since, even assuming Tricolor's claims to be valid, exhibitors are not liable either directly or indirectly for damages.

Dr. Kalmus' attorneys said they were positive that Technicolor is not infringing any valid patents and pointed out that the company has successfully withstood many similar suits which have been threatened in the past.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, meanwhile, had sent a bulletin to members advising them to obtain releases in writing from exchanges selling color prints, pending the outcome of the suit between Tricolor and Technicolor.

Dr. Kalmus, replying to inquiries, said he attached no significance to the recent liquidation of Technicolor stock by Atlas Corporation, investment trust, in New York. He emphasized that the company's relations with Floyd B. Odlum, Atlas head, were cordial and that the Atlas holdings had been comparatively small, involving about 9,000 shares of Technicolor common out of a total of 700,000 shares outstanding.

Court Denies Request To Drop RCA Suit

Judge John C. Knox in the United States district court of New York last Saturday denied a motion to dismiss the complaint of Abram J. Engelman in his suit against the RCA Victor Company, RCA Communications, RCA Radiotron and E. T. Cunningham Tubes. The motion to dismiss was made by the defendants on the ground that it failed to state a cause of action. The plaintiff claims he entered into a written agreement with the defendants to show them how to capitalize on their patents with new methods for use in transmission and reception of voices he invented. He was to receive 2½ per cent of all sales. He further claims that the defendants made at least $10,000,000 in sales on their patents with his improvements and that $250,000 is therefore due him, for which amount he is suing.

Cincinnati Archbishop Approves "Cloistered"

Most Reverend John T. McNicholas, Roman Catholic archbishop of Cincinnati, has approved the French film "Cloistered" which is to play a week at the Taft theatre in that city. Church dignitaries, priests and nuns crowded the theatre at a preview showing last week. The theatre is under lease for the showing by Milfor Unger, former manager of the old Grand Opera house.

Strikes, Fascism, Lynchings Are Favorite Themes in WPA Play List

"Social struggle" is the theme basis of plays selected by the United States Government's Works Progress Administration play bureau for legitimate theatre production for American consumption. Strikes, Fascism and lynchings constitute the chief subject matter, the favorite themes of playwrights who have submitted work for the rapidly expanding repertoire of the Federal Theatre Project.

Of 90 plays selected for official listing by the project's official play bureau from nearly 7,000 manuscripts submitted in the last eight months, 34 are on some form of "social struggle." Only 17 deal directly with class struggle as a dominant theme. But other plays about race prejudice, militarism, farm life and modern business methods swell the social message of the volume. Even a play called "The Sun and I," by Barrie and Leonia Stavis, dealing with Joseph, Potiphar and Pharaoh, is listed as a tract against dictatorship, according to the synopsis printed in the volume, "with emphasis on the similarity between present day problems and those of ancient Egypt."

Historical plays, numbering 13 out of the 90, include several with modern variations. One of them is titled "Sex Hallelujah" and described as a Negro version of Aristophanes' "Lysistrata."

Melodrama and comedy each account for 14 of the 90 plays chosen, with 11 plays classed as fantasy and four as folk drama.

The Play Bureau has published the list with an offer to permit production of any of the plays for a weekly royalty of $50. It was intended, according to a foreword, primarily for the 12,000 designers, directors, actors and technicians now working for the Federal Theatre Project in nearly 400 theatres in 28 states.

"Our greatness will be measured only by the writers we encouraged by the plays we produced by the drama we created," wrote Francis Bosworth, director of the Federal Play Bureau. "These plays present a challenge to those who 'desire a different rhythm of life.' To the venturous belongs the future—the future of Federal Theatre."

Outstate Missouri's Insurance Rate Rises

Public liability insurance rates on outstate Missouri theatres have been doubled, going up from five cents a seat to 10 cents. The change was made effective by the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters. Rates in St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo.; Kansas City, Kan., and out-state Kansas remain the same.

Hays Returning East

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., leaves Hollywood for New York this weekend, reaching Manhattan Thursday. Mr. Hays has been in California since early last month and during his stay there he attended meetings with the Producers' Association, spoke at the dinner given by Louis B. Mayer for that organization, was present at the celebration at which Darryl F. Zanuck received the Legion of Honor and was a speaker at the Silver Jubilee Dinner of Adolph Zukor.

Goldwyn Files a Denial

Samuel Goldwyn has filed his answer to questions asked him in Los Angeles in connection with the suit brought against him, Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Eddie Cantor and United Artists by Mort Eisman, Clara Dellar and Robert Louis Shayon. The plaintiffs claim that Mr. Eisman wrote and had copyrighted a play in 1929 which was called "Oh Shah" and that "Roman Scandals" is an infringement. Mr. Goldwyn denied ever having seen "Oh Shah."

Mayor Meets Theatre Men on Safety Measures

Mayor Bernard F. Dickman of St. Louis held a conference Wednesday with theatre owners and managers and labor union officials to discuss public safety in motion picture theatres and to appoint a committee to draw up regulations after he had vetoed the bill recently passed by the Board of Aldermen requiring the employment of a projectionist for each machine. The measure, which had the backing of the St. Louis affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical, Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, was intended to write into the basic laws of the city a union rule that is now observed by every theatre in the territory. Under their working agreement with the union the theatres now employ two projectionists in each booth.

Social Security Film Released by Board

"Today's Frontiers," fourth in a series of newsreel trailers issued by the Social Security Board to publicize the social security act, was released to theatres throughout the country on February 15th, with more than 6,000 bookings claimed by officials of the board. The three previous releases were "We the People and Social Security," "Youthful Old Age," and "Applications for Old-Age Security." The latest effort of the board was written by Miss Ferol E. Thorpe of the board's informational service staff and was produced by Pathe News under the supervision of James S. Douglass.

WILLIAM FOX CASE IN SUPREME COURT

Highest Tribunal Orders Temporary Stay Continued Until It Passes On Action

The highly involved controversy between Hiram Steelman, trustee in bankruptcy for William Fox, and the All-Continent Corporation, which Mr. Steelman charges was organized by Mr. Fox, with his wife as president, and therefore should be considered as an asset of the Fox estate, will be reviewed by the United States Supreme Court, which on Monday ordered the temporary stay of proceedings granted January 18 continued until it has passed on the case.

The case goes to Washington from the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, which had reversed an order of the bankruptcy court ordering a stay of proceedings in Pennsylvania, where All-Continent had brought suit to remove a cloud on the title to certain securities in possession of Philadelphia brokers which had been caused by a third party order in proceedings by the Capital Company, a judgment creditor of Mr. Fox.

In petitioning for relief from the Supreme Court, Mr. Steelman explained that the only assets turned over to him as trustee consisted of certain notes and securities "of little or no value" and $100 in cash, against listed liabilities in excess of $9,000,000.

Acting under the federal bankruptcy act, orders were obtained directing examination of the books and certain officers and employees of All-Continment. Mr. Fox's wife refused to submit to examination and was cited for contempt.

It was charged that examination of the company's books was necessary on the basis of facts which showed that the All-Continent Corporation "was the creation of the bankrupt himself; every dollar of its capital came from the bankrupt; by the formation of the corporation he divested himself of a very substantial portion of his property," according to the brief filed with the Supreme Court. The value of assets transferred to All-Continent by Fox at one time totaled $7,000,000, it was claimed.

Additional Funds For Flood Zones

Nationwide aid of the industry for rehabilitation of Mississippi-Ohio flood zones resulted this week in collection of additional thousands of dollars. Both theatres and exchanges in the flood territories were reopening this week after "house-cleanings."

At Louisville, Ky., theatres have finally dried out their flooded lower floors. The Ohio, Rialto and Mary Anderson theatres were among the first to resume operations. Openings of the Strand, Loew's State and Kentucky, more seriously damaged, came later and the Tower, Crescent, Baxter, Hill Top, Cosy and Uptown are expected to be on regular schedules soon.

A checkup on the damage at Evansville, Ind., revealed that several flooded houses must have new seats and other equipment. The American, reopening Friday has been reseated and redecorated. All seats in the Alhambra will be replaced. Extent of damage to the new Washington is being studied. The Loew's and Majestic have reopened, but not the Ohio, which was virtually swamped.

The Grand and Orpheum at Harrisburg, Ill., have reopened and the Rodgers and Uptown at Cairo, Ill., are being repaired. Fifty theatres in 35 towns in this region are all in operation again.

Loss to theatres in Wheeling, W. Va., from the second flood in less than a year aggregated more than $50,000, officials estimated. The Fox, Liberty, Colonial and Southern theatres, under water six days, have been reconditioned.

At Parkersburg, W. Va., Warner reopened the Smoot and the Strand, while at Ashland, Ky., the Paramount and the Capitol were again in operation, the Grand and the Lyric still dark.

Screen, radio and stage combined forces at the Music Hall in New York last Thursday midnight and raised $60,000 for the Red Cross. Wrigley's Chewing Gum paid $30,000 of this figure to broadcast the affair over 242 stations. Over 100 personalities contributed their appearances.

Theatres in the St. Louis area are credited with having raised $100,000 for Red Cross flood relief work. A special campaign committee was headed by Louis Ansell and Harry C. Arthur.

The Red Cross reported receipt of a check for $15,273.58 from Roxy Theatres Corporation, representing contributions made by its patrons. Also reported were $2,000 from the Paramount at Springfield, Mass; $500 from the DeWitt at Bayonne, N. J.; $35,000 from the theatres in Oklahoma City, $1,000 from the RKO theatres in Cleveland, $1,200 from the houses of Hartford, Conn., and $1,100 from the Strand at Shreveport, La.

The Hamrick-Evergreen houses in Portland showed special slides and trailers. Fred Wehrenberg's Savoy at Ferguson, Mo., was the scene of a benefit by the Lions Club. All theatres of Tampa, Fla., have contribution boxes in their lobbies. In Bridgeport the Capitol gave a day's receipts.

Aid Society Poll Winner

Ginger Rogers this week was chosen as the most popular motion picture star in the poll conducted by the Children's Aid Society among its 10,000 boys and girls attending its seven centers in Manhattan.

Republic's Circuit Deals

The New York Republic exchange this week closed with the Century Circuit of 30 theatres in metropolitan New York and the Consolidated chain of 22 houses for the entire 1936-37 lineup.

Kingsberry Heads WPA

The appointment of Jack Kingsberry as director of the Federal Theatre Project in New Orleans has been announced by James Crutcher, state WPA administrator.

Asher Handling Epilogues

Harry Asher is now distributing Epilogue in New England as well as General Picture features. His headquarters are in Boston.

Contracts Set For Broadcasts From the Studios

Bringing to a close almost four months of intermittent negotiations between General Mills and major producers, Bagley, Horton and Hoyt, Chicago advertising company representing the flour milling firm, this week closed contracts in Hollywood for the daily broadcasting over National Broadcasting Company stations of 15-minute programs from the sound stages of nine major studios.

A different studio will be used for the program each day. The first company whose production activities will be heard over the air will be Twentieth Century-Fox. A part of the shooting on "Love Is News" will be described by a narrator who also will give details concerning the construction of the set itself and probably will introduce the characters featured.

The presentation of the stars has not yet met with the approval of Darryl F. Zanuck, production head, who feels that the reaction might be detrimental to players not adapted to broadcasting.

Bagley, Horton and Hoyt have opened offices in Hollywood to supervise the broadcasting of the General Mills programs.

Meanwhile, Paramount and NBC have completed plans for a Sunday half-hour program to originate in the Paramount studios and to be broadcast over the Red Network as a sustaining feature. Paramount stars and stock players will be used and the production will be under the direction of Boris Morros. Paramount writers will also prepare the scripts which will be subject to the approval of the company's publicity department.

Says Communism Uses the Screen

The press, radio and motion pictures along with the legitimate stage, among other agencies, are being used by proponents of Communism to spread their propapanda in the United States, Archbishop John Timothy McNicholas of Cincinnati said this week in a pastoral letter, issued in the form of a 28-page pamphlet, under the heading "Communism, Its Evils and Its Causes."

"One of the major causes of the spread of Communism is its effective propaganda. All opinion-forming agencies are used by it," the letter said in part. "The infection is, first of all, carried from person to person. The press, the radio, the legitimate stage, the moving picture, ephemeral literature, leaflets, lectures and text books in our schools have been and are being employed in a subtle manner in its system of propaganda. Liberty-loving Americans of all groups would do well to unite in insisting upon a thorough investigation of these agents of propaganda."

The letter, sent out last Wednesday, is to be read in sections in all churches throughout the metropolitan see of Cincinnati, and copies are to be distributed to all Catholic families. All parish priests are instructed to deliver at least three sermons on the subject matter of the pastoral during the Lenten season.

A CONFIDENTIAL OFFICE WIRE!

(But we'll let you in on it.)

"Have just had the privilege of seeing one of the best comedies I have ever seen, 'Love Is News' starring Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Don Ameche. At preview last night the audience reaction was the best ever witnessed. I have seen pictures where at times the audience laughed at one gag or one set of lines whereby the following dialogue would be drowned out. But at this preview there were whole sequences where the laughter was so continuous you could not hear a word. This is going to be one of the big surprises of this year."

"LOVE IS NEWS"

20th CENTURY FOX

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

FRED FELBINGER, chief, and Martin Barnett, assistant, are back in the Paramount News Chicago Bureau, fresh out of the Mississippi and Ohio flood zones. For days since their return, both have been on a lark turning on all the office lights in bright daylight and then dashing to the faucets to let the water stream through their fingers. At first the Paramount gang in the bureau thought of calling for straight-jackets. Only Felbinger and Barnett knew and understood—fresh, clean drinking water and electric lights! All the aqua pura they wanted to bathe in again—they could even drink the stuff!

Down in the flood areas they hadn't had a bath for weeks, and only once did Barnett negotiate a clean shave, accomplished by filling a film can with White Rock highball water and then heating it over three candles.

Already widely mentioned were the difficulties under which transportation was obtained for removing exposed negatives of the disaster—all boats were commandeered by the Coast Guard, National Guard and Red Cross. Not so widely publicized were the restrictions on filming. Censorship was especially enforced as to the death toll. Marty Barnett did obtain material on the long, tapered white pine boxes being carried over pontoon bridges, containing bodies of victims on their way to unknown, unmarked resting places. But, he did not keep the film for long, several photographers having their cameras confiscated for covering this angle of the "story." A National Guardsman turned a gun on Barnett and growled to him to stop where he was standing. "Put that gun down before it goes off," advised Barnett. "That's just what is going to happen," replied the soldier. So Barnett stopped where he was standing.

At another spot Barnett clashed with Jersey policemen who had been imported to aid in effecting martial law. He flashed a Chicago reporter's police-press pass, and then heard from the Jersey cops, in no uncertain terms, that the only press passes that they would honor were Jersey press passes. As a result, Barnett was forced to stay in areas patrolled by Chicago police.

Felbinger and Barnett returned, too, with the memory of the dark morning when a group of motion picture newsreelers were riding the flooded streets in a coast guard boat. The boat suddenly lurched and one of the cameramen was thrown overboard. However, his heavy Akeley camera fell on one of his legs, pinning him to the boat until they could pull him back to safety and from possible death from the churning whirlpools from which there was little chance of rescue.

Barnett and Felbinger headquartered in a hotel in Louisville. Trips to their 15th-floor room became one long climb—elevators were not running. Nor was there heat, because of submerged boilers. And the only food that could be had in the hotel galley was a steady diet of questionable beef soup and scrambled eggs of vintage equally as questionable. A kerosene stove of the Civil War era sent a choice taste of crude oil into the victuals. At night, house bricks were warmed on the same kerosene burner and placed in bed for footwarmers.

Barnett finally got to moving freely around the guarded areas by carrying a duffle bag, with negatives in it, wearing an emergency armband, and answering all queries with the pretention that he was a doctor on an emergency case out of the airport.

THE Hindus in India are taking a note from the production book of Marc Connelly's "Green Pastures," as produced in motion pictures in Hollywood for the Brothers Warner.

A 20-foot eagle has been built by the Indian cinema company, Prabhat Cinetone, to show the ascension into the Hindu heaven of the 17th Century hero of a new motion picture, "Saint Tukaram." Made of iron and papier-mache, this mammoth eagle prop is hoisted on concealed wires, can flap its wings and turn its head from side to side—much in the same manner as Mr. Connelly's Warner-made angels in "Green Pastures." The Hindus' big eagle, however, fell on a crowd of extras the other day and injured a dozen.

In Indian legend, the Garuda is really half man, half eagle—wings red, face white, golden body. Its normal mythical job is to carry the Hindu god, Vishnu. This god has millions of worshipers in India. They believe that he has had many incarnations, the earliest of which was as a giant fish which saved from the flood the ancestor of mankind.

Filming of "Saint Tukaram" by Prabhat Cinetone has some deep-rooted political significance: India's thriving motion picture industry is centered in Bombay and Poona in the country of the Mahrattas, who rebelled against British rule in the 18th Century. Tukaram was born near Poona, is considered the best poet the Mahratta race has produced. The British first arrived in India in his lifetime. He died in 1649 and supposedly went to Heaven in a chariot of flame.

Typical Tukaram poetry: "No gaudy Heaven I seek, no bottomless absorption in the Absolute; Life in this world of death is good, is all I need, for I have Thee."

Tukaram was of the low Sudra caste of servants, his father a grocer. He quarreled with his irreligious wife, cured his son of gallstones, let mosquitoes drink his blood. To every "How do you do" he replied, "I am on my way to the City of God."

If you ever get to India you'll see all about it in Prabhat Cinetone's motion picture.

Motion picture exhibitors have been taking the "rap" on double bills for years. They needn't shoulder the blame any longer. That practice, subjected to such wide controversy, came from the stage. And, strangely enough, it was originated by the first producers of Shakespeare's "Hamlet" in America. "Hamlet" was double-billed on the stage in Philadelphia as early as 1769—seven years before Washington crossed the Delaware.

According to Percy Barton, personal representative of Leslie Howard, now touring the west in Shakespearean vehicles, it was not uncommon to present "Hamlet" as one item of a double bill in the few theatres tolerated in the American colonies in the decade preceding the Revolutionary War. The classic tragedy usually shared the program with some popular farce of the day—"The Wrangling Lovers," "An Irish Widow," "The Agreeable Surprise," et al.

Prize typographical boner of the month was the "Fangs and Claws" listing in the program of the Ellsworth theatre, of that town in Wisconsin. It finally reached patrons from the print shop as "Fanny and Claud."

When You're in Love

(Columbia)

Musical Comedy - Drama

Columbia, which with frequent regularity comes up with the kind of entertaining picture that quickly catches class and mass fancy, like the recent "It Happened One Night" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," has done so again with "When You're in Love." Always it justifies the claim this industry likes to make for itself that this is the amusement business. It doesn't attempt to preach any moral or teach any lesson. It does tell a warmly human love story, varying and balancing the elements of comedy, drama, suspense and surprise in orderly and effective fashion, and embellishes all with a musical content of admirable character.

Though the incident does not take place until half way through the film, evidence of its gay airy character is seen in the fact that Grace Moore sings "Minnie the Moocher" in the most approved hot jazz fashion. In contrast to this she also sings Schubert's "Serenade," "In the Gloaming," the classical-atmosphered "Sibonay," a specialty, "The Whistling Boy," and a love ballad, "Our Song," first presented in a pastoral atmosphere and later against an elaborate carnival background. The music is a treat for both class and mass audiences.

The motivating story embraces warm romance, given occasional explosive twists, and light drama that stimulates sympathetic emotions. While the introductory sequences are somewhat prolonged, their purpose is to identify all principal characters and to point to what is to ensue. In Mexico, Grace Moore, managed by astute Aline MacMahon but weighted down by a trio of scatter brained sycophants (Catherine Doucet, Luis Alberni and Gerald Oliver Smith), wants to get into America to sing at a music festival of her old maestro, Henry Stephenson. Cary Grant is a wealthy tramp artist. Hilarious circumstances bring the two together. Miss MacMahon, in order to get her protege across the border, arranges a marriage of quick divorce for Miss Moore and Grant. The ceremony is something new in weddings, and husband and wife immediately go their separate ways. The entertainment interluding before their next meeting is interesting amusement.

When Grant invades his wife's domicile to decry the trio of leeches still hanging onto her, Miss Moore's adamant spirit gives way to a bit of affection and she accompanies Grant for a nocturnal ride to his farm home, where true love is born. Idyllic for a time, it erupts into drama when Moore, after first promising to go away with him, reneges as she remembers her debt to Henry Stephenson. Announcing she will divorce Grant, she proceeds with her concert until he appears to announce he willingly is giving her her freedom. Miss Moore's heart is shattered and she's unable to go on with the show. It's not until Grant, who has heard increasingly fearful rumors spread through the audience goes back stage to drive her out front that she understands he loves her with a love that makes possible a great musical triumph.

As the entertainment offered is amusing, "When You're in Love" can be considered one of those shows that's in the air long before general presentation, showmen nevertheless have much in the way of name worth, quality of story, class of music and production value on which to base bids for audience support. A picture that legitimately permits the spending of a little more money and effort in exploiting, the more enthusiasm created for it in advance should result in proportionately larger returns.

Previewed in Warner Beverly theatre. The same kind of audience that upon first seeing "Theodora Goes Wild" was sure that film would prove a worthy entertainment and commercial feature, indicated by its applause that this show would fare likewise with the public.—GUS MCCARTHY.

John Meade's Woman

(Paramount-Schulberg)

Melodrama

Human interest melodrama, this show seems destined to excite much attention. Impressive in entertainment worth, it also has a showmanship quality that should inspire exhibitors to unusual efforts. Several factors establish its dual merits. The story is soundly contrived. It is serious, sometimes grim, but never going beyond the bounds of reason or logic. It features Edward Arnold, in a role exceptionally similar to that which he presented in "Come and Get It." The prestige which came to him as a result of that film should serve in good stead here. This picture introduces Francine Larrimore, who in giving a well molded performance indicates that she has the abiltiy and talent to call for much consideration in future production plans. The lengthy supporting cast, in which George Bancroft, Gail Patrick, John Trent, Sidney Blackmer, Willard Robertson and Jonathan Hale stand out, is of high caliber. Direction by Richard Wallace is sure-footed and intelligent. Production details, which not only make for spectacle but also add much to the film's dramatic mood, are unstinted.

Basically the story follows a "you can't get away with it" plot, with the characters well drawn. John Meade is a hard man, a ruthless, avaricious lumber baron, always eager for more power and wealth, and living only for today. Heedless of the advice of straw boss Matthews, he strips the lands of their natural resources. He wants to marry socialite Caroline Haig, who is attracted to him only because of the wealth he possesses. On a business trip he is kind and generous to a homeless farm girl, Teddy Connor, who falls in love with him. Impelled by some queer quirk in his nature he wants to humiliate Caroline, and on the day of their proposed marriage, he snubs her, announcing that he knows her real feelings towards him and proposes to Teddy, whom he knows Matthews loves. The girl accepts him joyfully, but immediately upon their wedding Meade deserts her. Then forces over which John Meade has no control combine to write his fate. Convinced by Caroline that Meade married her for spite, Teddy rebels. This personal drama is intensified by the uprisings of farmers whose mortgages Meade attempts to foreclose. Determined to preserve his idea of order in his own home and put down the farmer insurrection by force if necessary, Meade faces a more formidable foe when a cyclone sweeps over the lands and a terrifying dust storm rolls in. As the mob advances to wreak its revenge on the man who took away their livelihood, Teddy attempts to halt them. Matthews, attempting to rescue his master, is killed. Meade, who learned his lesson the hard way and has been reduced to the same poverty as that which afflicts his neighbors, admits his rapacity and acknowledges his love for Teddy.

Class and quality stick out all over this film to intrigue the interests of the intelligentsia. At the same time it has that dynamic tone in dialogue, situations, action and characterizations that appeals to the masses. As it is the type of picture, melodrama, which will be seen in numbers soon, it behooves exhibitors to get on the bandwagon at once and let the patrons know about it in the most forceful ways possible.

When's Your Birthday

Comedy

With Joe E. Brown as the focal point of all that happens, comedy in characterizations, action, situations and dialogue is the keynote of the wide-mouthed star's initial appearance under the Loew banner. It's a combination of that farce slapstick and clever low amusement that has mad Brown so popular with audiences.

The picture has no other purpose than to provide ridiculous and hilarious fun. There isn't a serious moment in the entire footage; those sequences which might incline to seriousness rapidly dissolve into more and funnier comedy. A natural for youngsters, the production technique recognizing that the favor of that audience segment is important, it is also worthy of any adult, who cares to laugh, time and money.

The introduction is unique. In color caricature the signs of the Zodiac, with Taurus featured, are animated. The sequence resolves to show it is a dream of Brown emerging from the effects of a prize ring knockout. An enthusiastic astrology addict by vocation, Brown's first adventures in the realm of foretelling the future induce sequences permitting Edgar Kennedy, Maude Eburne and Suzanne Kaaren to collaborate with him in knockout farce.

As a waiter, Brown is the center of slapstick involving Granville Bates and Charles Judels. Hired, not without grave misdoubts, by Fred Keating as an amusement pier horoscope caster, Brown's remarkable talents result in his being captured by sure thing bettor Minor Watson, to make sure he never loses any money. Ordered to forecast the fate of a fighter whom Watson is backing, Brown, who is frantic because his girl, Marian Marsh, has deserted him, writes his own horoscope. Finding it, Watson thinks it's the fighter's. When he discovers it's Brown's, he orders the mystic into the ring with the champ. The ensuing match is one of the most bizarre exhibitions of fisticuffing that the screen has seen. It's not until the moon comes up and all the planets are in favorable juxtaposition that Brown disposes of his opponent.

The audience which witnessed the preview in Hollywood Pantages theatre laughed with regularity to indicate that the show had no letdowns. Their reactions indicated that the show will be fully acceptable to the Brown clientele and that it will interest many who are not regular followers of his line of amusement.—G. M.

Time Out for Romance

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

Funny and wholesome amusement is this picture's dominating entertainment and commercial asset. As all the comedy happens while an auto convoy is enroute to Los Angeles, the story is a sort of "Grand Hotel"-on-wheels idea. An odd collection of characters has been gathered. Their actions, the situations arising to confront them and the smart dialogue combine to make entertainment.

Claire Trevor is an heiress fleeing from marriage and Michael Whalen a driver bound for the coast and a job. William Demarest is the boss of the caravan and he and his wife, Lelah Tyler, account for much of the fun. Douglas Fowley, a sinister looking personality, eventually is revealed as a desperate thief, Chick Chandler and Joan Davis are a pair of vaudeville actors headed for Hollywood and a picture break. William Griffith is the camera-hound father of impish and wise cracking Bennie Bartlett.

The nub of the story has the mysterious Miss Trevor identified by her traveling companions as anyone from a gun man's moll to what she really is. Particularly she is a source of trial and tribulation to Whalen, in whose car she first hides and later rides. Action and dialogue popping along at an attention holding pace. Miss Trevor accidentally puts the finger on Fowley as a jewel thief, with the result that the whole melange is jailed. To the country town calaboose comes her father, Andrew Tombes, to identify her and decide to leave her cooped up in a cell with Whalen.

As the discussion anent "B" films continues, this is the type of "B" that for amusement and dollar value outshines many "A's."

Previewed in the Wilshire theatre, Los Angeles. Patrons of the class neighborhood house regarded the film highly and lobby comment followed the "why-can't-we-have-more-like-this" tone.—G. M.

Sea Devils

(Radio-Edward Small)

Comedy Drama

Melodrama, romance, comedy, thrill action, salt water spectacle, hokum and human interest are this show's constituents. Victor McLaglen once again is the rough, rowdy, sometimes softly humane character he was in such films as "What Price Glory" and "The Cockeyed World." He's also very much a "Sez You-Sez Me" sort of person. Preston Foster is an effective throwback to the wise cracking, fist swinging, Edmund Lowe type of foil. They have been provided with dialogue and situations making for a whoop and holler show in which there is something doing for excitement loving audiences almost every minute.

While backgrounded by a vivid Coast Guard Service atmosphere, the plot isn't much. It's what is said and done that keeps it attention holding. Rough, tough McLaglen, first as an uncouth sort of Cupid, wants his charming daughter, Ida Lupino, to marry studious sailor man Donald Woods. He's interested, but when rowdy, roistering Mr. Foster injects himself into the picture to display a love making technique directly opposite to that accepted in the most approved circles, Miss Lupino quickly loses her heart to him. To have Foster as a son-in-law is something McLaglen doesn't want at all, nor does he, professionally, entertain much esteem for the interloper. Foster considers McLaglen a blustering windbag. The situations arising from such a relationship naturally are productive of physique shattering and furniture wrecking brawls.

The cutter's crew is out on iceberg patrol where, as Woods' detail plants explosives, McLaglen and Foster fight furiously. The getaway boat is set adrift, Woods is mortally injured in the blast. A court-martial ensues which the fiery antagonism of the two he-men quickly transforms into a riot. McLaglen, demoted, is ordered to retire and Foster is brigged. Word flashes of a storm at sea and the Guard is ordered into service. Violating all regulations, the rivals are in the rescue boat. Sea spectacle making for impressive excitement, the pair land all survivors and with the breeches buoy fit for one more trip, McLaglen wallops Foster unconscious to send him ashore and to Miss Lupino. Alone in the surging seas, contemplating the medals he snitched from his personal love light, saloon-keeping Helen Flint, Mr. McLaglen goes to heroic death in plenty of salt water and champagne.

Though rowdy, the film holds considerable entertainment for general audiences. Essentially it's a revision to ten, twenty and thirty cent melodrama and calls for sales identification as such.

Previewed in the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The Sunday night audience seemed to think well of the film. The burst of applause accompanying the climax seemed to be legitimate with the paying customers and not inspired by any studio claque.

Note: Whereas producers again have agreed to eliminate excessive display of liquor and drinking in films and the PCA again has been instructed to reduce such atmosphere in scripts and films, this one has schooners of beer and glasses of grog sliding across the bar with noticeable regularity. With McLaglen always having a bottle handy, the finale champagne spree may incline many observers to ask "What do they mean?" However, the picture was completed before the ukase was supposed to have become effective.—G. M.

Drama

Adapted from a novel by the French pilot Antoine de Saint-Exupéry, the author of "Night Flight," this ambitious film deals with the building up of another part of the French Air Line: Paris to Santiago de Chile, the section Casablanca (Morocco) to Dakar (Senegal).

It takes us back to the times when this air line had just been created, in 1927, and shows dramatic and true episodes in the lives of the pioneers, who had to fly 2,000 miles over the deserts of the African Coast, often being attacked by the rifle-armed natives.

As produced, however, instead of being a powerful film of the heroic lives of the pilots, it is mainly a melodramatic love story of lesser interest.

The story centers on one of these pilots, Jacques, who returns to France on leave, having been sent for by his childhood sweetheart, Geneviève, who is to be married to a man in the diplomatic corps, whom she no longer loves. They run away and go to Paris. Complications arise when Jacques' leave is cut off and his duty obliges him to leave her to carry the mail to Morocco. The pilot, arriving at Casablanca, hears that one of his comrades has lost his way in Mauretania, in a region infested with rebel natives. He changes his route to try and find his friend, but plundering Moors attack them, and they take refuge in a fort where they set up their wireless. Jacques asks to send a reassuring message to Geneviève in France. When this is refused him, he fights his way out of the fort, tries to regain his plane and is killed.

This film was directed by Pierre Billon. The air and desert scenes were shot on the site of the actual event and are excellent. Unity of story is weakened, however, by the frequent shifts from Africa to Paris.

Pierre Richard-Wilm, who is very popular in France, plays Jacques, but does not seem so good as in previous roles. Jany Holt (Geneviève) looks charming, but overacts. Best performances in support are by Charles Vanel, Aimos, Alexandre Rignault, Roger Legris and Margueritte Pierry.

In spite of the weakness mentioned, however, this film can be considered as a real effort of the French industry, with great promise in French-speaking countries. For foreign audiences, though there is not much dialogue, the prospects of the picture are doubtful, as Hollywood has made stories of the same kind. There is nevertheless the factor of the use of a real African background.

Arizona Mahoney

(Paramount)

Comedy Drama

This idea might have looked all right in manuscript. With the noted stage comedian, Joe Cook, featured, the idea seems to have been to combine a Zane Grey thriller with a circus comedy.

It starts as a typical rooting tooting western with rival rustlers Talbot and Lloyd trying to outbluff each other. Arizona Mahoney's circus, consisting of addle-brained Randall, a duck and an elephant, land in town to provide a little elementary grade comedy. Audiences are supposed to get the idea that Talbot is honest but is forced to combat Lloyd with his own weapons. Anyway, Talbot holds up a stage, and Mahoney and Randall, who seem to possess physic knowledge, join up with Talbot. Via the holdup, a girl, Sue Bixby, whom Talbot always has been trying to protect, is brought into the picture and then the stage is set for the fighting climax. It's a wild affair until Mahoney unlimbers his human cannon ball to rout Lloyd's forces. To add to the film's incongruities, Sue prefers Randall to Talbot for the romantic fadeout.

The audience which saw the preview in the Los Angeles Orpheum theatre, composed of persons not ordinarily difficult to satisfy, did not react.—G. M.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Produced by A. M. Botsford. Directed by James Hogan. Based on Zane Grey's novel "Stairs of Sand." Screen play by Robert Yost and Stuart Anthony. Scotland Yard Commands

(Grand National)

English Melodrama

Adventure of credible kind accompanied by normal danger and terminating in reasonable romance is the common-sense substance of this uncommonplace importation. Presented in matter-of-fact continuity and without elaboration or distortion in the name of art or otherwise, it holds interest steadily and reveals at least one unfamiliar phase of Scotland Yard activity—the safeguarding of public independence of opinion at election time.

The plot within the plot has as its objective the propagation of political sentiment by means of exposing the presence of contraband arms smuggled into the country for purposes of such exposure. The picture plot has to do with Scotland Yard's enterprise in thwarting the political plotters without incurring publicity.

The hero, played by Clive Brook, is a retired naval officer who blunders, intoxicated, upon the smugglers at work, is knocked out and left to appear the victim of an automobile wreck. Recovered, he meets a dance hall girl whose chance reference to a brother in the trucking business refreshes his memory of the night's events. Asked to give expert opinion of a machine gun seized by Scotland Yard crated as a carpet sweeper, he links the girl's brother with the smuggling and reports his suspicions. Scotland Yard commissions him to pursue the investigation, which he does in order to spare the girl embarrassment. He finds her brother innocent of intentional wrong and, when the guilty parties shoot him down to prevent the giving of testimony against them he captures the smugglers. He is to marry the girl as the picture ends.

Exploitation featuring Clive Brook and advertising copy pertaining to Scotland Yard appears indicated. The locale is London, Leeds and the English countryside. The hero drives a super-charged Auburn at breakneck speed and mentions it by name in the dialogue.

(Paramount)

Comedy Drama

Plain romance is portrayed in terms of a salesgirl's love for a young doctor and his for her, with just enough equally plain and plausible conflict to give it point, never enough to dispel the impression that these are the everyday young folk of this or any era working out their pattern destiny, contributing their important little to the vital sum of life among the common people. The place is New York, the time the present, the appeal directly to the broad midsection of the paying public.

The story is told in simple, credible incidents with evident intent to depict with complete accuracy the problems, ambitions, joys and sorrows of ordinary persons. Emmy Grant, salesgirl, falls in love with John O'Ryan, medical student working as theatre doorman when the picture opens, presently to set up shop as a baby specialist, and he falls in love with her. When lack of funds delays their wedding, her mother, a former vaudeville star, joins a burlesque show which is raided (reason not shown) with resultant publicity which O'Ryan's senior adviser tells Emmy is reason why she should renounce him lest his professional reputation be affected. She disappears, but is ultimately found; her mother is given reputable employment and the marriage follows.

Irene Hervey plays Emmy with considerable spirit and Charles Starrett gives an earnest performance as O'Ryan. Support includes such substantial names as H. B. Warner, Doris Kenyon, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Irene Franklin, who sings her unforgettable "Red Head" in the course of the action. Exploitation emphasis on names and type of story appears to be indicated.

Reviewed at Loew's Mayfair theatre, New York, where it was coupled with a revival of "Mutiny on the Bounty," the picture seemed to appeal strongly to the younger and more demonstrative element.—W. R. W.

Produced by Richard A. Rowland. Distributed by Paramount. Directed by Bert Lytell. Screen play by Austin Strong. Additional dialogue by Arthur Caesar. Art director, Ralph Berger. Musical direction, Boris Morros. Photographed by Ira Morgan. P. C. A. Certificate No. 2685. Release date, November 6. Running time, 66 minutes. General audience classification.

"O.H.M.S."

(Gaumont British)

Military Drama

The British title of this production, which stands for "On His Majesty's Service," indicates its subject matter; it is a very vivid, speedy and interesting picture of British Army life, with story interest and plenty of humour, and excellent work by Wallace Ford. That he is an American tough who joins the British military forces (because the U. S. civil forces are after him for murder) gives the picture an American slant. The barrack-room, drill-ground and troopship scenes are all well done, and there is finally a war sequence, in China.

Jimmy Tracey, New Yorker, gets involved in a roughhouse in a fantan joint, and is left with the body of a stranger, and the police on the way. He grabs the dead man's papers and finds among them a Canadian passport in the name of James Dean. With the aid of Jean, a dancer, he gets away and ships for England with the passport.

Docking, he is surprised to be welcomed by a pretty girl, Sally Briggs, who was a childish playmate of Dean. Sally's father is quarter master sergeant of the Wessex Regiment and it soon appears that Dean was on his way over to join up. Jimmie is compelled to become a soldier.

Follows an amusing sequence showing his breaking into Army life, his achievement in a regimental boxing contest, a further success at an Army concert and, behind it all, his friendly rivalry in love with Bert, the English corporal. When the American dancing girl appears on the scene, Jimmie thinks she is going to turn him over to the police, and deserts—but stows away on the very ship which is taking the regiment on foreign service. In China, he saves an isolated company of English civilians from being wiped out by bandits, and is shot just when the rescue is assured.

The obvious appeal of the story and of Ford's very amusing characterization of the likeable American black sheep is reinforced by the authentic pictures of British Army life. War office cooperation has been given on a very large scale, both by the provision of picked troops and in the use of official buildings and training grounds on Salisbury Plain and elsewhere. It really does show the British "Tommy" (Doughboy) as he is, but it doesn't stop being entertainment to do it. Anna Lee and Grace Bradley are other American names and Raoul Walsh directed it. It looks a selling proposition as a story of a typical American in King George's Army.

Press-shown at the Tivoli in London. The reception left no doubt of the strength of the comedy appeal, and the slickness of the military aisplays also deserved the applause it got.—BRUCE ALLAN.

The Dominant Sex

(Associated British Pictures)

Comedy-Drama

An adaptation of Michael Egan's clever and amusing stage play, this picture, directed by Herbert Brenon, offers very good entertainment values and material for provocative exploitation. The old problem of whether man or woman should dominate is not so intriguing as the question as to which is apt to dominate today in fact as opposed to convention. There is considerable appeal to both sexes, in the film's sparkling treatment of the problem of situation that, with woman actually exercising the fullest measure of freedom, things go as wrong as possible, for woman as well as man. A showman also has the campaign material of the case of the man who allows his wife to dictate his career, and regrets it.

The story pictures the domestic problem of Dick and Angela Shale. He is an engineer, anxious above everything to found an independent business on an invention he has perfected. She is desirous of quick prosperity

Friends of the couple are the Claytons. The lady in this case takes her freedom to the extent of spending a weekend with another man. Her husband, whom she has encouraged to flirt with a flower shop girl, proves less emancipated than she expected and sues for divorce. The news, coupled with the information that the old farm is again in the market, cures Shale of his weakness and his wife finds herself committed to a career as a country wife—and is prepared to like it.

A brilliant piece of acting by Diana Churchill as the lovable but lying wife, and good support from Phillips Holmes, Carol Goodner and Romney Brent make the most of extremely clever material.

It was a definite audience hit at the London Piccadilly theatre trade show, all the lines and situations registering.—B. A.

Hollywood: The Second Step

(MGM)

Hollywood Expose

Jane Barnes, as Jane Barnes, gives further demonstration of the trials of the young girl set to win fortune upon the silver screen. With her option not taken up, Miss Barnes is forced to become an extra. She is given a small part only to find later at a preview showing that her cinema countenance is figuratively the face on the cutting room floor. Her hopes brighten when she is signed for the lead in a new production, and we leave Jane at the end more determined than ever to be an actress. The whole subject is interesting and well produced with some intimate shots of the inside workings of a studio. However, the point that the short seems to be making, that breaking into the picture game is difficult and discouraging work, appears to be weakened by the lucky breaks for Miss Barnes. Running time, 10 minutes.

Where Champions Meet

(Paramount)

Interesting

Introducing the many and oddly different tenants housed in the mammoth confines of New York City's own Madison Square Garden and the extensive and elaborate accommodations manufactured to meet their demands makes an entertaining picture of what goes on behind the scenes of such a popular institution. From playing host to a circus down to the presentation of an ice carnival, this review is a clever demonstration of the skilled and highly scientific preparations expended by the Garden management to meet the housing requirements of its guests. Of interest to all, the subject should be particularly enjoyed by the sport fans and those who have visited the Garden. Running time, nine minutes.

Good

This is an animated cartoon in color that has to do with the sport which skeletons have when all good citizens are safely tucked in bed for the night. Emerging from their graves the skeletons cavort in a variety of fun, the highlight being a swing band composed of skeletons. As dawn creeps slowly over the horizon the men of bones return to their graves. Running time, 7 minutes.

Picturesque South Africa

(MGM)

Especially Good

Literally and figuratively, a feast for the eyes is presented in this picturized item of travel. In a collection of gorgeously photographed and colored scenes that number interesting views of such noted landmarks as the Cape of Good Hope, the Rhodes Memorial Park and the awe-inspiring Victoria Falls, this issue will receive a decided vote of approval from any discriminating audience. The commentary is of equally high standing but seems a bit superfluous, so absorbing are the pictorial effects. Running time, nine minutes.

A Girl's Best Years

(MGM)

Entertaining

More a playboy than a playwright, John Warburton works on the subtle supposition that to gather dramatic material for his plays he must experience their situations in real life. Far from harvesting theatrical plots from this technique, he but entangles himself in many an ambarrassing breach of promise suit. Mary Doran, reporter, is persuaded to act as defense for Mr. Warburton against the designing wiles of others of her set anxious to supply the writer with theme material. Poor Miss Doran has her hands full, especially from the blonde complications of Sheila Terry. But it all ends happily enough for the two principals when Mr. Warburton rather belatedly realizes that love in the comely person of Miss Doran has been at his own doorstep all the while. The entire affair is put together with an engaging and light effect. The players are young and lively. The music is gay and tuneful. Because of the sophisticated "tongue-in-the-cheek" treatment of a theme revolving around breach of promise suits, the matter is a bit too mature for the younger element. Running time, 19 minutes.

Slippery Silks

Slapstick

When the Three Stooges fall heir to their late Uncle's fashionable dress shop, their screen following come into the possession of many a laugh. Beginning as cabinet makers, they incur the enmity of Vernon Dent, whose priceless Chinese cabinet they reduce to hash. A very swanky fashion show is produced under their lunatic supervision. When Dent arrives at the shop he of course recognizes the Stooges and the feud is resumed with cream puffs. At times the Stooges overstep the borders of slapstick and enter onto the ground of vulgarity. Running time, 20 minutes.

The Youngsters

This is a series of vaudeville acts with child performers doing the acting. A novel method of introducing the acts features two boys over the telephone discussing the show and whom they will spot in it. As they recall a name the scene fades and a performer appears on the stage: Eddie Grady, a one-man band; Joyce Haber and Buddy Matthews, comedy and song routine; Wesley Catri, tap dancing; Dickie Monahan, songs, and Muriel Weber, singer. Running time, 11 minutes.

Old Paris and Berne

(Columbia)

Travelogue

Classed as a special but hardly meriting this particular designation, this scenic excursion to the historic spots of Old Paris and to the quaint Swiss town of Berne affords interesting but still ordinary screen fare. Photographed adequately but uninspiredly are such important historical and literary Parisian monuments as the homes of Louis XIV and Dumas, the author of "The Three Musketeers." Pictured at Berne are views of community bridges and fountains, the town square clock tower with its odd figures and the bear pit peopled with some sportive and entertaining bruins. Running time, 10 minutes.

Castle Town of France

(Columbia)

Scenic Subject

In the company of Mr. Tom Terris, the Vagabond Traveler, the spectator is taken on a visit to the province of Touraine, commonly called the Chateau country of France. Exhibited for audience admiration are the architectural splendors of the ancient Chateau Chaumont and the equally historic Chambord, which took two thousand men a period of fifteen years to erect and which was visited by such famous personages as Francis I and Catherine Medici. The camera does full justice to these magnificent monuments of imposing design and the average person cannot fail to be impressed favorably as he views their fine but rugged structures. Mr. Terris's running commentary meets the explanatory need satisfactorily enough but he sometimes allows himself to be carried away to excessive vocal rhapsodies. Running time, 10 miinutes.

INCREASED COSTS AND SHRINKING EXPORTS AFFECT GERMAN PROFITS

Number of Companies Reduced to a Third; Working Capital Shows Sharp Decline, Also Number of Films Available

Ufa and Tobis, Least Affected, Dispose of Fully-Owned Studios, Sound Equipment and Printing Plants

by J. K. RUTENBERG

in Berlin

Increased film costs, a notable trend toward big features, an unsatisfactory proportion between expenditures and distribution rentals and a still shrinking export business are making their influences felt in Germany, particularly on minor companies.

The necessary consequence of these developments has been a distinct trend toward centralization never before equalled in the history of the German film industry.

So far as distribution is concerned, the arrival of the sound film already had led toward a shrinkage of outlets. In 1928 no less than 300 individual companies and groups were active and in 1932 a fourth of German feature production was released by the independent distributor. A further 35 per cent of the total output was distributed by the middle-sized renters and the remainder by the large companies, with Ufa and Tobis leading.

An unusual feature of former years was the participation of independent renters in distribution of foreign-made films and here of U. S. films.

Film Companies Reduced

With the arrival of the new government the number of film companies was cut to a third and in the course of this development only a quarter of the total film offer was left for the minor and middle-sized renters and producers. Even the big companies were influenced by the ever increasing difficulties and nearly all still operating distribution companies have arisen from a receivership bankrupt's estate and are working with a relatively small capital of 100,000 to 600,000 reichsmarks compared with five to 10 million reichsmarks in normal times. In 1934 the Afa film company, producer and distributor of many films, went into liquidation, in 1935 the Rota film company and the Terra had to be subsidized and Rota came fully under Tobis influence.

So far as Terra is concerned the Swiss group of Scotoni disappeared from the files and was replaced by the bank Sponholz. Another subvention of Terra became necessary in 1936 and Bavaria Film Company was refinanced by cooperation of several hundred exhibitors.

Biggest Lose Least

Only the large competitors, Ufa and Tobis, went through these hard times without considerable loss in capital and prestige. They disposed of fully-owned sound film studios, recording sets and printing plants, and planned to derive their income from production, distribution and exhibition. Tobis, moreover, is a patent-holding company controlling recording and reproduction of sound not only in Germany but also in most of Continental Europe. Ufa has 130 cinemas, mostly big houses, and Tobis has considerable income from foreign distribution and licenses. These two groups, fully independent of each other, are producing and distributing nearly 100 German films a year (Ufa 30, and the three Tobis companies, Rota, Syndikat and Europa, 68). These 100 films are nearly two-thirds of the total film offer of the year.

CLARIFY MEXICAN TAX SITUATION

Theatres are allowed to pay a taxation rate of eight per cent on the daily gross, instead of the 13 per cent required for motion picture houses, only if they run stage shows for 10 consecutive days each month, the City Treasurer of Mexico City explained to several exhibitors who thought they were complying with the law by running occasional stage shows.

This trend toward centralization, on the other side, has weakened the position of the German exhibitor by making incorporation of favorable conditions into the release contract almost impossible. Release is, therefore, done mostly in the form of "block booking," with Tobis and Ufa films governing the field.

Production Situation Changes

The situation in the production field has equally been changed. It is generally known here that most feature films are not produced by the renting companies themselves but by independent production groups with a yearly output of two to five films a year.

In former years the financing was done in such a way that the producer himself joined in the production costs by adding 20 or more per cent of the capital necessary and the rest was guaranteed by the renter (with 40 to 60 per cent as normal). The profit possible was halved between the producer and the renter. This type of producer has completely disappeared in the last few years. Capital is lacking for production, and the distributor nowadays finances the producer, who has become some sort of production supervisor under the leadership of the renter. He gets a certain percentage of the production costs, usually 7½ per cent, which necessarily reduced the interest in the cheapening of the production.

State Chamber Acts

Efforts have been made by the German State Film Chamber to end this state of affairs. Restriction in film credits for production activities, a rise in capital, stimulation of independent film production, and possibly a slight increase in film rentals, are the ways in which a return to normal film conditions is sought. The German exhibitor is in a sound position at present, having renewed his theatre, modernized and enlarged his enterprise, and has gained by the increase in cinema attendance. Removal of the double feature program, limitation of the length of the total program, stabilization of admission prices, abolishment of unfair competition from outsiders and the banning of new houses are the methods by which the State Film Chamber has kept the German exhibitor alive.

The broadcasting and the daily newspapers have devoted a large space to the film industry and new means will be used further to increase cinema attendance. The shrinking export business has led to the necessity to write films down in the country of origin, and foreign-made films will considerably increase the total film offer. Paramount, Metro and Fox are still operating in Germany releasing a total of about 30 films per year. Last year has seen a considerable rise in U. S. film income in Germany and some great successes like "Broadway Melody," "San Francisco" and "Anna Karenina" have done much to pave the way for American films in Germany. The future of American films here is not likely to change decisively, depending upon the quality of coming films.

Kent to Australia On Theatre Deals

With the proposed 20-year joint operation deal between Hoyts and Union Theatres in Sydney, Australia, in status quo and no action having materialized by February 9, the deadline date, it has been revealed that Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign head of the company, will sail on August 12 from California for conferences in Australia with Stanley S. Crick, chairman and managing director of Hoyts, and Charles Munroe, a managing director of the circuit. It is reported that in the event the two circuits fail to come to an agreement, Hoyts with 100 of the 125 houses comprising Greater Union Theatres, will branch out on its own.

Meanwhile, Mr. Kent and Mr. Hutchinson, accompanied by Leslie Whalen of the home office, will attend the four-day company sales convention for all European representatives in Paris April 28-May 1. Although the meetings heretofore have been held in London, it was found impossible this year to do so because of the Coronation.

S. S. Crick, Australian head, will attend the annual sales meeting of the American forces in Los Angeles late in May.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Night Key

(Universal)

Drama

The story chosen for this production is novel. Basically it is drama through which an appealing vein of romantic love interest has been threaded. The author, William A. Pierce, secretary to Universal's production head, Charles R. Rogers, has been spoken of several times by his chief as a potential Irving Thalberg. With such a status to aspire to, it may be expected that the young writer has put his whole heart and soul as well as theatrical knowledge into his first major story opportunity.

As the story is novel, so is the part assigned to the leading player, Boris Karloff. While not the fearsome terrorizer this time, he nevertheless extracts a grim revenge against the man who almost wrecked his life and fortune. Defrauded of a fair share in the profits of a burglar alarm system he invented, Karloff creates an instrument that neutralizes its protective efficiency. No criminal intent other than the ruining of his nemesis is intended initially, but when crooks force him to become a partner in their scheme of mass looting and later kidnap his daughter to assure their safety, the story takes on a tense dramatic character as Karloff effects their capture.

To support Karloff the producers have selected an acceptable if not altogether strong cast. Samuel S. Hinds is his unethical partner. The romance is shared by Jean Rogers and Warren Hull. Hobart Cavanaugh appears as a petty crook who assists Karloff in embarrassing Hinds. Alan Baxter is the master crook, his henchmen are David Oliver, Edwin Maxwell and Ward Bond.

The screen play was prepared by Tristam Tupper, inactive recently but a participant in Universal's "The Great Impersonation," released in 1935. Lloyd Corrigan, who made "Dancing Pirate," is directing.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

(Radio)

Comedy-Romance

As if in contrast to the number of dramatic pictures currently on release schedules and booked for production soon, Radio is preparing a comedy romance, the keynote of which is modernly tempoed, light, airy and possibly semi-farce amusement. Characterizations in the story, its dialogue, and the situations point to that quality. The fact that it may be identified as "comedy amusement" gives it unique commercial value.

The hero is a young man, penniless but brimming over with ingenious ideas, whose only trouble in getting a job is that everyone else is trying to get one, too. By avocation a "dog walker" and fall guy in a newspaper office, who is fired every time someone must take the rap, he is compelled to become a pseudo-detective in order to capture the heart of his lady love, as well as win the respect of her father and his boss. All promises giddy amusement, with plenty of fun resulting from dialogue and action.

John Morley, previously seen in "Poppy" and "Border Flight," gets his first chance at a featured role. The girl is Anne Shirley, who is graduated from country girl characterizations to that of a wealthy society girl. Another newcomer, Dudley Clements, also will be seen. Other names are Grady Sutton, Gene Lockhart, Barbara Pepper, Alec Craig, Charles Coleman, Jack Carson and Dot Farley.

The story is an unpublished novel by Richard English. Dorothy Yost and John Grey Collaborated on the screen play.

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy

For names this production will offer Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie, who have attracted considerable public attention to themselves; Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly, Ned Sparks, Grace Bradley, Walter Catlett, Douglas Fowley, Paul Hurst, Etienne Girardot and Eric Linden, all of whom, by reason of past performances, are fairly esteemed as amusement providers; and Miles Manders, Gary Breckner, Barnett Parker, William Demarest, George Givot, Joan Davis and Charles Williams, whose names not yet have won the places accorded the others mentioned.

To assure, as far as possible, that the forthcoming feature will embrace entertainment and commercial values comparable with the company's best successes, the production has received more than the usual amount of personal attention from Darryl F. Zanuck. In addition to selecting the story vehicle, Dorothea Brande's "best selling" book of the same title which devotes itself to an embellishment of the Winchell-Bernie "feud," Mr. Zanuck chose the cast, elected the song writing team of Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, to prepare the music and lyrics, and assigned as director Sidney Lanfield, who handled "One in a Million" and "Sing Baby Sing." Additionally Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen were given the duty of transposing to screen purposes Curtis Kenyon's story from the Brande book.

That the combination of personnel identities represents unique name value cannot be denied. That 20th Century-Fox has met with considerable success in production of comedy tinged and well mounted musicals is also a matter of record.

For release in April, exact date to be determined.

Speed Mad

(Columbia)

Action Drama

Thrill action stuff on the ocean waves is the substance of this production. Speedboat drivers who are daring and reckless, crooks, gamblers, gangsters and, of course, a girl and her poor old father, are the personnel involved. Naturally there is a determined lover, even though he is to be disappointed. There's a little boy, too, whom the villains grab at the crucial moment. As is usually in productions of this sort, the hero manages to get himself into and out of many jams, and the heavies are always on the point of triumphing, but of course they don't. It's that sort of material that had the gallery gods stamping when played by the stock company actors of a generation or more ago.

The story used is jointly credited to Grace Neville, who some time ago, wrote "Dangerous Intrigue" and "Air Hawks," and Fred Niblo, Jr., who in his career with Columbia has accounted for numerous melodramas. Direction is by D. Ross Lederman, whose facility for handling such material is attested by "Alibi for Murder," "Hell Ship Morgan" and "Too Tough to Kill."

While the cast is quite lengthy in order to encompass all the character and atmosphere players, the active principals are few. The hero is the newcomer, Allan Brook. Rosalind Keith is the girl. J. M. Kerrigan is the poor old man whose fortunes and future are wrapped up in the racing boat which Brook drives when the chief heavy, John Tyrrell, isn't interfering. The double crossing suitor for the girl's hand is Joseph Sawyer, lately in "The Black Legion."

Probable release date, March 5.

(Warner)

Drama

Present day drama, laid in the atmosphere of New York's seamy night life and dealing with characters to whom that sort of life is flesh and blood, is the substance of this picture. It is the story of a hostess who rebels against the imposition of gansterdom and racketeering in human life, and in the face of great danger and at the cost of great personal sacrifice, brings about the elimination of the leeches who preyed upon dancing girls.

To mark the harmonious return of Bette Davis, who is starred, to the Warner banner, the story was especially written for her, the 1936 Academy Award winner, by Robert Rosen and Abem Finkel. Lloyd Bacon, whose accomplishments need no repeating, is directing. Incidental music and lyrics, featured in the night club sequences, were prepared by Harry Warren and Al Dubin.

Warner concerned itself no little with selection of an appropriate cast, and seems to have done well not only from the standpoint of the various players' adaptability to the several roles, but also from the very important angle of marquee value. Humphrey Bogart, first noted by screen followers in "Petrified Forest" and more recently in "Black Legion," plays the role of a prosecuting attorney. The menace is Eduardo Ciannelli of "Winterset" fame. The supporting cast is lengthy. Outstanding among the many names are Jane Bryan, Rosalind Marquis, Lola Lane, Isabel Jewell, Mayo Method, Allen Jenkins, Kenneth Harlan, John Litel, Robert Strange, Raymond Hatton, Arthur Aylesworth and William B. Davidson.

Probable release date, March 15th.

Columbia Leases Globe

Columbia Pictures has leased the Globe theatre on Broadway for the New York opening of "Lost Horizon." The house will be remodeled and redecorated before the film opens March 3 on a two-a-day policy. Following the New York opening, the picture will be roadshown.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Foreign Technicians

Of interest to the hundreds of Hollywood technicians who have been or may be employed in British studios is the campaign which the Association of Cine-Technicians is conducting to limit the number of foreign experts permitted to work on films in this country.

In its official comments on the Moyne Report on the Films Act, the Association has reiterated to the Board of Trade a suggestion which it made to the Moyne Committee that not more than one foreign technician shall be permitted to work on any film qualifying for British quota.

"Foreign technicians who have come to England have not had to work on the despised 'quickie,'" says the statement. "The British technician has had to make the 'quickie.' He should now be enabled, by legislation, to work on the better quality quota picture, the production of which it is hoped will follow from a new Cinematograph Act."

The Association agrees that the stipulation for a British scenario writer should be removed from a new Act "since the clause has in practice been a dead letter owing to difficulties of definition." It suggests that a Fair Wages clause should be imposed on any British producer obtaining financial aid through the suggested official Films Commission.

Supporting the suggestion that there should be a quota for shorts as well as for features, the Association says that "certain types of shorts, and more especially documentary films, have been made almost entirely by British labor and have enhanced considerably the prestige of British technicians."

Wilcox Plans

Herbert Wilcox, in the midst of planning the big production of "Victoria the Great," with Anna Neagle as the Queen, for Coronation release, is putting "Vienna Sunset" on the floor at Pinewood under the direction of Norman Walker, who made "The Fighting Navy."

Founded on an original story by Florence Tranter and a scenario by Majorie Gaffney and Harrison Owen, "Vienna Sunset" will star Tullio Carminati and Lili Palmer, who was a hit in G-B's "The Great Barrier." Backgrounds will include Vienna, the Italian Lakes and Port Said. It is Carminati's third picture for Wilcox, the earlier being "The Three Maxims" and "London Melody." The last named was shown to the London trade this week.

Starts Another

Alfred Hitchcock begins directing at the Gaumont-British studios at Shepherd's Bush, early in March, a feature based on "A Shilling for Candles," a best-selling novel by Josephine Tey which has as one of its outstanding features a pursuit through the country towns of Southern England. An intimate view of the English scene is promised, with country inns and farmhouses at their most rustic to contrast with the grimmer backgrounds of police court, hobo ward and prison.

It is, of course, being a Hitchcock film, a crime story, opening with the discovery of a dead woman at the foot of Beachy Head, beauty spot of the South Coast. A mysterious hobo plays an important part.

Charles Bennett has written the scenario, and so far the only part cast is that of the feminine lead, which goes to Nova Pilbeam.

From South Africa, news of the G-B unit filming "King Solomon's Mines" reports Geoffrey Barkas and his men as camped in the Umgeni Valley, near Pietermaritzburg, and shooting a native palaver in a gigantic kraal and "King's House" built for the occasion. Also, the natives have christened Barkas "The Man Who Drinks Trouble," which would pass as a description of directors in general.

Sinclair Hill, British producer, directs an exterior scene for "Midnight Menace," Grosvenor production co-starring Charles Farrell and Fritz Kortner.

At Warner-British

William Collier, Jr., has come from the Warner Hollywood studios, where he has been producing for three years, to be associate producer at the Warner-First National studio at Teddington.

He has already started work at the studio, with a busy year ahead of him as responsible producer of "a substantial proportion" of the twenty pictures on the Warner-British schedule for 1937, and presumably with the general mission of building up WB's British contract players much as, at Hollywood, he is credited with building up Dick Foran in Westerns.

In progress at Teddington at the moment are "Copper Proof," with Hugh Williams, Glen Alyn and John Carol, and "The Compulsory Wife," with Joyce Kirby and Henry Kendall. Ralph Ince is directing the first and Arthur Woods the second.

Another for Kane

Announcing completion of shooting on "Under the Red Robe" at Denham, Robert T. Kane also said that New World's third picture would be "Four Dark Hours," which went to the floor as the first of the "Denham" productions for British Lion release, but will now go out through Twentieth Century-Fox. Set in London's underworld, "Four Dark Hours" has the original feature that the whole of its action takes place between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. against such backgrounds as the Adelphi Arches, Covent Garden, Soho and Paddington Station. John Mills and Rene Ray are the leads and there is three weeks of shooting still to be done.

Victor Seastrom's final shots for "Under the Red Robe" were done in the biggest set yet used for the film, an exterior of the Castle of Foix filling the whole of a Denham stage. Annabella and Sophie Stewart played the last scenes.

Laughton Starts

London Film's "I Claudius," directed by Josef von Sternberg, has started at Denham, after a great deal of preliminary research, planning and background shooting in Rome.

Charles Laughton as Claudius has given Guy Pearce, head of the makeup department, another chance to distinguish himself. The cooperation of Professor of Archaeology Ashmole has assisted in obtaining a portrait of the Roman Emperor, as well as in guiding the director in all other historical details.

The cast already includes Merle Oberon as Messalina, Raymond Massey as the Roman General Justus, Flora Robson as Livia, wife of Augustus, and Emlyn Williams as Caligua.

Vincent Korda is the art director, Georges Perinal will be at the camera, and Agnes de Mille will arrange Roman temple dances.

Kortner at Pinewood

"Midnight Menace," in production at Pinewood by Grosvenor Sound Films, Sinclair Hill directing, is built on the problem of the current European armaments race, and has two big star names in Fritz Kortner and Charles Farrell.

A close reconstruction of the "Locarno" room at the British Foreign Office is one of the sets, and a raid on London by wireless-controlled planes is a big moment.

Charles Farrell, at the end of the picture is returning to Hollywood to look over his country club, then comes back to London for a production enterprise with Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and the plan of co-starring with Janet Gaynor in the first film of the new company.

BRITISH DISTRIBUTORS PROTEST MOYNE'S GOVERNMENT RULE IDEA

Flexible Quota and Quality Test Proposals Also Are Opposed in Report to the Board of Trade This Month

Reduction of Quota Is Urged Instead; Footage Basis for Admittance of All Foreign Product Also Is Attacked

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The "Observations" of the Kinematograph Renters Society on the Moyne Report have been sent to the Board of Trade. The Government now has the views of producers, exhibitors and distributors. Digests of statements from the producer section, through the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, and the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association already have been published.

The KRS statement expresses uncompromising opposition to four of the most important recommendations of the Committee, denouncing:

The proposed institution of an official Film Commission to exercise a general control of the industry.

Inauguration of the principle of a flexible quota, governed by the quality of the previous year's British films.

Proposed continuance of the principle of basing quota on footage and the suggestion of ultimate extension of such a quota to 50 per cent.

Suggestion that films should be given quota registration after viewing by a committee which would assess their entertainment value.

In very outspoken terms, the Society attacks the Moyne Report as a whole on the grounds that its recommendations, "by the very nature and complexity of the cinema industry, cannot but fail to achieve the main purpose for which the Cinematograph Films Act was devised," and that they "will not help to further the production of British pictures of quality and merit."

Evidence Declared Disregarded

The assertion is made that "insufficient regard has been paid to the expert evidence given on behalf of the KRS," and in particular to the conviction expressed in the KRS memoranda that "quality of production and not quantity of production should be the basis of any future legislation."

In regard to suggested establishment of a Films Commission the point is made that "the suggestion apparently originated within the Moyne Committee and was not suggested by any section of the industry," and it is also stated, with regard to suggestions to increase the stringency of penalties for blind booking breaches, that "such a recommendation . . . is not, in our opinion, in keeping with the purpose for which the Moyne Committee was constituted."

Comments on Recommendations

In addition to these general criticisms of the Committee, the statement makes the following comments on its recommendations:

On Recommendations 1 to 3, that the Government should take steps to prevent the control of British companies passing abroad, that it should encourage financial interests to assist British production, and that the Quota principle should be maintained for a further ten years, the KRS says: "We have no comment to make."

ZUKOR'S MESSAGES SET NEW RECORD

Adolph Zukor's collection of congratulatory messages on the 25th anniversary of his entry into the motion picture business is being expanded to record proportions by daily arrivals of mail from all parts of the world. Paramount says that "the collection already constitutes the most universal tribute ever paid a motion picture executive."

More than 50 foreign countries are represented in the thousands of testimonials received since Mr. Zukor began his Silver Jubilee celebration. The greatest number of messages has come from Mexico, with Italy in second place, the two countries being represented by 500 letters, telegrams and cables. This week's messages covered seven languages in all, English, Italian, Dutch, Javanese, Chinese, Siamese and French and a gift of two specimens of Javanese art sent from Bandeong, Java.

The proposal (4) that there should be separate quotas for long and short films is opposed, the KRS expressing agreement with the CEA that shorts should be excluded from all future quota regulations, on the grounds that "the added burden of providing British shorts against foreign shorts can only end in the elimination of foreign shorts, with consequent hardship on exhibitors."

The proposed opening quota (5), under new legislation of 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors is opposed. The KRS says:

"The obligation put upon distributors of foreign films under the Act as it exists today, involving the production of as many as fifteen or eighteen feature pictures in one year, is an obligation so heavy as to be practically impossible of effective performance, and results in the present deplorable position of the obligation being met by the procuring of a large number of cheap, poor pictures which bring discredit on the British film production industry and antagonize the British cinema-going public against British pictures generally.

"An obligation which calls upon distributors to produce five or six feature pictures in the year, instead of the present fifteen or eighteen, would more effectively serve the desired purpose of securing a reasonable supply of worthwhile British pictures, provided always that it is accompanied by safeguards that this modified number of pictures are produced under conditions as to cost and otherwise that will ensure their being effective and creditable British pictures."

Quality and Quantity

The KRS statement makes the general comment, on this point, that "the quality of quota pictures was the main concern of the Moyne Committee, and it cannot be stressed too strongly that the question of quality cannot be dissociated from the question of quantity . . . the entire evidence of members of the KRS, British and American alike, from their actual practical knowledge of the film industry in this country, placed on record that the quantity of quota compulsory by law was the sole reason that made it impossible . . . to provide British pictures of quality."

Commenting on the recommendation (6) that the quota in future shall be flexible, or variable, from year to year, and that all films shall be viewed for assessment by quality, for the purpose of establishing the actual quota figure, the KRS expresses emphatic opposition, based on the fact that "they suggest a relationship between quality and quantity anticipating a quantity of quota production that any responsible person in the British industry will acknowledge to be impossible of attainment."

"We agree with the CEA," adds the statement, "that the ultimate aim of 50 per cent is perhaps nothing more than a pious expression of hope."

On recommendations of the Moyne Committee that films should be valid for exhibitors' quota without a quality test, or even if they have failed to pass such a test (which would decide only if a film should be registered for distributors' quota) the comment is:

"As the whole object is to ensure good British pictures, it seems illogical for the Moyne Committee to recommend that the exhibitor should be free to show to the British public a film so bad as not to be deemed good enough to pass for renters' (distributors') quota."

License Clause Called Harsh

Recommendation 14, that failure to comply with the distributors' quota shall entail the withdrawal of the offending company's license on one offense, instead of three as at present, brings the outspoken comment that "we find it difficult to reconcile a recommendation of this kind with the spirit of impartiality which we would expect to animate recommendations of the Committee. It is harsh in the extreme."

"We oppose as strongly as possible"—a phrase which frequently recurs in the KRS observations—is very emphatically applied to recommendations 21 and 22, which would impose the obligation upon distributors to make a statutory declaration, on registering a film, that it has not been blind booked, and increase the penalty for default to £250 in the case of distributors, while freeing exhibitors from all liability for this offense.

"The recommendation . . . might conceivably set one section of the industry against another, promoting friction, misunderstanding and ill will, and is not in keeping with the purpose for which the Moyne Committee was constituted," says the KRS.

"Contrary to the best interests of the British film industry as a whole" is the description applied to the Committee's recommendation that restrictions on advance booking shall be removed. Agreement with the CEA is expressed on this point. The F.B.I. Film Group also opposed this recommendation.

More drastic opposition is expressed to the proposal (24) that block-booking should be made an offense and that penalties for compelling an exhibitor to take one film with another should be the same as for blind booking.

"If one could conceive the recommendation as being practical . . . the Society might raise no objection but it must be considered unworkable. . . . It is regarded as a distinct violation of that freedom of action which exists between buyer and seller."

Commission Idea Criticized

The recommendation for the establishment of a Films Commission is analyzed at length and vigorously criticized by the KRS, which, after pointing out the general objection already quoted, goes on to say:

"The idea that a Films Commission would insure complete harmony among the sections of an industry which has so many complex problems is an illusion. . . . The problems affecting the industry, and which fundamentally are questions of economics, cannot be solved merely by the appointment of a Government controlling body, having power to initiate and control policies as affecting the practical operations of this great industry.

"The creation of a Films Commission composed of individuals having no relation to the film industry and . . . who have no knowledge whatsoever of the problems of this industry, is unthinkable, as it can only bring grave risks to the millions of capital involved. . . . Giving such power, having the effect of circumscribing the conditions under which films are made and financed, can only lead to a drying-up in advance of the resources necessary to the encouragement of the industry.

Sees Production Uncertainty

"No producers or financiers can be expected to plan in advance the expenditure of large sums of money if they are faced with the fact that, after spending such sums as are necessary for the making of worthwhile product, the same may be rejected by four or five persons outside the industry who may think it has not sufficient entertainment value."

Examining further the recommendation that the Films Commission should view all films, to decide which are, and which are not, eligible for quota registration, the KRS says:

"To place a task of this nature upon any Commission is one they would find impossible of fulfilment and can only lead to confusion and chaos. Experience over a long period has proven the impossibility of any persons assessing entertainment values or quality of films, having in mind the widely different tastes in entertainment for which the industry has to cater."

Comparison of the KRS statement with those already submitted by the CEA and the Film Group of the F.B.I. shows wide differences of opinion, but substantial agreement on certain points. There is unanimous opposition to a Films Commission with the powers envisaged in the Moyne Report. Exhibitors want an official Arbitration Board, to operate on matters referred to it by the trade. Producers accept the principle of a Government committee, but wish it to include trade members, to be restrained from interfering with individual companies' affairs, and to work in cooperation with an advisory trade committee.

The differentiation of quota in favor of exhibitors is accepted by CEA and Film Group and opposed by KRS.

The variability principle in regard to the quota is accepted by CEA and Film Group, but both make reservations regarding the method of applying the Quality Test, by which variability must be governed.

All three groups want the present restrictions on advance booking to be continued, opposing the Moyne recommendation in the opposite sense.

The new blind booking provisions are supported by exhibitors and producers and opposed by distributors.

The proposal to make block-booking illegal is supported by exhibitors and opposed by producers and distributors.

Exhibitors and distributors both oppose the application of the quota to shorts on the basis proposed.

Lord Moyne has been invited to the annual banquet of the CEA on March 9th, with Dr. Burgin, Parliamentary secretary to the Board of Trade.

Immediate Releases

United Artists and the Odeon circuit are planning an extension of the practice of immediate release.

A possibility is that, when the Odeon in Leicester Square is completed and becomes the main United Artists show window in London, UA may release immediately to all or some of the Odeon theatres, which soon will number 200 houses.

United Artists officials emphasize that any steps taken will be experimental.

Immediate release has been given by Gaumont-British to certain of its own films in some of its own theatres.

New York Labor Scale Up March 15

Annual negotiations on wage scales and other matters which come under provisions of the five-year basic agreement between producers and studio labor unions are to open in New York about March 15th. Pat Casey, producers' labor representative, is expected in Manhattan from Hollywood in about two weeks to prepare for the annual sessions, which are attended by company heads and top officials of the studio labor unions, such as the International Alliance of Theatrical, Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, Independent Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Teamsters', Carpenters and Joiners, and Musicians.

Efforts to have painters and commercial laboratory workers included under the basic agreement may be made by representatives of those groups, but some doubt is expressed by home office labor officials as to whether or not the forthcoming meeting can properly consider the requests at this time. The basic agreement was made for a five-year period and does not provide for bringing additional unions into the pact prior to negotiations for its renewal.

MGM Uses Army And Navy for 2-Reel Preview

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, on Tuesday, "engaged" the United States Navy, the United States Coast Guard, the National Park Commission and the United States Army to stage a screening of its new two-reel motion picture, "Servant of the People."

A United States Navy destroyer, the S.S. Tappernall, transported a group of newspapermen and trade paper representatives from Manhattan Island to New York's upper bay, where a Coast Guard cutter stood by to carry the party to adjacent Fort Wood and Bedloe's Island. There, in the damp Revolutionary Guard Room under the foundation of the Statue of Liberty, they screened the subject, in the full publicity flavor of official governmental sanction.

"Servant of the People" was first made to commemorate the anniversary of the drafting of the United States Constitution, but in view of the unusual interest created of late in the Constitution by "New Deal" governmental procedure, MGM decided that its two-reeler contained more than the patriotic significance which they had at first attached to it.

MGM sets forth in the subject "the facts and circumstances" which led to the framing of the Constitution, starting with the Revolution of 1776. The picture tends to indicate that America's forefathers intended that the document should be changed to conform with the times.

According to the Department of Community Service of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, which worked for and with Metro in tying-in the governmental forces on Tuesday for the ballyhoo launching of the reel, "Servant of the People" comes "at a time when the American public, as perhaps it has never been before, is interested in the document on which the whole structure of its government is reared."

The picture had been completed several weeks ago in time for the 150th anniversary of the Constitution, but was held for release until now. It anticipated consequently rather than reflects the current discussions of relationship between the three branches of the government—executive, legislative and judiciary. It is advanced by MGM as "a contribution to the public's basic understanding of the Constitutional situation and the human elements that entered into its drafting." In casting, the company sought to obtain character actors who would reflect the personalities of the Constitution, and so it is produced throughout in the post-Revolutionary costume period.

George Kraska of the Fine Arts theatre in Boston has purchased the American rights to "Loves of Beethoven," produced by General Film Company in France.

IMPROVED CHINESE PRODUCT MAKES HEAVY INROAD INTO FOREIGN PROFIT

[Special Correspondence from Shanghai]

The steady improvement of native product in China is confirmed by developments of the first month of the new year. The leading Chinese studios have brought out some outstanding pictures in the past season, and while technical quality still is pronouncedly lacking, popularity and distribution have gone to limits never before attained.

Native films are doing excellent business, and the exhibition income from Chinese product far outstrips that of foreign films. While figures for comparison cannot be obtained, one well-known native film executive has said that at least one producer will show a net income of over C.$1,000,000, with others not far under that figure.

Comparing this with the estimated net return of American films, which is sent out of China, about C.$1,500,000 for all the eight large American distributors, it is easily seen how greatly Chinese product appeals to the public as compared with foreign films.

The truth is that, except in the larger treaty ports, foreign films have been displaced by native productions, and in at least two-thirds of the cinemas, Chinese product, silent or sound, runs a full 100 per cent of the time, interspersed with native "opera" or stage shows.

In comparison of quantity the foreign films of course run four to five times as many features passed by the National government censors, but quantity in this case is offset by the greater number of outlets, longer playing time and the mass attendance that Chinese films get.

All in all, Chinese producers have little to fear from foreign competition, except in the larger cities, and even there, by far and large, the foreign film runs only about 50 per cent of quantity available into anything further than third run.

Still Want Quotas

But with all this, the Chinese producers still press for quotas, and it is expected that, before much longer, cinemas under Chinese ownership will be compelled to show at least two native films a month. This would seem a heavy quota for a country like China, but the restriction would be felt only in the larger cinemas which now run 100 per cent foreign product. One of the most successful exhibitors in Shanghai has said that the cinemas under control of his company could profitably support two Chinese films a month were such available for first release, and if his foreign film obligations permitted such play-time. It is reasonable to suppose that within the next year some large first run cinemas will make contracts only on a basis of allowing time for native product.

It is further believed by many that agitation against Hollywood-Chinese films has been stirred up by Chinese producers, who fear that the advent of the more technically perfect foreign product, when coupled with Chinese subject matter, will displace the poorer-quality native films in many cinemas now 100 per cent native exhibitors. However, this is more conjecture than fact, since a perusal of coming foreign film titles shows very little product directly concerned with Chinese subject matter, or, if it has, small chance of passing the Government censors, even when every effort has been made to make such a film historically correct in fact and story.

SUSPENDED ACTORS WARNED BY EQUITY

Actors now under suspension by Actors Equity for failing to join the Screen Actors Guild while working in motion pictures in Hollywood were warned in the February issue of Equity Magazine, published this week, that reinstatement would not be easy.

The warning came in the form of an editorial which stated that those who ignored the warning were endangering their screen careers. It went on to point out that neither Equity nor the Guild will accept as a member any actor in bad standing in his own organization.

Too Costly to Produce

The sad results of foreign producers' attempts to make films in China are only too well known to give encouragement to further efforts along such lines. No American producer successfully could make a film in China under present conditions, no matter how willing he might be to conform with all the rules and regulations. Mere delays would run up a cost in salaries and expenses that would be unendurable even to the strongest finances, and "delays," due to various official, semi-official, local and other reasons, have kept many a cameraman cooling his heels in anterooms or on location with his camera standing idle 75 per cent of the time.

China has lost much good publicity by the petty restrictions placed upon foreign news cameramen at great national events, even to the exclusion of foreign crews when Chinese held the field. However, the poor quality of native news film turned out at the recent Silver Jubilee of the Chinese Republic stirred government officials into action, and it is expected that in the future the native newsreel will have to show better quality both in photography and sound, or foreign men will be given opportunity to cover such events. At present the homemade product is so poor that but for practically enforced showing in cinemas in China it is useless, and certainly so for exportation.

Tax Increase Feared

The former Canton censor fees and quotas having been removed, first-run houses now are showing more foreign product, but subsequent runs are still playing as many native films as possible, and considerable difficulty is being experienced in getting exhibitors to observe contractual requirements made on foreign film contracts. Anxiety has been expressed by Canton exhibitors in regard to the proposed new tax increase, bringing theatre business tax to 17 per cent of the gross. Also, some exhibitors express doubt as to the popularity of native product if it is all to be made in accordance with the official mandate that only the official "mandarin" language may be used, since the Canton dialect is distinctly different and it will be a long time until educational possibilities make the Nanking Chinese language common all over China. However, as in foreign films, this is a difficulty that can be partly overcome by superimposed titles, since the printed character Chinese is the same all over China.

In the north—Peiping and Tientsin—exhibition has been in difficulties due to local unrest and military operations. Business there is far below normal, and prospects are gloomy for foreign films. Even native product cinemas failed of any improvement in 1936, with perhaps a few exceptions on outstanding productions.

Ten U. S. Features Rejected

In the last calendar year the Central Film Censorship Committee at Nanking received for censorship 351 foreign features and five serial-features. Of these, 323 were submitted by the eight large American producers, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, MGM, RKO-Radio, Universal, United Artists (including U. A. British releases) and Warner Bros., First National; one feature of independent American origin; 12 features of U. S. S. R.; nine British; five French and one German.

Of the 323 American features by large producers, 10 were banned and two were still under advisement at the beginning of the year. The banned features were: "East of Java" (Universal), "Dracula's Daughter" (Universal), "Flash Gordon" (Universal), "Green Pastures" (Warner), "Sons o' Guns" (Warner), "Devil Doll" (MGM), "All American Chump" (MGM), "Panic on the Air" (Columbia), "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" (UA), and "Don't Turn 'Em Loose" (RKO).

"Frankenstein" (Universal) was barred when the three-year license period expired, and "Legion of Terror" (Columbia) and "Theodora Goes Wild" (Columbia) were the two features held for further action.

Reasons for Rejections

The reasons the pictures were barred were these: "Dracula's Daughter" and "Frankenstein" as "horror" films; films dealing with excessive cruelty or brutality "Legion of Terror" and "Don't Turn 'Em Loose" for dealing with excessive cruelty or bestiality, "Devil Doll," "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" and "Green Pastures" for featuring supernatural scenes, "Sons o' Guns" for objections raised by the German government representative in China, "East of Java" and "Panic on the Air" for showing Chinese in menial positions, and so on. "Theodora Goes Wild" was held up because of a few scenes allegedly representing a Chinese waiter in foreign clothes!

No British features were banned, nor as yet have any Soviet features suffered anything more than delays and cutting.

Fifty new Chinese features were passed by the government censors.

Foreign short product approximated 190 two-reelers; 430 one-reelers, and 175 newsreels, of which American major product took 174 two-reelers, 412 one-reelers, and 168 newsreels in 1936.

Norman Westwood was accorded several big ovations on his retirement from Universal, as one of the best known and pioneer distributor representatives in China.

DISAGREES ON SERIALS FOR ADULTS

FINDS MAGAZINE AND RADIO NOT PARALLEL

To the Editor of the Herald:

In a recent issue of Motion Picture Herald you published a letter from Mr. Ted Stump of the Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont., on the subject of 'Adult Serials.' Without wishing to monopolize your column with the discussions of one particular subject I should, however, like to mention a few of the arguments against this rather interesting idea.

Some years ago I also thought with Mr. Stump that such an innovation as 'Adult Serials' would be most advantageous from a box office standpoint. More mature consideration must reveal major objections which in my opinion will make this realization impossible or relegate it to the far distant future.

The argument for 'Adult Serials' is based on two supposedly parallel forms of entertainment: (1) Magazine circulation increased by serials; (2) popular radio programs of a serialized nature. These arguments appear to me to be easily disposed of. Magazines may be purchased at any time during the current period of issue and it is even possible to obtain back copies which the reader has missed. Magazines may be read at the purchaser's leisure, in his own home, without involving the necessity of attendance at any outside meeting place for the continuance of the story. Magazines can be read by all manner of people, sick or infirm without undue effort. A serial used in a theatre forces the interested person to attend that theatre on specific nights regardless of health, inconvenience or forgetfulness. These interruptions to the continuity of the story will eventually make the patron give up in disgust and will even provide annoyance when he visits the theatre at some future date to see a chapter which has lost its continuity interest.

Radio serials are more nearly comparable to theatre 'chapter plays.' But here again the convenience of the listener is a factor. All the radio fan has to do is to remember the day and the time of the broadcast and stay at home. The theatre serial involves the remembrance of the day and also involves the actual phyical exertion of going out of the house. A further point to remember in these radio serials is that they fall into two categories; the straight continuous story form and the character episodic form of serial. A good example of this latter type is 'Amos and Andy.' This latter type is really not a serial at all, but is often considered as such.

One other major point to remember about theatre serials is that the patron who follows each episode closely is forced to watch a resume of the preceding chapters each week before he can begin to enjoy the current installment. Producers have even found it necessary, up till now, to repeat a few minutes of the preceding chapter's action. Now this enforced revision of the preceding action does not apply to the magazine reader. He can skip it or read as much of it as he wishes. Even the radio fan can tune out any continuity he does not wish to hear.

It must also be borne in mind that the variation of state, provincial and national laws regarding the attendance of children at the theatres tends to make the Saturday matinee the most usual child attendance period. It is therefore not hard for children to follow serials. Any child interested in a serial invariably sees it on Saturday afternoon. Therefore children are not so subject to the 'time' and 'forgetfulness' element as are adults.

Perhaps in the far distant future when our lives are controlled entirely by Government edict and the Government itself is making the serials, we will all have to attend the local theatre on specific nights as ordered by the local Government regulations. Serials will then be the main bill-of-fare. But it won't be any fun running a theatre.—H. C. Deacon Main, Manager, Grand Theatre, Sudbury, Ontario, Canada.

ONE WAY NOT TO RUN CHANCE GAMES

To the Editor of the Herald

I sincerely believe that the following statement will be of interest to you and to all the exhibitors in the business today.

Exhibitors Take Notice

Don't kill the goose that laid the golden egg. The influx of money prize games into the independent theatres has been a lifesaver to 95 per cent of exhibitors. These games will continue to bring them in so long as the exhibitor will be fair and square with himself.

A week ago an exhibitor came to me and told me he was giving out $40 each night at his theatre and that he was doing fairly good business. I immediately asked him how he could afford to give away $40 every night and show a profit in a 500-seat theatre. "Well," he said, "my sister wins the first prize of $25 the first week, my brother the second week, and so on. After five weeks I start all over again. But how long can this go on before the public gets wise? The exhibitor will not only ruin it for himself but for other exhibitors also.

I hope that you will take it upon yourself to write an article of your own on this subject, as it will enlighten some exhibitors and maybe they will take heed.—Benjamin B. Resnick, Regent Theatre, 1215 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Resnick's suggestion is article enough. It is not the opinion of the editor that anything will ever be good for the motion picture theatre but motion pictures. Motion Picture Herald's disapproval of gambling devices and lotteries under any subterfuge whatever in connection with the theatre has been declared often, and in connection with its repeated announcement of refusal to accept advertising related to such devices. The practice discussed in this letter is a commonplace of the lottery business and presumably adds nothing to the repute of a theatre which has already aligned itself with the gambling business. —T. R.

"GOT TO GIVE THEM WHAT THEY WANT"

I read with interest an article by Mr. Reid, lamenting the fact that the present films produced were showing too many bare backs. We readers wonder if there isn't some room for discussion?

Two years ago we played "Sunnyside Up," a real good picture, but too much of the gay nineties, thus resulting in a disastrous box office. The present-day costume pictures for small towns don't prove popular with us. Even our farmer friends like the bare backs. They like to see the cowboys get all slicked up to win the backless gowned daughter of a wealthy visitor from the city.

Just picture beautiful Myrna Loy, Madeleine Carroll or Jeanette MacDonald in clothes that do not reveal their backs and they certainly would lose their box office appeal, as the largest percentage of showgoers are the younger folks. They seem to demand these smart set scenes. You can't educate them; you've got to give them what they want.

Some time ago I had a chat with our local minister, who immediately entered into conversation on the types of pictures that were being shown the younger folks—scantily dressed women, cocktail scenes and suggestive situations. Ending his long-drawn-out interview with "I don't know what is becoming of the young people of today." I agreed, and thought his suggestions were quite right. Being thoroughly diplomatic, I asked him, "If you were in my shoes as a showman, what would you do?" This seemed to be just what he was waiting for. "Well," he said, "I would play pictures such as these: 'Alice in Wonderland,' 'Mickey Mouse,' 'Travelogue,' 'History pictures' (such as the life of Abraham Lincoln) and some of the better English classics." On parting I told him I appreciated his interest and suggestions, whispering to myself, "You would certainly know how to starve to death."

Pictures seem to go in cycles. The smart set seem to be the ones they want at present. The Decency League have done a lot for pictures, but they still like a bare back.

Ted Stump goes to New York. Give him lots of hope because he's got the right idea on serials.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

Gallup Joins General

Bruce Gallup, former director of publicity and exploitation for United Artists and Columbia, has been signed by Fenn Kimball of General Pictures to handle the advertising and exploitation of General's initial production, "Three Legionnaires." Frank Pope, also, has turned in his screen treatment of his original story, "Let's All Sing," which General has set for production.

CENTRAL EUROPEANS PROTEST INCREASED LENGTHS OF FILMS

Exhibitors Want Shorter Features Because Profit Lies in More Performances, Says Michael Havas of RKO

by ENDRE HEVESI

in Budapest

The fact that Hollywood productions are increasing in running time has augmented the problems raised before distributors overseas by the efforts of foreign countries to develop their own production activities and the restrictions against money exportations, according to Michael Havas, Central European manager of RKO, now in Budapest after a tour of Central Europe. RKO, at the start of operations in these countries but two years ago, adopted a policy of distributing comparatively few pictures but carefully selected, and Mr. Havas said that this plan has proved itself.

But not without difficulties has the fight for profits been carried on. Of the general situation Mr. Havas told me:

"Everybody in the film business in America knows that the Central European market is becoming more and more difficult every year. It is generally assumed that this fact is due to two reasons: the development of local production and to the payment difficulties resulting from currency restrictions. These two reasons have been widely discussed by American trade papers.

"But the third reason is not so generally known. This is that films made in Hollywood are becoming longer and longer.

"Now the Central European exhibitors prefer short features because most of them can make profits only by having three or four performances a day and five performances on Sundays. They helped themselves in the past by cutting unimportant parts out of the longer pictures, but now Hollywood scenarios are written in a way which makes it very difficult, if not wholly impossible, to cut out parts without damaging the unity and the artistic harmony of the picture. Besides, in most cases the companies forbid their local branches to cut any parts out of the films."

Mr. Havas went on to give me highlights of the film situation in the various Central European countries, as follows:

AUSTRIA

"The first half of the year 1936 was more successful for the American companies than the second part, when several American firms had not chosen their products carefully enough and had imported many pictures which were not suitable for this market. The most important city from the viewpoint of the film market is Vienna, which numbers two million inhabitants. The theatre situation is such that all American pictures are presented simultaneously in two to four first run-houses seating 400 to 600 persons. This is disadvantageous because the importing taxes on a film have to be paid according to the number of prints and a picture running in three prints has to pay inordinately more than one running in one or two prints only. Film conditions in Vienna would be much healthier if a few big deluxers would be built, but unfortunately for the moment there is not much prospect as to this.

"The Austrian Government is now striving to induce the American film companies to have some of their products dubbed into German in Vienna. But this is difficult because films dubbed into German in Austria are not allowed to be imported into Germany and it is practically impossible to import them to Czechoslovakia. So their only market, beside the small Austrian one, is Switzerland. It would pay to dub films into German only if the Austrian Government raised the bonus given to films dubbed in Vienna. In this case RKO would consent to have part of its productions dubbed in Austria, and this example would probably be followed by other companies,

BUDAPEST CENSOR LIFTS BAN ON NAVAL PICTURE

One of the last official acts of Minister of the Interior Nicholas Kozma in Budapest before he resigned was to cancel the ban on the American picture, "Born to Dance." The Budapest censor had rejected the picture as contrary to military discipline and therefore damaging to the prestige of the American Navy.

"The greatest difficulties here are the strict currency restriction and the rapidly developing local production. Thirty to 40 Hungarian pictures will be made during the season 1937-38. This increase will mean that the programs of movies in small country towns will be entirely filled with Hungarian films and that American pictures will have less chance of being sold there. Only Budapest and the bigger provincial towns would be the market left for American films, but even in these cities there is a growing preference for Hungarian-speaking films among the more intelligent patrons. Therefore the American companies had better import a smaller number of films than in the past, and these should be carefully chosen.

"This is quite a good market and very favourable for American pictures. New movies are being built, too. The greatest trouble is the heavy taxation. A cheap ticket costs 1 zloty (1 zloty is 20 cents) plus 0.15 zloty which is handed over to the Red Cross and the Unemployment Fund. From 1 zloty, 37.5 per cent has to be paid for taxes, so that only 0.625 zloty is left to the exhibitor. He has to pay the percentage due to the distributor from this remaining amount. In this way the distributor gets as litle as 0.18 to 0.24 zloty. That means 16 to 23 per cent of the whole ticket price (1.15 zloty) paid by the moviegoer. This amount is much less than the usual sum paid for American films as percentage in other countries.

"Owing to the big competition, exhibitors have to spend vast sums on advertising, and in order to exploit a film thoroughly they have to show four programs on weekdays and six performances on Sunday.

Restrictions on Money Exports and Desire to Aid Domestic Production Are but Part of Americans' Problem

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

"This country is an excellent market for American pictures, although the American companies ruined this market for themselves in 1935, when, after a boycott of three years, they flooded the market with the product made during three years. Even this excellent market was unable to consume such a big quantity of pictures, and the result was a considerable fall in prices. Now at last conditions are normal again, and although local production is developing rapidly, American pictures are gaining ground and they play a dominant role on the Czech market. This is one of the few European countries where we can talk of prosperity; economic conditions are good, audiences favour American films more and more. There are big possibilities for American pictures in this country during the coming season.

YUGOSLAVIA

"All attempts to create local production in this country are in a beginning stage yet, so that for a long period there is no danger of such competition. The market is good but it is small. Only two big cities, Belgrade and Zagreb, come into consideration from the point of view of American films. Each has ten first-run theatres.

GERMANY

"Owing to the rigorous currency restrictions, American companies may import films to this country but they may not take out money from the country. American companies may not even pay their traveling executives' expenses in Germany though there may be a big sum of frozen marks at their command. The big American features have high box-office takings and take away a considerable market from the local films. But German exhibitors need the American pictures all the same to make their programs varied.

Do Own Exploitation

"Our experience in the above mentioned countries taught us that it is to our advantage to do the exploitation of our films ourselves, even in the countries where we have no local branch but distribute our products through an independent local distributor. A special department had to be created for this purpose and Eugen Scharin, heading it, is constantly traveling as Continental exploitation manager. He succeeded in building up Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers so well that the pictures starring them have the highest box-office yieldings in entire Central Europe."

Mr. Scharin added this later:

"Few films with European subject are made in Hollywood and even these are not always satisfactory in the eyes of European audiences. If Hollywood studios would buy good original European scenarios instead of making the screen versions of successful European plays or books, they would achieve more satisfactory results. A good original European scenario would better fulfill the requirements of European audiences than the American versions of European books in which there are often mistakes in the details.

"It is important that more pictures suitable for the taste of European audiences be made."

FIRST "STATE" THEATRE PLANS NEW SEASON

Rockefeller Aids Washington Project of Department of Education and Seattle Repertory

by W. A. PRAGER
in Seattle

With its first season drawing to a close, America's first venture into the field of a State Theatre has been "highly successful" and will be continued, according to Bertram Boog, Seattle actor and spokesman for the Washington State Theatre. Motion picture exhibitors have been studying this new form of competition.

The venture was originated last fall following a grant of $35,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation. The grant was offered to finance a three-year experiment in the state-sponsored theatre field. It was accepted jointly by Washington's state department of education and Seattle's Repertory Playhouse.

The Repertory Playhouse, under the direction of Burton James, asembled a cast of professional actors and selected Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" as the play to be produced for the first season. It previously had been produced locally and presented before many of the Seattle public schools by the Repertory Playhouse.

37,000 See Performances

The grant of the Rockefeller Foundation and the cooperation of the state department of education was enlisted in order to test the project fully throughout all parts of the state, and in order to carry legitimate drama to school children and adults who otherwise would not be able to see such presentations.

For six weeks, the company toured the state of Washington and presented "A Comedy of Errors" more than 50 times before approximately 30,000 students at matinee performances and 7,000 adults at evening performances. Cities visited ranged in population from 5,000 to 100,000, and included such towns as Aberdeen, Hoquiam, Vancouver, Olympia, Everett, Wenatchee. Matinee performances at schools were given without charge. Evening showings at auditoriums and halls throughout the state netted about $8,000. Performances were once given before inmates of the federal penitentiary at McNeil Island and the state penitentiary at Walla Walla. The largest audience of the tour was at Vancouver, where 1,600 students were in attendance.

Spring Tour Is Set

In his report to the state department of education Director James revealed that a spring tour starting later this month and running through March will include 20 more performances than scheduled for the first fall tour. The spring trip will include one appearance in Idaho and another in Oregon, to show other Northwest states what the Washington State Theatre is doing. For its second year, to begin next September, the group will attempt to make three complete tours with an entirely new group of plays.

GOVERNMENT SUBSIDY URGED

Government subsidy was suggested as a means of reviving American theatre made decadent through high prices which are a barrier to the masses, by Elmer Rice, playwright, to an audience in the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. in Wilmington, Del. High prices make it impossible for the majority of persons to attend, he declared.

Those able to pay the prices, he continued, are a conservative class not interested in plays depicting class struggle or other serious themes.

Mr. Rice explained the talking picture reaches the masses, but the theatre will decline until it can also reach this audience. High costs of play production make this unlikely unless there is government subsidy of the theatre, he pointed out.

Chief difficulties reported by the State Theatre troupe were lack of advance preparation in the school auditoriums, poor acoustics in many halls and classrooms, and a general lack of proper buildings or auditoriums in most smaller cities for presentation to the adult public.

Statewide Scope Now

Mr. Boog, whose professional name is Frederick Banker and who has appeared on Broadway, in stock in various cities and in Hollywood films, said that an attempt will be made to have this first State Theatre venture on a self-supporting basis within three years.

"Is was through our original presentation of a series of Shakespeare's plays at the Seattle Playhouse that we were able to bring the idea of an educational state theatre to fruition," Mr. Boog said. "The Rockefeller grant has enabled the Repertory Playhouse to increase its scope to a statewide radius, and the cooperation of the state department of education has enabled us to reach the audiences desired for this experiment.

"So successful has the plan been that inquiries have come from all parts of the country, and as far afield as the Philippine islands," Mr. Boog added. "The players themselves are tremendously interested in the venture, being willing to endure certain discomforts in travel and living quarters, and accepting very small remuneration for their efforts."

Rene Clair, French director who made "Sous Les Toits de Paris," "Le Million" and "A Nous La Liberte," has been decorated with the medal of La Legion d'Honneur by the French Government.

U.S. Films Lead In Argentina

by N. BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

American films dominate the Argentine market, a survey covering importations for the last 11 months shows. Of 468 features released in this city from January 1, 1936 to November 31, 1936, 332 were American, 34 German, 30 English, 20 French, 17 Spanish, 6 Italian and 17 were produced in Argentina. Domestic production is expected to total 34 in 1937.

In comparison with the same period of 1935, American product showed a decrease of about 10 per cent, English films increased from 17 to 30, gains were shown also by French and Spanish product, while Germany's imports declined.

The public here on the whole is indifferent to domestic product, which cannot be compared in quality to that of the United States or other countries. Even the native language used in the home product has failed to compensate for its production weakness.

American product has been affected to a certain extent during the past year by rumors that the Government is giving serious consideration to the establishment of quota regulations on foreign product. It has been pointed out, however, that in view of the weak state of production here, such legislation would be definitely harmful. A more useful alternative has been suggested in the form of custom duty exemption on machinery and raw materials used in production.

U. S. PICTURES HAVE HEAD START IN FAVOR WITH PALESTINE PUBLIC

Market Declared Ripe for Independents with Alert Representatives; Censors Are Centrally Organized

by ISAAC R. MOLHO
in Jerusalem

Palestine is a mandated territory under the supervision of Great Britain, and is the most important market in the Middle East for talking pictures in the English language, Egypt excepted.

As the central meeting place of several roads and cultures, this land where the International Jewry is cooperating to establish a national home for the Jewish people, contains, on the two sides of the Jordan, a population calculated at 1,600,000 inhabitants. Three hundred thousand Arabs, semi-nomads, are in the poor desert land of Transjordan. The Jews, about 400,000, are concentrated mostly in the valley of Saron, at Esdraelon, Upper and Lower Galilee, Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa, forming the best center of the Levant. The future appears to be more and more important with the increasing resources and enlarged Jewish national activities.

The yearly turnover in film business totals a million dollars in box-office incomes, with 35 theatres in all the territory. This figure is twice the yearly turnover of cinema business in countries like Iraq, with a population of three millions.

While no exact statistics or correct records are available as yet, it seems certain that the absorption capacity of the market lies between 250 to 300 programs yearly. Each program consists of a feature of 8 to 12 reels, with usually two or three additional reels as follows: One local newsreel attached sometimes to European news imported weekly by airmail from Fox or Gaumont British of London, or from Paramount, Paris; a comic in one or two reels or a sport subject, traveltalk, topical, black and white or colored shorts. Walt Disney shorts are the most appreciated. Double feature programs scarcely are used and the same is true in first run houses for serials or western pictures.

American Product Leads

The distributors' returns on flat rentals or percentages of the incomes, excluding municipal taxes and stamps, total between $325,000 and $350,000. MGM is on the top with figures exceeding $40,000, closely followed by Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, United Artists, RKO and Warner Bros.

Continental producers cannot hope to distribute as many pictures as the American companies. MGM, for example, has about 30 programs at an average of $1,500. Some German and Russian talking pictures, like "Peter," have reached greater figures, but this is a direct effect of the special clientele recruited in the Jewish communities of Tel Aviv and Haifa, residents of which are chiefly of Central and Eastern European origin.

URGES RENTAL CUTS IN TIMES OF STRESS

"Film companies share with us when our business is good, through percentage pictures. Now that the box offices in Kansas City have a bad case of cold weather and flu, why don't they give us a reduction on flat rentals," wondered Jay Means of the Oak Park and Bagdad there this week.

Mr. Means' suggestion was said to be echoed by many other exhibitors in Kansas City whose grosses have been feeling the effects of weather and ill health the past month.

Praised and liked after the war, the German-made product now is boycotted due to the Nazi movement against the Jews.

The oldest distribution company established in this country is the Metro office, which for years directly handled the Syria, Iraq and Iran (Persia) branches.

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Bros. also have exchanges in Palestine, but the head office still remains in Egypt. United Artists, RKO and Gaumont British have other arrangements through Egypt. The same is true of Universal. Columbia and Republic are operating through Continental offices which annually sell their rights to the highest bidder.

It seems clear that a good open market exists for independent producers and small companies, making films of good taste, who can be put in touch with active representatives, having good connections with the cinema owners.

Regulations in force are the following:

Every foreign or local company incorporated in Palestine, establishing a place of business, must be registered. Applications may be made to the registrar of companies.

Applications for trademarks, patents and designs, carried out by a local patent and trademark agent, must be submitted to the Registrar of trademarks, patents and designs.

Palestine adheres to the International Copyright Law for protection of literary and artistic property.

The basic customs tariff applied to films, per kilogram, is as follows:

Central Board of Censorship

The Central Censorship Board, established in Jerusalem and nominated by the High Commissioner, is composed of the deputy district commissioner, members of the educational department, police, chief secretariat, Chamber of Commerce, and at least one must be a woman.

No cinematograph film shall be exhibited unless it shall have been authorized for exhibition by the Board .

Any person desiring to exhibit a film may apply in writing to the Board stating the title, number of reels, producer, and story, with photographs and posters. He shall, if required, project the film before the Board. If rejected, the duty paid on the introduction of the film into Palestine may be refunded, after exportation of the print.

Every feature, serial or short subject pays one Palestine pound tariff. The Palestine pound is equal to sterling and is divided into 1,000 mils.

Every newsreel must pay a fee of 100 mils.

It is expected that the Government will agree soon to exempt educational films from payment of customs duty.

Under the customs regulations it is possible to export a print from Palestine and reimport it without duty, unless it is reimported within one year from the date of export, and provided the director of customs is satisfied that the print reimported is identical.

Transjordan is a poor Arab district with a single theatre, in Amman. Most of the Moslem Arabs do not respond to the international good picture appeal. Only Westerns, serials and very exciting films are wanted by the people of the Amman, Nablus and Tulkarem areas.

Where the Arab population is mixed with Christians the conditions are well improved. This is the case with Jaffa, Acre and Nazareth, which was endowed recently with a small theatre. Bethlehem, a rich Christian village, does not have a theatre.

No Theatre Circuits

There are no circuits in Palestine. The Palestine Cinema Circuit, initiated last year by a New York attorney and his partners, is in dissolution now after a large loss. We do have the same cinema owners for two or three theatres in Tel Aviv, or in Haifa.

In order of importance the three key towns for first-runs are Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem.

The town of Tel Aviv, the one 100 per cent Jewish town in the world, is 26 years old and has a population of 150,000. It represents in the map of our industry an activity approaching that of Alexandria, Egypt, and surpasses the volume of business of the important Middle East towns such as Teheran in Iran, Bagdad in Iraq, Damascus in Syria and Beyrouth in the Lebanon. Five theatres in Tel Aviv are operating as first-run and two others are open-air and second-run. The best situated one is the Opera Mograby with 1,100 seats. Ophir is the most uptodate, with Carrier central cooling and heating apparatus. Eden, the oldest theatre in Tel Aviv, is known for the excellency of its exploitation methods.

In Haifa, the Armon and Orah newsreel theatres opened recently with more than 1200 seats each, and are the most luxurious houses in the Middle East.

Jerusalem has three big theatres. Zion is the most central with 1,150 seats, Edison is the largest in Palestine with more than 1,400 seats, and the Eden belonging to an American.

Bureau of Mines Films Shown to 7,252,319

A survey recently completed by the United States Bureau of Mines shows that industrial films loaned out by the department were shown on 84,783 occasions to an aggregate audience of 7,252,319 persons during 1936. The film library includes 3,000 reels and represents an expenditure by American industries of over a million dollars. All expenses incidental to the production of the films and copies furnished the Bureau for distribution are paid for by the cooperating industrial agency. The reels are loaned free of charge except for transportation to educational institutions, engineering societies and civic, military and religious organizations.

Complete 111 Features During Three Months

A total of 111 productions were completed during the three-months period from October 1 to December 31, 1936, by 16 producers in Hollywood, according to the latest Technical Credits Bulletin of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, just issued. The total represents the year's production peak, 109 having been finished during the third quarter, 91 in the second and 92 in the first.

Individual credits for 421 technicians are included in the bulletin. The program breakdown is as follows: Columbia, 12; Cosmopolitan, 1; Larry Darmour, 4; Douglas MacLean, 1; Major, 1; MGM, 8; Paramount, 9; Republic, 17; Radio, 13; Samuel Goldwyn, 2; B. P. Schulberg, 2; Selznick International, 1; Twentieth Century-Fox, 19; Universal, 7; Walter Wanger, 1; Warners, 13.

Greek Regulations Limit Film Imports

New import regulations promulgated by the Greek Government and which went into effect on January 1st fix an annual import maximum for motion pictures which will be distributed among established film importers on the basis of their average annual importations from May, 1932, to May, 1936, according to a Department of Commerce report from Athens. Films were previously exempt from restrictions and American pictures accounted for about 75 per cent of the total.

The new regulations limit film imports to 210 complete pictures every six months. Of these 150 are to be pictures suitable for exhibition in first run houses in Athens and the remainder are to be action films suitable for showing in second run theatres. Exchanges will be required to file a declaration given the name of the theatre for which a film to be imported is intended.

"Fire Over England" Wins League Medal

"Fire Over England," the Erich Pommer production which Alexander Korda is releasing through United Artists, has been awarded the 1937 Gold Medal by the Motion Picture Division of the League of Nations in Geneva. This is the third consecutive year that producers affiliated with United Artists have carried off the honor, David O. Selznick having won it for his production of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and King Vidor the year before with "Our Daily Bread."

Lesser Signs With BIP For Arlen Films

Sol Lesser, arriving in New York from London last week, announced he had signed with John Maxwell whereby British International Pictures will release three Richard Arlen outdoor features in England this season. Mr. Lesser also closed with Oscar Straus, Viennese composer, to write the music for two pictures, one of which will star Bobby Breen.

"The situation in England is good," the producer said, "for the exhibitors are prosperous and they don't have to struggle for the right kind of product, as do American exhibitors. There is a definite demand for American pictures."

Grand National at Production Peak

With studio activities established under one roof at the recently acquired Educational Studios in Hollywood, Edward J. Peskay, Grand National executive, returned to New York this week with word that production activities had reached a new peak. Mr. Peskay said Grand National had four pictures in the cutting room; finishing touches are now being put on the script of Zion Myers' initial release, "A Thousand Dollar Bill"; Victor Schertzinger's "Something to Sing About" will start shortly and "Love in a Daze" goes into work February 15. George Hirliman's production, "Gold," and Edward Finney's "Hittin' the Trail" are to start soon.

RECORD

A record, once written, is unchangeable. On it reputations rise or fall, and all the assets and profits in the world cannot erase one spot from a spotty record.

It is now a matter of record that Ross Federal, through the application of its trained, experienced executive and field organizations, has earned the respect and patronage of many of the most outstanding business firms in the country—firms who have become steady, consistent clients of Ross Federal.

For seven years this company has been constantly building and improving its various services to the Motion Picture Industry, Newspapers, Magazines, Manufacturers, Radio Stations, Advertisers and Advertising Agencies. The past seven years have seen the founding of Ross Federal Service, Inc., then the organization of its successful affiliate, Ross Federal Research Corporation, and finally the addition of many other services, including the Outdoor Advertising Checking Service.

Resolved to continue its operations on a sound, confidence-inspiring basis—the only policy that makes for a good record—Ross Federal faces this and future years with justifiable optimism.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Columbia

AVENGING WATERS: Ken Maynard—Played this one week after Ziegfeld on a weekend, showing 30 per cent greater profit. That's all one can ask for. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS: Richard Arlen, Charlotte Wynters—Fell just short of clicking. Somehow it wouldn't "jell." Arlen miscast. However, there were bits of brilliant performance now and then. —C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre. Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: John Boles, Rosalind Russell—Excellent. Ending seemed to be chopped off but it pleased. Print not so good, and that is unusual for Columbia, as their prints are usually good. Played February 3-4.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: John Boles, Rosalind Russell—If your patrons go for heavy drama with little or no comedy to relieve it, play this one. Our patrons do not care for it, and are showing it by their absence. We played this as a special attraction but the cheapest sort of an action picture would have doubled our receipts and quadrupled our profits. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 5-6.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LEGION OF TERROR: Bruce Cabot, Marguerite Churchill—Small scale production and story. Where a big story existed they have only produced a run-of-the-mill programmer. Will suit action fans. Played January 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LEGION OF TERROR: Bruce Cabot, Marguerite Churchill—A very good action picture. Played January 22-23.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

MORE THAN A SECRETARY: Jean Arthur, George Brent—Disappointing. Not what we expected and failed to draw any comment. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 31.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND, THE: Harry Richman, Rochelle Hudson, Walter Connolly—Just a little late, but was a good show and average business for the average crowd. Played December 8-9.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—Something new in Bing Crosby stories and it's good. Songs and cast are fine and help plenty in rounding out a neat piece of film fun. We should see Madge Evans more often. Slightly increased box office value over average. Played January 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—This is better than average entertainment, but lacks the punch necessary for an outstanding production. However, our patrons seemed to like it, and the song numbers were especially good. Better than average business. Played January 28-29.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Finis Barton—This star should become one of the outstanding favorites. He has looks and genuine acting ability. Running time, 60 minutes.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—More than satisfied the few who came to see it. Gave me the three lowest midweek nights since hot weather. Irene is swell but the title must have kept them away. Running time, 95 minutes.—Dan Smith, Pella Theatre, Pella, Iowa. General and college patronage.

First National

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Another outstanding picture by the producers who know how to make musical productions. Give it your best playing time. Business off due to extreme cold weather, but the patrons that had the courage to endure the 25 below zero felt well paid for their effort. Running time, 101 minutes. Played January 31-Februry 2.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—It is not the tops for Warner; they have made better in the past. Did average business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

GUNS OF PECOS: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—A very nice western that pleased. Dick Foran's singing adds much to entertainment value of the picture. Running time, 56 minutes. Played January 22-23.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

SONG OF THE SADDLE: Dick Foran—This boy Foran has looks, personality and ability. I can't reconcile producers having him sing operatic type of songs for a horse opera. He does the ill advised singing job well, though. Propertly handled, Foran should make a great western star.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

THREE MEN ON A HORSE: Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell—This socalled comedy did not amuse our audience. A disappointment. Played February 6-7. —Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

Grand National

DEVIL ON HORSEBACK, THE: Lili Damita, Fred Keating—This all-color feature did not draw any extra business. Played February 4.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

DEVIL ON HORSEBACK, THE: Lili Damita, Fred Keating—Did our audience eat this one up. Just the thing for us small exhibitors. It looks like this Grand National is just what the doctor ordered for the small exhibitor. Will stand exploitation. Played December 1-2. Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage.

SONG OF THE GRINGO: Tex Ritter, Joan Woodbury—A couple of songs and a fandango that could be put in two reels is the extent of this western. Tex Ritter puts the music over O.K.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

SONG OF THE GRINGO: Tex Ritter, Joan Woodbury—Only fair. They have a lot to improve on these westerns to make them as good as the Hopalong Cassidy pictures. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SONG OF THE GRINGO: Tex Ritter, Joan Woodbury—Gather around, exhibitors, here's a hot tip; this was the first one of his pictures and I'll take all I can get. This is a drawing card for me and you. Here's more power to Grand National. Played December 15-16.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage

WHITE LEGION, THE: Tala Birell, Ian Keith—Played this up big and it lived up to the exploitation. A marvelous picture with the doctors fighting the yellow fever. Will entertain the average crowd. Played November 24-25.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage.

Hoffberg

SPEED DEVILS: Paul Kelly—Paul Kelly, a great performer, wasted in a poor vehicle. However, auto race scene of entertainment value.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABSOLUTE QUIET: Irene Hervey, Stuart Erwin, Lionel Atwill—You can pass this up and not lose any sleep. Played it on a double bill with "My Man Godfrey." This certainly doesn't rate very high for a program from Metro.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ALL AMERICAN CHUMP: Stuart Erwin, Betty Furness—Just fair. It dragged considerably. Then it had an angle of bridge in it and I don't think that the ruralites play this American craze.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart, Virginia Bruce, Una Merkel—Very good entertainment, but this one did not seem to please as well as previous dancing pictures. We had to turn them away the first night, but played to mostly empty seats the second night. Running time, 108 minutes. Played January 29-30.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—One swell all-around family picture and no gangster or murder in it. Running time, 8 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—Played this on Sunday as a benefit for the Flood Relief fund, and it went over big. Everyone seemed to enjoy it very much; and it is certainly clean entertainment. Spanky is very good, and so is Buckwheat, the little Negro. Ideal for children's show. Played January 31.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Frank Morgan—The greatest box office flop since sound. We are compelled to increase our admission to 40c as compared to usual 25c and this, I believe, was one reason for the box office flop. Our patrons are not interested in sitting over three hours to see a show and they told us so. The picture, of course, is an outstanding production. Running time, 180 minutes. Played January 17-19.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Frank Morgan—As far as musicals go, this, I believe, tops them all. It is gorgeously mounted. There are some breath-taking sets and the music is catchy. Miss Rainer stole the show as Anna Held. I did not believe that they could put three hours in a picture and hold the audience, but that is what it did.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Didn't see this picture, but the rest of the family said it was the best we have had for some time. However, they did not bring home enough to pay for the film, so there must have been a lot that stayed at home beside the warm fire and tuned in on the radio. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 24-26.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

IT'S IN THE AIR: Jack Benny, Una Merkel—Good show full of suspense, thrills and comedy blended with love scenes now and then. Jack Benny OK, also the rest of the cast. They all play good. It's a pleasure to play a show of this kind. Thanks, Benny. Running time, eight reels. Played January 31. —Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton—Back to the old slapstick days of the silent picture where action predominated, and I'll say this for the picture, that it seems to be what the public wants. Anyway, Patsy's first picture scored; it kept the house in an uproar. It had the old silent days' technique, keep the picture moving and delete so much dialogue.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—Definitely poor material. It only wastes the talents of an expert cast of stars and the efforts of an ace director. Business was such as to make the rental unwarranted. It takes a good story as well as stars to make a good picture. Played January 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford—You can always depend on this pair to give you real entertainment, and bring out the cash customers. This picture is very good, and will send them home well satisfied. Franchot Tone good in his first comedy role. Give us more like this.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery, Cecelia Parker—This type of homespun comedy as so ably portrayed by Wallace Beery is a "natural" for our type of patronage. Drew exceptionally good business and was well received. I believe there is a definite market for more pictures of this type. Played January 22-23.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

OUR RELATIONS: Laurel and Hardy—The L. and H. fans ate it up. The usual thing, but this time there were four of them and it kept the audience busy identifying which pair of twins was which.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWORN ENEMY: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Rather weak, but no kicks. OK of its kind. Played January 20-21.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA RAIDERS, THE: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Not quite the usual audience for a western, but large number of flood benefits probably cut down attendance. Played January 30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Shirley Ross, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Very good musical that pleased the majority. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Bob Burns, Burns & Allen—Excellent, but snow, sleet, high water, etc., kept them away. Bob Burns splendid. Played January 24-26.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, Burns & Allen, Mary Boland—This one makes a goof out of you and you know it and like to be made a goof. It is chuck full and it seems to be just about what they like now. Business good four days, and it is worth a long run. However, we did not do tops at box office.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

DESERT GOLD: Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Tom Keene, Marsha Hunt—Very good at the box office both nights. Everyone enjoyed it and lots of them came back the second night. I can only recommend it for rural and mining towns. Running time, 6 reels. Played February 5-6.—C. F. Deane, Lorado Theatre, Lorado, W. Va. Mining town patronage.

DESERT GOLD: Larry Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Good Zane Grey story to average business. Customers have seen these stories remade so many times that we are getting some kicks.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

DRIFT FENCE: Tom Keene, Larry Crabbe—Played this old but it drew exceptional business due to the past great popularity of Tom Keene westerns. Too bad they ceased casting him in westerns. He's a "natural" thus placed.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—A thrilling drama for the action and thrill fans that held the interest and kept them wondering what would happen next. This was doubled with Gene Autry in "The Old Corral" which was on a par with the usual Gene Autry pictures. This program did above average business for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West, Randolph Scott, Warren William—Not much of a picture. This did not please at the box office. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—Paramount has turned out some pretty good pictures, so we won't condemn them, but everyone, including myself, thought this was very poor. Played January 30-February 2.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

Four new contributors to "What the Picture Did For Me" this week are:

Gail Bush, Avalon Theatre, Thief River Falls, Mont.

Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va.

C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill.

Dan Smith, Pella Theatre, Pella, Iowa.

Read the reports of these showmen in the department in this issue.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: William Boyd, Evelyn Brent—The best western we've played for a long while. Full of action and interesting all the way through. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre,, Griswold, Iowa, General patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: William Boyd—A nice picture and a nice business. Played February 5-6.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S A GREAT LIFE: Joe Morrison, Rosalind Keith—Good programer. Everyone satisfied. Business below normal for some unaccountable reason, unless it is fear of sickness. Played January 16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Very interesting that pleased at the box office. Dorothy Lamour's singing is very good. Running time 83 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LET'S MAKE A MILLION: Edward Everett Horton—Poor story done many times before and done better. Paramount may have been in this business 25 years but they still have a lot to learn. Spoken of at times as an infant industry one might think they (the executives) were the infants. They sure have a lot of infant ideas. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 4.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—We've had about enough of Ruggles in these elongated comedy roles. They are a positive flop and it is high time Paramount quit trying to put this sort of asinine comedy over. Ruggles is tops cast in a role that fits into a production but it's boresome to sit through an entire picture with him dominating the screen.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—Very good comedy. Ruggles is always good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played January 28. M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—Very good picture, business average. Pleased 100 per cent. These stars do not have much box office value yet.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer—Good picture which pleased generally, but did not do any extra business. I expected a better picture from extra publicity Paramount gave this.—Water Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

13 HOURS BY AIR: Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennet—A dandy picture. Plenty of action and suspense. A timely picture of a snow storm, everything so real you think you are traveling yourself. The little boy Waldemar (Bennie Bartlett) sure put it over on the gangster and helped to capture him. After that Fred MacMurray liked the youngster. OK any time. Running time, eight reels. Played January 27.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TRAIL DUST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Good western and well liked. Running time, 77 minutes. Played January 29-30.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George—Superb. Finest of acting and, as a surprise, it pleased most of the customers. Did nice business but through no fault of the title. Played January 27-28.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

VIRGINIAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Walter Huston—This was my fourth exhibition of this masterpiece. It still tops all of the super-westerns in my opinion. Surprise yourself with some exceptional business by playing this again.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

WEDDING PRESENT: Joan Bennett, Gary Grant—Good program picture but a flop at the box office. Running time, 81 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Good program comedy. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—This picture hit a new low for me. Pleased about 50 per cent. Too much talk, not enough story and too much supposed to be French accent by Miss Osborne.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—This was pretty good, but nothing to rave about. Mary Boland too darn silly to live. Our people getting fed up on this combination. Maybe Charlie will do better with his next side-kick. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 24-25.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

BOLD CABALLERO, THE: Bob Livingston, Heather Angel—Very fine outdoor production, and the color was also good. Played on Saturday to better than average business, and our patrons were well pleased. Good for two days.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

BOLD CABALLERO, THE: Bob Livingston, Heather Angel—Based on the 'Mark of Zorro' this would have been a very good action picture if they hadn't made it in color. A few more pictures like this one and colored pictures will be all done. A fairly good action picture with very poor color results in poor entertainment. Played January 31-February 1.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This was doubled with "The General Died at Dawn" and is on par with the usual Gene Autry pictures. This program did above average business for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theater, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SINGING COWBOY, THE: Gene Autry, Lois Wilde—Autry musical westerns outdraw all other pictures so typed. Of course they please; otherwise they wouldn't do so.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—This is the first time we have seen Livingston without a mask and it is our opinion that if he is given a "break" he will become one of the most popular action stars. The "Three Mesquiteers" ranks well above the average western. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 3-4.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston, James Gleason—It's only a fair picture and this is no football town, so it died a miserable death.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson—Best western we have had for some time, but cold weather and lots of snow kept them at home. No business. Well, Mother Nature sure puts a crimp on you whenever she wants to and gets away with the business. Don't be afraid of this one. Step on it. Running time, eight reels. Played January 30.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson—Normal business to a satisfied audience.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March—A picture that we lost money on, did no business. Just wasted on those who saw it. RKO sure knows how to bring on box office heartaches.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MUMMY'S BOY: Wheeler and Woolsey—Not as good as some these stars have made. Story pretty weak. Did better than average business for me.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—A little above the recent standard for this team but they draw only a small house. Should please wherever their tomfoolery is liked. Played January 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLOUGH AND THE STARS: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Merely got by on a double feature. Running time, eight reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

PLOUGH AND THE STARS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Well made picture with Barbara Stanwyck and Foster doing good stuff, but as for box office, decidedly no. Too slow was the verdict and patrons said they did not care about a long past Irish one-day fight. Played February 7-8.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—The Bank Night crowd liked it. Anyway, far the best from RKO this season and nary a gangster or murder. Running time, 9 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen—A very good picture for any time or place. Especially okay as a family attraction. Bobby is tops and Louise Beavers excellent as the colored mammy. Played January 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR: Richard Dix—Dix is consistently good. He's great in this. Story very thrilling.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Lily Pons, Gene Raymond, Jack Oakie—A mighty good musical comedy drama with Miss Pons and her supporters all doing classy work. Played February 3-4.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WANTED: JANE TURNER: Gloria Stuart, Lee Tracy—Fair program picture. Plenty of action and Lee Tracy makes a good postal inspector. Good entertainment. Played February 3.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN: Preston Foster—All of the assignments this star acts are handled beyond criticism. If your following like the he-man stuff, here you are.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BACK TO NATURE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington —These Jones Family pictures give satisfaction. Believe this is the best of the series. Running time, 58 minutes. Played January 22-23.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

BACK TO NATURE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington —There seems to be a definite place for this series of the Jones Family and if they can continue to give this Family suitable material I predict a long life to them. This subject was well received by our patrons, who seemed to enjoy every minute of it. This was doubled with "Star for a Night," which I would also class as an above average picture. This bill gave us a goody average Sunday-Monday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—My personal recommendation for the best show of the season. Running time, 10 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Do not allow this one to sneak up on you without plenty of pre-selling. Stretch the advertising budget a bit and the picture will live up to every expectation. It's grand entertainment from any angle and deserves your best playing time. Walter Brennan walked away with all acting honors. That fellow is great. Business swell in spite of adverse conditions. Patrons' reaction all to the good. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 29-30.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CAN THIS BE DIXIE?: Jane Withers, Slim Summerville—Audience was uanimous in condemning an inane story. Music was okay, there were some good numbers, but as for the scenario, most of the audience would pronounce it "Hooey." And did.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAREER WOMAN: Claire Trever, Michael Whalen —Many favorable comments from the Bank Nighters. Running time, eight reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

LAUGHING AT TROUBLE: Jane Darwell, Delma Byron—Nothing big, nothing spectacular, but it pleased and entertained to a high degree. There's something thoroughly satisfying in a performance by Jane Darwell and our patrons always enjoy her pictures. Business fair with the weather proving a bigger attraction. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 27-28.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Adolphe Menjou—Here is a picture that is a picture. First time I ever had people phone me after seeing the picture and requesting me to ask the producers to make another with Sonja in it. Swell cast, especially Sonja and Ameche. She is a honey. We struck our seventh blizzard of the winter and lost dough. Running time, 10 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou, Don Ameche, Arline Judge, Ritz Brothers—A swell title for a swell picture. Absolutely different and entertaining from start to finish. Nothing objectionable but the Ritz Brothers in one scene. Sonja Henie is very, very good and her skating is truly remarkable. This is a hit picture in every respect. Don Ameche is fine, Arline Judge better than ever, and Adolphe Menjou turns in a swell performance. It's a grand show. Played February 1-2.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

PEPPER: Jane Withers, Irvin S. Cobb—Pictures like this go over with the average audience. Down to earth and easy to understand. The heavy stuff finds little appeal with the average theatre-goer. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 27-28.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Jack Healy, Yacht Club Boys—More actual entertainment in this picture than anything we have had for months. Just a fair turnout on account of roads. Far ahead of "Sing, Baby, Sing," which did not go so hot with our patrons. Menjou not popular here. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 29-30.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—The scenery was beautiful and acting good. Believe the perfect English dialogue didn't help the picture. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 24-26.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. General and rural patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—The novelty is wearing off, and I hesitate to say this, but the ladies thought the Dionnes acted particularly dumb. Whether they were comparing them with their own bright angels, I don't know, but they did act like a bunch of trained seals. It seems to me that they have been cloistered so much that they don't seem to have developed into normal children. They are too young to expect much of them, and I expect them to lose their draw at the box office.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets—Did about as much on this with Bank Night as we did on "The Country Doctor." Roads bad for several weeks, but the Quints drew most people we have had out for some time. Patrons pleased with picture and drew many favorable comments. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 3-4.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets—Very disappointing. Not one-half as good as "The Country Doctor," and did not gross nearly as much. Our patrons did not fail to say they did not think so much of it.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, June Lang—Playing to the lowest gross in the past three years. The picture was not well received. It is very evident that here the public does not want war pictures. False heroics was Barrymore's part, the old soldier that died for his boy. I don't think that Barrymore liked the role any too well.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, June Lang—A very serious and well-performed story of the French army in the World War. In addition to the three top stars there is here introduced to the screen the charming and talented June Lang. Gregory Ratoff, as the carefree sergeant, provides most of the humor. Pictures like this should prove one of the strongest arguments against war, its futility and useless horror. Our audience gave it neither criticism nor applause. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 6.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou —A good musical but not very good box office attraction. This did not make any money for us on account of the rental being too high. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

STAR FOR A NIGHT: Jane Darwell, Claire Trevor —Good program picture that pleased. Ideal for family night. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 27-28.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

STAR FOR A NIGHT: Jane Darwell, Claire Trevor —Good little program picture. Running time, 76 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

STAR FOR A NIGHT: Jane Darwell, Claire Trevor This was double billed with "Back to Nature" and I would class it as an above average picture. This bill gave us a good Sunday-Monday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young—Don't tell me our little mortgage lifter is slipping for box office pull, which this did, as did "Dimples," but the roads and weather were somewhat against it. Heavens help us if she is really skidding. Oh, the picture; it's a honey; a real one with a nifty cast. Running time, 10 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young—At last, Shirley gets a break in story and cast and a director who has held the little star down to a minimum of mugging. The result is the best Temple picture of all. Business very poor, but the biggest storm of the year accounted for that. Patrons who did wade through the snow were glad they had done so and were well rewarded for their efforts. Running time, 86 minutes. Played January 31-February 3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young—Shirley is tops again in this picture. One of her best, and what a feeling of relief after her last one. The old fans came back in droves to see "Stowaway." A good story, a fine supporting cast, and excellent work by Shirley make this fine entertainment. Played January 25-26.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

UNDER YOUR SPELL: Lawrence Tibbett, Wendy Barrie, Gregory Ratoff—Again Tibbett has proved that he has not a thing to attract patronage. His continuous bursting into song to exploit his voice was boring to the extreme. A wasted booking in this house. The public was disgruntled having to sit through it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHITE HUNTER: Warner Baxter, June Lang—Above average program and seemed to please our patrons. Tale of man exiled to Africa who later has in his power the man responsible for the exile. The man's daughter causes the "White Hunter" to pass up his revenge. But Fox allocated the picture too high. Played February 5-6.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WHITE HUNTER, THE: Warner Baxter, June Lang—The Martin Johnsons deserved the credit for what production value this picture contains. Their scenes were obvious, especially as they followed similar ones shown in Fox Movietone News as it eulogized Johnson's recent death. So thin is the story plot that the result, whether or not this be true, is pretty unimportant. Baxter does the best he can with the role. Played January 27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theater, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Joel McCrea, Frances Farmer, Walter Brennan—A stellar attraction in every respect and one that pleased the patrons just about 100 per cent. Proved interesting locally because of theme of story, since this is a logging country also. Every role an outstanding one, with highest honors to Walter Brennan as "Swan" and Frances Farmer as Lotta. Business good considering the unusual weather. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 24-26.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor—An excellent marital drama. We regret to state our 'masses' failed to attend. Our class patronage enjoyed it but unfortunately they are in the minority, so box office was very low. Played January 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino —This is a delightful picture any way you look at it. Those who got the spoofing at the gangster drama certainly enjoyed it. Those who took it straight also got their money's worth. Everyone who had any part in this can take a bow: director, photographer, sound men and the entire cast. We barely did average business on this but it is not the fault of the picture. —J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

CONFLICT: John Wayne—A very good action picture but my patrons want John Wayne in good westerns.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

DANGEROUS WATERS: Jack Holt—I have played him since 18 or 19 years back "thar" when he was nearly bald, up to now when his toupee covered pate makes him even handsomer than he was at the beginning of those eighteen years. I have never seen a picture of his that wasn't good. "Dangerous Waters" a dynamic success.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

DON'T GET PERSONAL: James Dunn, Sally Eilers—Dunn and Eilers are favorites here. Excellent reaction to their production. Business normal. Played January 23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theater, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lom-

lard—One of the best comedy features we've played in some time. Acting was superb by everyone, but for some reason didn't get as much business as we should have.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SILVER SPURS: Buck Jones—Picked up six of these I had not played and they really do the business. Played January 29-30.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin, Binnie Barnes, Alice Brady, Charles Winninger—To express in words what our patrons thought and to be able to say how much enjoyment they got from this masterpiece would be futile. It took Universal to give us "Showboat," "My Man Godfrey" and now this outstanding artist, Deanna Durbin. Many of our female customers sat through two and three shows on Sunday. Others came back and saw it the second time. More power to Universal for more like this one and to Adele Comandini, its writer, and Henry Koster, its director.—Gail Bush, Avalon Theatre, Thief River Falls, Minn. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—I made a special effort so that our patrons saw this from the start. I got enough other pictures to start the show with and only ran "Anthony Adverse" once during the evening. It is the kind of a picture they really should see from the start. This picture drew better than I expected seeing that most of our patrons are the socalled working class and their families. We ran this three nights on two of which it rained quite hard and even on the rainy nights it drew above average. It is a big picture in every way and it held our patrons spellbound. The fact that they all saw it from the start no doubt added to the enjoyment of our patrons.—J E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Another one of those super-colossal epics. And yet, fine as it is, it took a box office nosedive. Too bad, the women especially weren't interested. Played January 31-February 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Here is one of the greatest pictures of all time. The actual Charge rivals DeMille in its realism and the directorial work throughout is excellent. Because of severe cold weather and the "flu," coupled with the apathy our patrons generally show toward really fine pictures, the attendance was small, but those who did see it were loud in their praise. We repeat, this is a great picture. Running time, 114 minutes. Played January 24-25.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Asarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

ONE WAY PASSAGE (re-issue): Kay Francis, William Powell—Ran this on a Bank Night. Pleased but could see no use in bringing back a picture made five years ago with no more of story than this had. These big star names don't mean as much in the smaller theatre and you can tell that by putting them on some of your off nights and trying to pull them in. Running time, 69 minutes. Played January 20-21.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—While slightly below Joe's standard, it still appealed to Joe's clientele and consequently we had good business and no kicks. Strangely enough, there has been only $2.00 variance in gross receipts in the last four Joe E. Brown pictures we have shown. Played January 29-30. — Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barto MacLane —Here is a newspaper story plus A-1 comedy that is a pleasure to show. Pleased our Friday and Saturday patrons 100 per cent. There is nothing lacking to make it top-notch entertainment. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 29-30.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

GRIP, GRUNTS AND GROANS: 3 Stooges—FALSE ALARMS: 3 Stooges—The lousiest, low-brow, slapstick comedies made, but the cash customers like them and that is more than I can say for any other comedies.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theater, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

GRIP, GRUNTS AND GROANS: 3 Stooges—Another slapstick knockout. Our Saturday patrons almost wrecked the seats. An uproar from start to finish. If you want nonsense that will get laughs, you can't beat the Stooges.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

IN MY GONDOLA: Color Rhapsodies—Good Cartoon.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

MERRY CAFE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—A pleasing black and white cartoon of Krazy Kat.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

MERRY MUTINEERS: Color Rhapsodies—A dandy. Will please anywhere.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAYING POLITICS: Scrappy Cartoons—A mediocre cartoon effort.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SKIING IS BELIEVING: New World of Sport Series—A thrilling and very entertaining number in this good series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR GAZERS: Columbia Tours—Not so hot travelogue. The costume prelude and postlude didn't help in our house anyway.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STORY OF NORTON I, EMPEROR OF THE UNITED STATES: Featurettes—Our folk didn't get much out of this hodge podge.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

BULLY FROG, A: Paul Terry-Toons—Quite the best cartoon in this series for a long time. Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHEMIST, THE: Buster Keaton—Up to the average, and Keaton's comedies are favorites here. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GAGS AND GALS: Jefferson Machamer—Only fair. Won't get much favorable audience support, so why play it?—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOING NATIVE: Song and Comedy Hits—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PINK LEMONADE: Song and Comedy Hits—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PINK LEMONADE: Song and Comedy Hits—Good one-reeler with the Cabin Kids.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

SALTY McGUIRE: Paul Terry-Toons—A fair cartoon. Much beter than most of the series.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

SCREEN TEST, THE: Buster West, Tom Patricola —Good comedy that kept the patrons in the laughing mood. Running time, 20 minutes.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALIBI RACKET: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Crime Does'nt Pay is a good subject, but it should not be shown, because it gives the gangster a very good education on how to go about the racket. They don't see the good side of the story, being caught. They just take a chance anyway to get away with it. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

AQUATIC ARTISTRY: MGM Sports Parade—Usual good sport reel. Swimmers, of course.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BORED OF EDUCATION: Our Gang—Best one-reel comedy we have ever shown.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

HOW TO BE A DETECTIVE: Robert Benchley—Terrible. Not a smile from start to finish.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE: Charley Chase—Very good Chase comedy.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE ROME: Musical Comedies Series —SWING BANDITRY: Georgie Stoll and his Orchestra—These two MGM shorts drew as many laughs and as much comment as some of the slapstick stuff we have been showing our Bargain Day crowds. Two of the cleverest and most different shorts we have run in a long time. You can't go wrong with Metro shorts.—Gail Bush, Avalon Theatre, Thief River Falls, Minn. General patronage.

OLD MILL POND, THE: Happy Harmonies—One of the best cartoons we have shown. Excellent.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

PUPS' PICNIC: Happy Harmonies—A very pleasing color short. The kids went for it in a big way.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SUNKIST STARS AT PALM SPRINGS: Musical Comedies—Don't miss playing this. The beautiful ladies in color stole the show. We played it to holdover audience.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SWING BANDITRY: Tabloid Musicals—A good band in a so-so setting. Story idea fell flat. No attempt to make a story background would be a better policy than to drag in one like this.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWING BANDITRY: Georgie Stoll and Orchestra—Good musical reel.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

TO SPRING: Happy Harmonies—A perfectly swell cartoon in gorgeous colors. A classy addition to any program.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

CATCHING TROUBLE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A wild animal catcher fills his order for one bobcat, two baby bears and three rattlesnakes. It keeps you on the edge of the seat from start to the finish. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOLD THE WIRE: Popeye the Sailor—Not as good as most Popeyes.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

I DON'T WANT TO MAKE HISTORY: V. Lopez and Orchestra—HILLS OF OLD WYOMIN', THE: The Westerners—These Screen Songs are a clever combination of cartoon and band act. They might as well leave out the bouncing ball, my audience will not sing.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

KNOCK, KNOCK, WHO'S THERE: Vincent Lopez and His Orchestra—Prett good band act. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MOVIE MELODIES ON PARADE: Headliners—Very good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MUSIC IN THE MORGAN MANNER: Russ Morgan and Orchestra—Yankee Doodle Rhapsody: Ferde Grofe and Orchestra—Musical Fashions: Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears—Play, Don: Don Bestor and Orchestra—Rah, Rah, Football: Will Osborne and Collegiates—These Headliners are all good band or orchestra acts; not big, but good melody and good recording.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

MUSIC OVER BROADWAY: Headliners—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 1—A variety reel in color which proved of interest. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TRAINING PIGEONS: Betty Boop Cartoons—Pretty good cartoon comedy. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE NOT BUILT THAT WAY: Betty Boop Cartoons—These Betty Boop cartoons are only average cartoons and while they are as good as most other black and white cartoons, they are not worth the extra money Paramount asks.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BAD MEDICINE: Headliner Series—A try at making a comedy that brought a few laughs in between the groans.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BOLD KING COLE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CAMP MEETIN': Hall Johnson Choir—Pretty good. A little too much singing and not enough dancing. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CAMP MEETIN': Radio Musical Comedies—Terrible. Negro singing and shouting for twenty minutes was too long.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

DEBONAIR NEW ORLEANS: Easy Aces—Our patrons seem to enjoy the Easy Aces and their running fire of comments as an educational reel unfolds, making a partial comedy of a fact or travel reel.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

GRAVEYARD OF SHIPS: World on Parade—An excellent short beautifully photographed. Interesting material.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HERMIT OF CRABLAND: Struggle to Live Series —Personally do not care for these series although they are instructive. Nobody seems to give them much praise.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND DASHING: Sport With Bill Corum—Average for the series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LALAPALOOSA: Headliner Series—Not so good.

I asked the booker for a good two-reeler and this is what they sent. I guess RKO just can't make good shorts.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

RADIO BARRED: Radio Flash Comedies—A dandy comedy and laughs all over it. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SINGING WHEELS: Sports with Bill Corum—Only fair. These one-reel Corums don't go over for us. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING IT: Louis Prima and Orchestra—This is without a doubt the "hottest" band piece ever filmed. Not much in the way of a plot; doesn't need one. Our audience fairly ate it up, asked for a second showing. Prima may be copying Louis Armstrong's stuff. If so, it's still okay by us. Book this one and give our audience a real treat. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SWAMP LAND: Struggle to Live Series—A good subject describing denizens of swamp lands.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UPPERCUTLETS: Walter Catlett—Patrons' verdict, "slow and tiresome, too much talk."—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WEDTIME STORY, A: Headliner Series—Best comedy we have had for a long time. It makes you feel that you are living the parts yourself. Give us more like it. Thanks, RKO. Running time, two reels. —Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S RIVAL: Mickey Mouse—Another good laugh getter. Running time, 8 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PLUTO'S JUDGMENT DAY: Silly Smphonies—Very good short subject. Running time, nine minutes. —P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

GUS VAN'S GARDEN PARTY: Mentone Musical Comedies—Only fair group of acts in this one. Mild entertainment. Our folks don't care for Gus Van. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KIDDIE REVUE: Oswald Cartoons—Our patrons did not think this up to the usual Oswald standard.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

Vitaphone

BACKYARD BROADCAST, THE: Broadway Brevities—I find that children's voices as a rule do not reproduce well and these youngsters are no exception. The dancing parts are very well done.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

TICKETS PLEASE: Broadway Brevities Series—Only fair entertainment. Running time, 20 minutes. —A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

VITAPHONE HIPPODROME: Molly Picon, Johnny Lee—Not so hot on this one. Pass it up. Running time, 1 reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Amio Tollock

REVOLT IN SPAIN: Authentic, uncensored pictures of the terrible, bloody struggle in Spain. The most amazing shot is a hidden machine gunner that actually kills an entire army; a very lovely scene for those that are advocating war as a remedy for the depression. Will do extra business. Play it! Running time, 31 minutes. S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

Serials

Universal

ACE DRUMMOND: John King, Jean Rogers—This is an above average serial as serials go. There is a mystery angle to this that keeps them guessing to the end as to who is the mysterious dragon. But why, oh why, do they do such things in serials as for instance at the end of chapter ten, when the hero is seen clutching a vine which tears out by the roots and you see him plunging down to sure death. At the start of chapter 11 you see the vine come out by the roots and catch between rocks, not the sign of a fall other than a few feet, which got the razz that it deserved. That intelligent serial producers should make such blunders is beyond me and they do it week after week. There is no need to almost kill the hero at the end of a chapter. Take any fairly well knit story and stop almost anywhere and most movie patrons will want to know what happens further along. To serial makers: please, oh please, stop this silly nonsense, as for instance having an airplane explode in mid-air and come plunging to earth several thousand feet in flames and in the next chapter having the hero get up without a scratch. Similar chapter endings have been done over and over again to the great injury of serials in general. Serials have a definite place. The children look for them weekly, but even the children give those kind of endings the razz.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Many at Columbia Party

Numerous out-of-town exhibitors and Columbia branch managers attended the annual dinner and dance held last Saturday at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. Among the branch managers were Tim O'Toole, Boston, and Harry Ragavon, New Haven. Louis Schine came down from Gloversville, N. Y.

Lesser With Radio

Sol Lesser, producer, was reported by Motion Picture Herald as releasing Bobby Breen's next picture, "Boy Blue," through Twentieth Century-Fox last week. Mr. Lesser releases his action series through that company but the Breen features are handled by RKO-Radio.

Lustiq Leaves Belle Theatres

David Lustig, manager, supervisor and publicity chief for Belle Theatres and Manhattan Playhouses in New York has resigned after 11 years with the companies.

Samuels with United Artists

Film Division Record Cited in Hospital Aid

The distinguished service of the motion picture division in the United Hospital Campaign was recognized by Stuart M. Crocker, campaign chairman, and Edward R. Stettinius, chairman of the commerce and industry committee, at the final report luncheon in New York this week. Honorable mention for the largest percentage increase in amount of gifts was awarded to the motion picture division, chairman of which was Major Leslie E. Thompson, head of RKO theatre operations.

A total of $1,970,813 was raised in the campaign for the support of essential community service in 88 voluntary hospitals in New York. This was nearly $200,000 more than was raised last year in the hospital campaign. The motion picture division raised $6,775. The campaign was sponsored by the United Hospital Fund, of which David McAlpine Pyle is president.

Paid Million to Former Wife, Says Griffith

David Wark Griffith charged in the supreme court in New York Tuesday that for a quarter of a century he had paid out "over $1,000,000" to Mrs. Linda Avidson Griffith to silence her. Mr. Griffith's statements were made in answer to suits by Mrs. Griffith demanding $35,000 back alimony and nullification of the former director's marriage last March to Evelyn Marjorie Baldwin of New York.

Mr. Griffith is making counter-claims charging damage to his reputation and business and has demanded $500,000 from his ex-wife.

Opening Detroit Branch

Sam Dembow, Jr., is in Detroit to open a branch office of National Screen Service and National Screen Accessories. The new office will bring the total of the company's branches to 25, with more scheduled to open during the next few months.

The Bluebook School

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 56

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 56 was: (A) What is meant by the focal length of a simple lens? (B) Define these terms: perpendicular, brilliancy, chromatic aberration, free diameter, simple lens, angle of incidence, principal axis, compound lens, angle of refraction, working distance and back focus. (C) Does a light ray change its direction while passing through the body of a lens?

The following made acceptable replies: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; G. E. Doe; T. F. Bochert; W. C. Brown; J. R. Prater; C. Oldham; W. Limroth; L. Cimikoski; H. Edwards; P. and L. Felt; A. L. Cooper; S. O. Sears; R. and K. Wells; H. B. Smith; G. Thompson; O. H. Schmidt; D. E. Birdsong; D. Pollock; C. Lonie; L. Hayes; C. Champney; D. P. Miller; W. R. Warner; F. Barkey; N. A. Schultz; U. S. Logan; C. and S. E. Gay; H. J. Abernathy and R. Tompkins; C. Hawkens; S. Q. and O. M. Mallaby; F. Wentworth; B. L. Sanderson; T. T. Golley; E. and G. E. Lomax; C. L. Mosier; F. E. Dorp, H. A. Ames and R. Dennis; L. and W. R. Matthews; H. D. Stonybrook; E. L. Stanford; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; F. L. and L. Savlor; J. G. Brown; D. Morgan; G. Lantry and W. L. Bolton; G. Caldwell; A. D. Lonby; C. H. Lowrie and H. Lathrope; T. L. Redhouse; H. P. Richardson; B. and M. Walker; E. N. Solomon; M. Mitchell; J. K. Robinson; T. W. Wilson; T. L. Brown and W. V. Henderson; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; P. F. Maxwell and R. D. Hicks; D. Davis and E. M. Brown; F. L. Birch; F. H. and L. Klar and T. H. Morton; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; D. H. Purcell; W. R. Baxter and R. N. Davis; J. Weiser; O. Hunt; H. L. Lilly; L. B. Masters; C. L. Davis and R. V. Manning; H. T. McClellan; D. and W. Porter; W. Winkle and R. R. Robbins; H. T. Todd and L. E. Dodson; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; H. T. Plum; R. Garrison; J. R. Davidson, L. B. Jones and H. W. Matthews; B. L. Lasser; K. N. Alberts; C. L. Loft.

There were very many who answered Section A correctly, save in one point. They said "from center of lens," instead of from optical center of lens. There is a difference—might amount to considerable in some cases. As to absolute correctness coupled with brevity, I believe our young-old friend, Dale Danielson, wins out. He says, "The focal length of a simple lens is the distance from its optical center measured along its optical axis to the plane where practically parallel rays passing through the lens are brought to sharpest possible focus."

To Section B many answered correctly in the main, but have failed in one or more items, so I have decided to select answers to each item from various answers, with credit.

"Perpendicular, optically, means at right angles to some certain plane."—Rau and Evans.

"Brilliancy is a term employed to express intensity of reflected light as measured in lamberts, though instead of lamberts, the common practice is to use the term foot-candles."—G. E. Doe.

Chromatic aberration: "The breaking up of white light into colors in lenses not corrected for that fault."—W. R. Warner.

Free diameter: "That part of a lens unobstructed by any except transparent material, therefore, open to the passage of light."—Charles Oldham.

Simple lens: "A simple lens is a piece of glass or other suitable transparent substance having at least one curved surface. The other surface may be either plane, convex, or concave; a collection of curves."—H. B. Smith.

This latter was used for the reason that, while it is incomplete, its collection of curves item induces thought.

Angle of incidence: "The angle formed by a light ray with a line at right angles to any surface at its point of contact."—W. Limmroth.

Principal axis: "A straight line passing through both the center of a lens and its center of curvature."—W. C. Brown. "Principal axis is an imaginary straight line passing through the center of a lens and precisely at right angles to its plane."—J. R. Pater.

Compound lens: "A number of lenses assembled to form one lens."—L. Cimikoski. "An assemblage of lenses so joined together in one mount that they work together as one lens, and in being so joined, are corrected for various faults by the use of different glasses, usually flint and crown, and different curvatures."—E. and C. E. Lomax.

Angle of refraction: "The angle formed by a ray that has passed into a refracting medium, and an imaginary line at right angles to the surface of that medium at the exact point of contact." Working distance: It was just a bit astonishing how very many missed out completely on this one. Note italics in correct answer. Charles Oldham says, "It is the distance from the photographic emulsion to first surface of projection lens when the screen image is in sharpest possible focus."

Back focus. "A technical term employed to indicate the distance from film emulsion to rear surface of projection lens when light rays illuminating the aperture are parallel—a condition never found in projection."—O. N. Schmidt.

(C) A. L. Cooper answers, "No, a light ray does not alter its direction or line of movement when passing through the body of a lens. Upon entering the lens it may be refracted, the amount depending upon angle of incidence and refractive index of the glass. In passing through the body of the lens, assuming the lens to be homogeneous, the light ray will pass through in a perfectly straight line. Upon reaching the opposite surface of the lens, assuming it to be reached at an angle, refraction will again take place."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 62

(A) Describe an induction coil; a retard coil.

(B) Describe the action of an induction coil in a d.c. circuit; in an a.c. circuit.

(C) What is the formula describing Ohm's law for a.c.?

It is reported that a certain man is soliciting subscriptions for a publication which he calls "Projecting Engineer." With each two-year subscription he has offered, free, a copy of what he names on his sales receipt as "Richardson's 7th Handbook." So far as I know there is no publication such as that named, but at any rate such an offer of a copy of the Bluebook of Projection is spurious. It is to be observed that reference is made to a "seventh" Handbook. The latest edition of my Bluebook (formerly called Handbook) is the sixth.

Theatre Operation Service

James A. Davidson, formerly with National Theatres and more recently with Grand National, has formed National Exhibitors Service Corporation, in association with Rod Dowrie. The principal office will be in New York. The company will provide exhibitors with a new method of recording and maintaining statistics in connection with theatre operation, including special film performance charts. Before joining National Theatres, Mr. Davidson was a statistician with Hayden Stone and Company for many years.

Paramount Gets Short Wave

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

"There Is Only Exploitation"

We quote at length from a letter on small-town exploitation and the difficulties in the way of Quigley Award aspirants from the lesser spots, written by Harland Rankin, who operates the Plaza Theatre, in Tilbury, Ont., Canada. Writes he:

"Would it be possible for a small town exploitation section to be started in the Round Table? You have a large, enthusiastic following of exhibitors who are constantly contributing to this department. Why couldn't the same be developed to advantage on advertising suitable for small-town situations that would be helpful and instructive?

"We for one would like a chance at the Quigley Awards, but what chance would we have against situations spending as much as a week's gross. This alone would be poor showmanship to spend all your profit to get them in. Occasionally a special article appears on small town advertising which has been very helpful but we need more and I for one feel that it would be well worth serious consideration. . . . At present the Quigley Awards offer no incentive to the small-town exhibitors."

Well, even if it means clearing the decks for action, your Chairman immediately declares there is no such thing as definite small town exploitation. Nor for that matter is there set any such distinction as big city exploitation.

There is only exploitation.

Further, your Round Table favors campaigns from the key city no more than it neglects offerings from the small town. This department is one of exploitation from all theatremen and for all theatremen.

Take any small community whether it be Tilbury, in Canada, or any similar spot on this side. And let us also take such widely separated top situations as New York, Toronto, Dallas.

How do they differ essentially?

Mostly in size.

Why only in size?

'Cause folks are folks, in Tilbury or in Dallas. The masses are actuated by the same impulses, desires, fears, often by the same likes and dislikes. In other words, they are merely human beings and classified thusly respond to the same basic "reasons-why" in advertising.

The important difference between big city and small town as has to do with theatre exploitation is the handling, the execution, the translation of an idea so that it becomes comprehensive to as many potential patrons as possible in the quickest time.

And that is a question of showmanship. And showmanship as has oft been said, good friends, has no home. It nests as easily in the crowded city as it does on the sparsely populated plain. One of the most ingenious campaigns ever recorded in these pages came from a community of only 1500.

Showmanship of course holds as true in the judging of the Quigley Awards entries. An imposing proportion of Plaques, First and Honorable Mention Certificates have been taken down by small-town theatremen and will continue to be won by men in these spots who disregard size and other supposed limitations of their situations. Those who hesitate to compete against the big spenders are again assured that the amount of advertising money involved has nothing at all to do with the decisions of the Judging Committees.

"It's what you do, not how much you spend," is as true today and means as much as it did the first time it was said back in January of 1933 when the Quigley Awards were launched.

And that goes for Tilbury as it does for New York.

Your Round Table cordially invites theatremen in all situations to enter campaigns in the Quigley Awards. To Mr. Rankin and other readers in similar situations who have something to say on small-town advertising and exploitation, a further invitation is extended to say it in these pages.

CHICAGO NEWSPAPERS DO IT

It would seem that newspapers more than any other medium of publicity would go far to further the cause of the motion picture theatre. For there is no other business that does so sound a job of building circulation through film news and at the same time spends as much proportionately in display advertising.

The institutional job being done by Chicago publishers to aid local theatre business may be pointed out as a highly effective example of newspaper cooperation, and the full page reproduced on the next page is only one of a number aimed to stimulate attendance among Chicago theatregoers.

Mayor Gessaman of Cleveland Presents Quigley Plaque to Winner

It's "happy days are here again" in Columbus, Ohio, according to the smiling countenance of Mayor Myron B. Gessman, left, as he presents the Quigley November Silver plaque to the equally pleased John L. Barcroft, RKO Columbus Theatres director of publicity. Barcroft was honored by a majority vote of the November judges for his campaign on RKO's "Swing Time", also awarded one of the prizes in the recent Packard contest.

Sheiks Parade Streets For "Garden of Allah"

Accompanying photo shows fifteen shieks who paraded streets of the Bronx in connection with Perry Spencer and Jerry De Rosa's exploitation stunt for "Garden of Allah" at Loew's Paradise. Banners on backs carried playdates and picture copy and the boys created plenty of excitement as they toured the streets.

Another stunt used by the boys was one of the "shieks" covering neighborhoods with small prayer rug which he would unroll at busy intersections, kneel on it and pray. Card on rug carried playdates, etc. For lobby, usherette dressed as oriental dancing girl distributed perfumed heralds.

Elmer Brient Announces Building of New Theatre

Breaking the news with a three-column shot and story in the Richmond papers, Round Tabler Elmer H. Brient, now on his own, announces the first theatre in the circuit he is building in the Richmond, Va., sector. Architect drawing showed how the new house now building in the Ginter Park section will look when opened.

Brient says he is ready with the plans for his second house with preliminary arrangements all set and with more definite news to come shortly. Elmer was last with Loew's and Thalheimer's in Richmond.

King Makes Broadcast Atop Marquee for "Sing"

To plug Bobby Breen's singing in "Let's Sing Again," M. King at the King's Cross Theatre, Sydney, Australia, erected atop his marquee huge banner with copy reading "You are now listening to Bobby Breen, nine-year-old singing wonder of the year, who makes his screen debut at this theatre on," etc., etc. Behind the banner was placed a powerful amplifier through which were broadcast principal song hits from the picture.

In order to reach folks who might possibly not have heard or been told of the broadcast, King inserted an ad in local paper and also arranged for writeups on the star, picture.

Stutenroth Books Negro Attractions For Added Grosses

Harlem being Harlem, it is expected that the residents of that section will be attracted to the theatres in that neighborhood catering to the Negro trade but over in Brooklyn, N. Y., it appears a bit more difficult. To get them in at the box office, Gene Stutenroth at the Interboro circuit's Howard Theatre, a 10 and 20 cent last run, in the borough of Brooklyn, catering to Italian and white trade as well as Negro patrons, conceived the idea of weekly datings as added features of pictures enacted entirely by Negro casts. Stutenroth discovered that there were about 12 pictures of this kind on the market, and starting early last summer, played one each week on his double-bill program with fine results. Grosses in fact increased throughout the heated period until they matched mid-winter business.

Presents All-Negro Show

Having secured a lot of this trade, Gene determined to keep it and early in February presented an all-Negro amateur show, securing for master of ceremonies two Harlem celebrities, known to all that section and its visitors, and who manipulated the talent and a well known Negro band secured for the occasion. Put together as a unit, the performers and band presented a snappy one-hour show that brought them a-runnin'.

The leader of the band made nightly announcements of the show at the ballroom where the orchestra was regularly engaged and as one of the M.C's was a prominent member of the Brooklyn Negro Elks Club, further publicity was obtained from this source. Window cards and heralds were distributed through the borough Negro resident district and a day ahead Gene had special men carrying banners give out heralds door to door in the same locations.

The leading Negro newspapers, of which there are three, sent over reporters to ask what it was all about and ran a lot of publicity that helped build additional interest. Radio programs featuring Negro entertainers were also promoted, the result from all the publicity according to this Round Tabler setting a new record for weekday business.

HAL GRADY AND RAY BELL VOTED QUIGLEY PLAQUES FOR JANUARY

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Following up the fine record already made in the Quigley Competitions by theatremen in Texas, Manager Hal B. Grady heaps further honors upon the Lone Star State as the January Judging Committee votes him the Quigley Silver Plaque for his entry on Paramount's "The Plainsman," at the Palace Theatre, in Lubbock.

And for the first time in the history of the Awards, the short subject has been singled out for distinction with the Bronze Plaque for January decided for a campaign on MGM's "Servant of the People" executed by Ray Bell, publicist, in conjunction with the date at Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C.

In close order were the next three entries all of which were labelled with January First Mention Certificates. These go to George Limerick, manager, Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas; Ted de Grazia, manager, Lyric Theatre, Bisbee, Arizona, and to H. D. Grove, manager, Fort Theatre, Rock Island, Ill.

INTERIOR OF NEW UNITED AIRLINES "SKYLOUNGE" TRANSPORT

The month's Honorable Mentions go to 15 theatremen on 14 entries, the duo sharing honors coming from Jersey City, N. J., where Manager Rudy Kuehn and publicist Bob Deitch are equally credited. And of the 15, the listing below shows 11 newcomers including those who have never before scored in the Quigley Competitions and those who landed for the first time since 1935. Among the first-scorers are two from England, Harry B. Harris, of Lincoln, and W. A. Agnew, of Renfrewshire.

Neither of the January Plaque winners have landed before. Grady has taken down First Mention honors and Bell's name has been found a number of times in the Honorable Mention listings. Of the January First winners, both George Limerick and Herb Grove have been awarded 1936 Bronze Plaques, the former in September and the latter in August.

While theatremen are battling for this year's honors, arrangements now are being made for the reception and transportation, via United Airlines, of the 1936 Grand Award winners. And above is pictured the interior of United's new 12-ton extra fare deluxe transport "The Skylounge," now in service between New York and Chicago and soon coast-to-coast to make the trip 15 hours. Unusual is the seating plan in the new ship with 14 seats of the swivel chair, overstuffed variety, placed in a cabin originally designed to accommodate 21 passengers. Featured also in the new plane are individual tables for each passenger, movable foot rests, bridge tables, special magnetic chess and checker boards, binoculars for seeing, magazine library and typewriter.

Deadline for the February Awards judging is set for midnight of Monday, March 8, which as usual means that all entries must be at Quigley Committee Headquarters by that time to be considered in the judging.

Asta the wire haired terrier, seems content with the company he keeps. And reason enough! To the left of him is the gay and charming Myrna Loy. To the right of him is the delightfully suave William Powell. The three are cast in "After the Thin Man," a Metro Goldwyn-Mayer production.

Lovely Olivia De Havilland, whose figure recently was adjudged most perfect in Hollywood is a sculptress between scenes. She dons a smock, sits on a stepladder and settles down to the work she calls recreation whenever the opportunity presents itself. Miss De Havilland's latest First National picture is "Call It a Day"

The New York Fashion Academy gave Kay Francis a medal in acknowledgment that she is the best-dressed woman of the screen. Above she is pictured in a draped silver-shot velvet gown which she wears in "Another Dawn," her latest Warner Bros. film.

Here is a grand shot of Lily Pons and Gene Raymond as they appear in RKO-Radio's "That Girl from Paris." Vivacious Miss Pons is cast in a role calling for much laughter, much song and much gaiety—and those traits are typically her personality. Gene Raymond plays the male lead.

MOTION

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN will mark a new high for the motion picture industry of the United States. For the finest films ever to be produced are to entertain you. And the largest theater attendance is expected to make 1937 the industry's biggest year.

Scenes from some of the outstanding motion pictures now running or scheduled to appear in Chicago this year are presented on this page.

During the coming months look for these and other films. They will be reviewed and advertised in the motion picture pages of The Chicago Daily News—the guide to good shows.

Trussed up in a tepee are Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur, who have the leads in Paramount's new film, "The Plainsman." The tepee belongs to one Yellow Hand, who attempts to force Wild Bill Hickok, played by Gary Cooper, and Calamity Jane, played by Jean Arthur, to reveal Buffalo Bill's transportation route for ammunition.

"Stowaway" is the title of Shirley Temple's latest picture, produced by Twentieth Century-Fox. And she had to learn nearly 500 words of Chinese for the film. Above, Shirley holds a doll given to her by her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Temple, who played with it when she was Shirley's age.

In this scene from "Three Smart Girls" Charles Winninger appears deeply impressed with the fact that he has an audience. Binnie Barnes is about to bestow a kiss upon his fervid temple. Mischievously gaping are Nan Grey (on top the heap), Barbara Read (in the middle) and Deanna Durbin (below, below, below). The merry picture is Universal's latest.

Mr. Brian Aherne may be plucking raspberries but Mr. Aherne's eyes obviously have only Miss Merle Oberon for their image. Miss Oberon on the other hand, appears thoroughly engrossed in the raspberries—or is she weighing the words of Mr. Aherne? The scene is from "Beloved Enemy," released by United Artists

This pleasant bit of ogling is being done by Madge Evans and Bing Crosby. They ogle, they sing, they cavort in Columbia Pictures' production, "Pennies from Heaven." Already the musical score from the picture is popular. And how Bing sings for you in this picture!

The "Movie-Goer" Offers Ocean Trip On Picture Contest

Started only recently under the auspices of Oscar A. Dobb, Loew's Theatres ad head, for distribution in the metropolitan houses, the monthly Loew's "Movie-Goer," now being further circulated in Washington, Baltimore and the Poli-New England division of the circuit becomes an added factor for audience attention with a Questionnaire Contest ending Feb. 21st, for which the main prize is a Bermuda trip for two. The Questionnaire contained in every issue lists 12 questions to be answered and also requested is a list of the 10 best pictures of 1936 to be chosen from a list of 40 topliners from different producers.

The first three questions requires six names, divided equally among male and female stars. They are as follows:

"Who are your favorite film stars?"

"Which film stars do you dislike most?"

"Which film players you have seen in small parts would you like to see in star roles?"

The fourth question for which six answers are requested in numerical order asks what kind of picture patrons prefer under the heads of society drama, love romance, musical comedy, war, western, thrill-adventure, crime, mystery or comedy. And the fifth asks how long patrons desire a program to be, running from two hours to four.

The sixth has to do with choice of single features with shorts of two-feature programs and the seventh goes into the likes and dislikes of the various giveaway games, such as Screeno and Bank Night. Next, is request for favorite director and then comes choice of daily newspaper for film news and criticisms. Follows then, how often patrons attend picture shows, either monthly, bimonthly, weekly or oftener and then is asked what part of the house patrons prefer. Final query is invitation for improvements of motion pictures as a whole and below spaces for names and addresses is a box divided in four with entrants required to check, giving their ages as under 21, 21 to 40, 40 to 60 and over 60. Favorite theatre is also asked.

Merchants paid for everything including numbered coupons, for the usual credits.

Local Resembles Rembrandt

Two local artists, sketching in the lobby of the Rialto, Dallas, Tex., helped to bring a lot of attention to Louis Charninsky's date on "Rembrandt." Papers carried the story and also stressed that one of the artists bore a remarkable likeness of Rembrandt himself, the local boy appearing as the famed artist in several local little shows.

Unusual Features Installed In New Des Moines Theatres

by M. GRAHL
in Des Moines

To its high standard of cultural values and the number of its sons and daughters listed in the annual "Who's Who," Iowa also lists a noted indifference to the extremes of weather in winter and summer. Neither blizzard nor sizzling heat it seems affect the dispositions of residents especially those in Des Moines, and prove no handicap to theatre attendance. Des Moines showmen go in for extra comfort to patrons as illustrated by the institution of "Sleep Nights" last summer and by the incorporation of such modern conveniences as dining and community rooms in some of the newer suburban theatres.

This article marks the continuation of the Showman's Travelogue series now current in the Round Table.

A-MIKE

The remark that Iowa is a good state to be "from" has so worried the Greater Iowa committee that they are making definite plans, not for bringing in more people, but to hold their own, for it seems to be proven that there are no better people to recruit, to come in as compared with the value of the sons and daughters Iowa is raising up to lose to other states.

Des Moines has one of the worst climates. And the grandest people in the world all ready to admit it. Here are people who not only speak your language but they can also write it. The state holds the highest degree of literacy in the United States. Illiteracy was estimated at eight-tenths of one per cent or may have disappeared by now. Des Moines has been surveyed as having no slums, the Community Chest doesn't want it advertised but they have no poor here, comparatively speaking. And whereas the radio said recently that the average amount possessed by each person in the States was $50, the average Des Moineser is always supposed to have more than the average to spend. When it was said that the remainder of the United States was worth $3,368 a year, in Des Moines each per capita had $4,647. Do they spend it? Yes, rather seriously.

Called Great Club City

Des Moines has the greatest number of clubs of any city in the world. To a stranger in town, the movies and the churches are a joyous spot, for gambling houses and night clubs languish here, they are so seldom on the club programs. By far the large per cent of the women's clubs are study groups. Here the timid beginning of the educational Forums, expected to be attended by dozens the first winter, when they had their very first tryout in Des Moines, as the home town of Secretary of Education Studebaker of Washington, blossomed to Auditorium size immediately.

Of the 38,078 families in Des Moines all but 6,000 are native born white. They were all out to see Landon and Roosevelt, in Des Moines meeting for the first time, and secret service men, inspecting the throngs, remarked on the lack of alien strains apparent in the population. Germany, Sweden, Denmark, England, Holland and Italy contributed to Des Moines but they who stayed had to prove themselves most adaptable. There's something to the fact that a combination of blizzards and sizzling heat makes for the survival of a hardy race. Also an ingenuous one.

Theatre men have survived these two seeming handicaps to theatre attendance and have found in them instead builders up of business. There was no complaint during the worst winter in Iowa for ninety to a hundred ninety years, because the highwaymen kept the roads open so they could forget about it at the movies that night. And as for droughts and heat, well the theatres are the places where you can be sure to be cool and comfortable. Also that one may find quiet to sleep. The Des Moines Theatre had "Sleep Nights" all last summer when patrons might bring their pillows and after the last show under dimmed lights slumber coolly.

Theatre Dining-Rooms

Although A. H. Blank owns no theatres now in Des Moines he has been the largest factor in the theatre business here, building up the chain which he sold, a half-interest at a time, to Paramount-Publix. Now, the Tri-States theatres operate for Publix-Paramount, the Des Moines Paramount, Strand and Orpheum, the four downtown first-run houses, and they have also the Roosevelt and Uptown, suburban houses, the finest in modern design in the city. Each of these theatres has a dining-room in connection with the theatre construction. The Roosevelt and the Uptown also have community rooms to be used for dancing, lodges, etc. With the Strand occasionally playing subsequent runs, the Tri-States group has also the Garden Theatre for second runs downtown.

Abe Frankel, also a veteran of the theatre business, coming in immediately after the first Nickelodeon which, later named the Unique, was on the site of what is now the Strand, now has Riverview Amusement Park but only the Casino Theatre in Des Moines. The Casino plays westerns, Riverview plays some silents.

To enter the Tri-States' Paramount, Des Moines or Roosevelt costs 26 cents in the afternoon, 41 cents in the evening, with the two latter houses playing identical pictures each week. The Orpheum charges 26 cents in the balcony, 36 cents downstairs, 10 cents for children under 12. They play all week runs with holdovers going to another house. The Roosevelt is the theatre supplying the largest free parking space, in double lanes in front of the theatre. The Uptown has free parking space in conjunction with the shopping center.

Less Advertising Used

The city council voted a month ago for the installation of parking meters in downtown districts. These are particularly for the aid of shoppers and are not expected to affect the theatre situation as provision is for one hour parking or less. Sixteen parking lots and a dozen parking garages do not povide parking space for a fifth of the cars downtown in the evenings. Everybody drives their cars in spite of the fact that Des Moines has unusually fine street car service supplemented by busses run in conjunction with them.

It would seem that there is a much larger field for the suburban houses in Des Moines and that very soon some of the largest retail businesses would move out to the shopping centers where parking is more possible. There are now ten independent suburban theatres.

For the past year and a half the theatres of the Tri-States group have had Bank Nite each Tuesday. For a shorter time the ten smaller theatres, alphabetically ranging from the Amuz U to the Lincoln, the newest one which had its opening last February, had a ten-theatre pool from which the lucky winners were drawn each Thursday. Most of the theatre managers are willing to express greater confidence in some other cause than in the Bank Nite as their greatest business builders.

Apparently they find the patrons coming to the theatres without a great deal of advertising. The theatres do not use ads nearly so large as those they had ten years ago. Billy Hale on the desk for the Tribune was one of the first to give the movies a special column and a by-line critic. Now the Register runs small reviews, the Tribune syndicated gossip, and picture stories. A quarter page of ad space now covers most of the larger houses, whereas they used to each have a quarter page on Sunday. Ads are run for practically all the theatres in midweek.

Billboard advertising is used twenty or thirty weeks of the year. Ballyhoo becomes of little effect if used too often. The theatre managers are given all the leeway they want in carrying out any merchandise tie-up or contest that they want to back. One of the most effective has been the tie-up with dancing and dinner-dating with Younkers tearoom where the three may be secured for one dollar.

The children's Saturday morning shows, popular for several years, have not been continued this year. The Federation of Women's clubs has a committee which in conjunction with the P.T.A. Council recommends one picture a month for children especially. There has never been a very strong feeling for censorship here, the theatre men being particularly aware that the solid citizens hereabouts have little flare for filing in to see anything flashy. Almost every show has something that makes a bid for the all-family taste particularly. The white collar trades predominate. Wage scale same as Houston and Cleveland for labor.

Theatre Operation Competent

Publishing concerns have long been the leading industry in influence on Des Moines business. It is the leading insurance center west of the Mississippi. With 42 insurance companies having their home offices in Des Moines, it is the second largest insurance city of the United States. With 56 publications put out regularly in Des Moines its reading public is wide. Manufactories total an output of $43,000,000, with products ranging thru glass to threshing-machines, from lip-stick to barn-paint, from aspirin to cement. Raw materials of Iowa supply about one-fourth of its manufactories. Skilled labor and high grade individual products rather than mass production characterize Des Moines factories, due to the fact that real estate is highly controlled here and sites have been many times refused to factories which would bring in masses of unskilled labor.

And not to go into the eight million pounds of butter creamed in Des Moines each year, or the lumber produced or the over 200 nationally known concerns which maintain branches, warehouses or factories here, it is the market center for most of the state, surpassed by Sioux City, Iowa, for livestock shipping.

With no mass manufactories Des Moines should be a clean city but the soft coal burned makes it one of the sootiest, the downtown section lying lower, collecting more than its share. But protest is being made. In spite of this smog there is not a place in the country where the theatres maintain a higher schedule of cleanliness and efficiency. Boys are used in all the theatres as uniformed ushers and doormen and the girl cashiers are everyone unusually attractive. The theatre management keeps the managers and their assistants rushing all the time but their theatre displays and the whole theatre setup is most pleasing.

Once upon a time Des Moines was known as "Death Moines" to the show business because it was cold, undemonstrative. But that has changed since war-times and Taylor Holmes, Irene Rich and many another has chosen it as the most cordial city. Ina Claire, however, this season was bitter because none met her at the train from Omaha and complained. Des Moines audiences really work very hard to be receptive to the stage stars for the acoustics at the Shrine Auditorium are terrible and the Shriners don't own the Auditorium anymore.

Wrestling matches twice a week in winter cut in on the show business. Dog-racing was no go, horse-racing is only at State Fair time. Rowdy burlesque appearing at the President Theatre left last week after not too pleasant a stay.

"Des Moines de merrier"

Des Moines, to look back into history, has had no bloody warfare. Wordy have been the battles in which it was tried by historians to decide whether to call the state "Ioway" or "Iowa" and why. There is the same fog over the decision on who influenced the naming of Des Moines, whether a river, a Frenchman or a descriptive phrase. Fort Des Moines was not an outpost to protect the whites from the Indians but a post to protect the friendly Indians. Fort Des Moines army post, the largest U. S. Cavalry Post, is now south of Des Moines and not on the original land of Fort Des Moines. A municipal playground and park now surrounds the original post's historic marker, rescued from ash heaps which had been piled about it.

Des Moines has grown to a city six miles by nine in about 75 years. Crowding is one of its great problems in regard to traffic but has never been for home sites, Des Moines ranking first in cities of over 100,000 for number of homes owned and in spaciousness of home sites.

With eight railway lines bringing in traffic east and west, nineteen lines radiating to the towns of the state within a 100 mile radius of Des Moines are 941,000 people, living in 441 towns and on 89,728 farms. Three thousand miles of hard surfaced roads lead into Des Moines. This year the State Fair had a bumper crop breaking all previous records of 400,000 attendance. The metropolitan area immediately surrounding Des Moines gives a populated area with 160,000 people. Des Moines itself is 142,000.

Chief of Police Alber's downtown check shows in one evening cars drawn to Des Moines from 97 of the 99 counties of the state. Twenty-six thousand cars came from the four counties surrounding Polk County, of which Des Moines is the county seat. Within the next forty miles the number of cars dropped by a sixth. This check was particularly treated as a theatre crowd traffic check.

Des Moines audiences won't pay big money. When Omaha would, they had to bring in the maids in the hotel to fill in the empty places for Rudolph Valentino's five dollar banquet in Des Moines. The University professor and the bank official will sit in the gallery. But, rain or shine, blizzard or blister, they will pay to be educated by the good motion pictures.

At that they should be a fine and fair example of what education at the movies produces for Iowa was second to Massachusetts alone and far above states of much larger population in the contribution to Who's Who this year. Iowa born were 1,060 mentioned by this book, behind Massachusetts by seven ten-thousandths of one per cent. But of the 1,060, only 441 are at present with us here. The rest are "from" Iowa.

Anyway, if you are coming to Iowa or sending anything, be sure it's darn good. If it is above average here is where it will be appreciated, and "Des Moines de merrier!"

"Tell Us What You Did"

Yearsley Endorses Date

Folder containing his personal endorsement for the date on "Winterset" at the Roosevelt, Philadelphia, was put out by Manager C. L. Yearsley. In addition, story was described, Yearsley's statement concluding: "I could not afford to recommend it if it were not worth while." Atmospheric lobby display stressed the Brooklyn Bridge background.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Poses With Local Paper

For "Rainbow on the River," theatremen at the Palace, Hartford, Conn., had copy of local paper forwarded to the studios, where Bobby Breen posed with the sheet, photo reproduced in the daily. Tiein was made with Liberty boy distributors whereby heralds were placed in copies of the magazine distributed locally. Starlet's fan magazine life story was also hooked into the date with co-op cards planted at newstands.

FRONTS, STUNTS AND SICHLIKE

CLAUDE RAINS IAN HUNTER ALISON SKIPWORTH

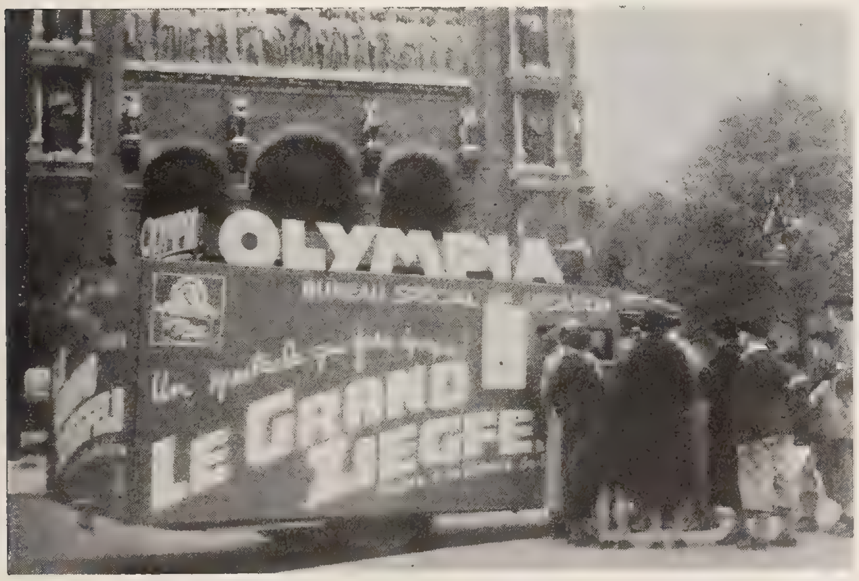
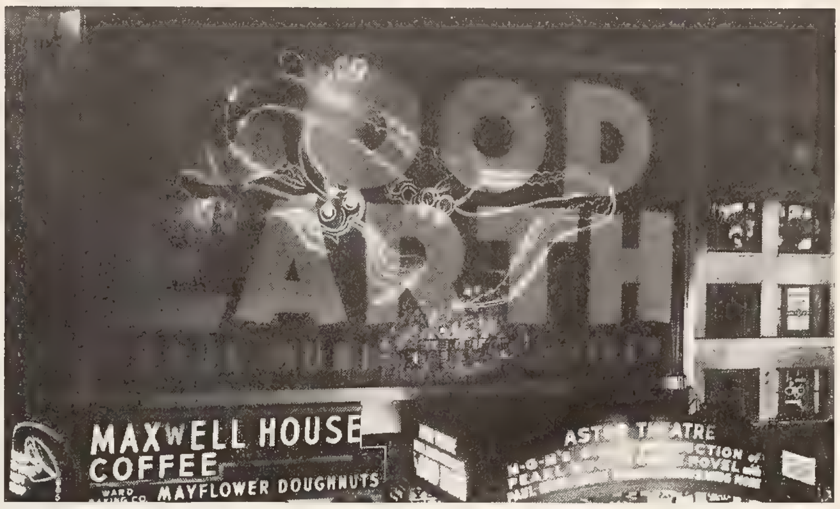
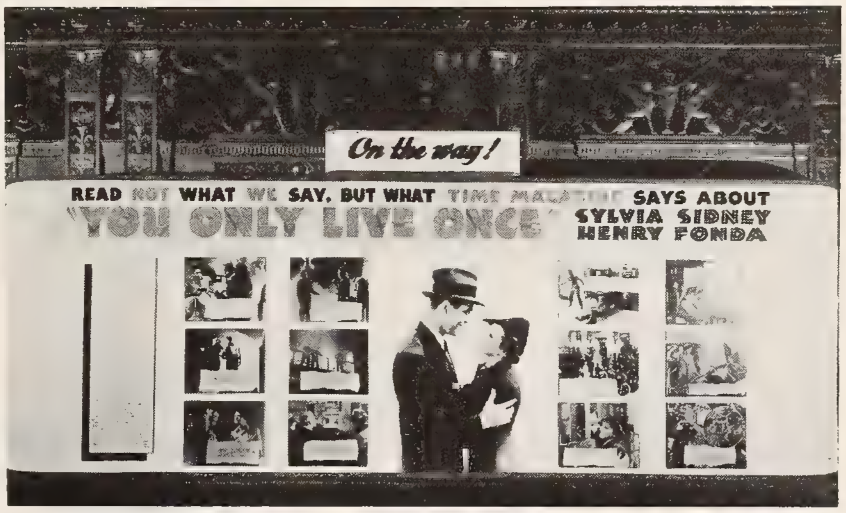
BIRTHDAY PARTY. On "Great Guy," at the New Lafayette, Buffalo, George McKenna and Dick Walsh tied in with news distributor for party tendered boy carriers. Guests were brought to the theatre in special bannered busses.



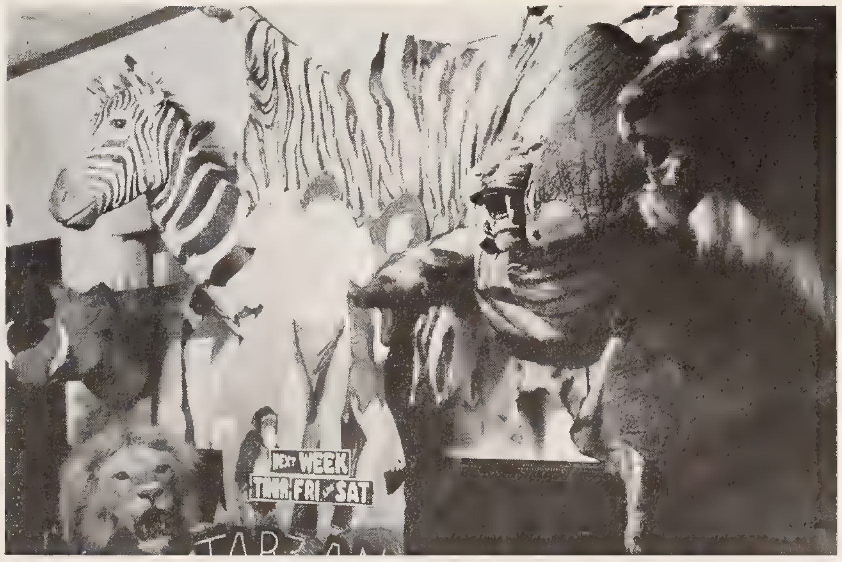
TRAVELING BOX OFFICE. One of the stunts on the date for "Great Ziegfeld" at the Olympia, Paris, reported by E. Lapiniere was a traveling box office that stopped in various sections for ticket reservations. Note line grouped around ticket window.



STEAMING DRAGON. Luminous-tube dragon blowing steam through its nostrils flashing on and off with the title brought added interest to the giant electric front on "Good Earth" at the New York Astor. Steam came from house heating plant.



REVIEW PANEL. In advance of "You Only Live Once" at the Circle, Indianapolis, Manager Dave Chapkin created a 21-foot lobby panel containing blowups of review of the picture in "Time," still enlargements and star cutouts.



JUNGLE DISPLAY. Against wooden frame on which tiger skin was stretched, Manager Walter W. Powell, Colonial, Kannapolis, N. C., placed lion heads, wild dog head, wart hog and elephant hoofs borrowed from local sportsman for "Tarzan Escapes."

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

McAllen, Texas

Dear Herald:

This state of Texas can have more different kinds of weather in one day than any state in the Union. When it is snowing and they are having a blizzard up in the Panhandle country of Texas and it is 10 below zero they will be having rain and a temperature of 65 above zero down here in the Rio Grande valley. If it should freeze down here it will be "very unusual." This expression they got from California, although it would be very unusual if it did freeze.

The difference in the weather isn't so surprising when one comes to realize the distance. The Panhandle country is something like seven hundred miles northwest of the valley, and seven hundred miles can make quite a difference in the temperature.

But few people realize the magnitude of this state of Texas. This is true of the younger generation. They look at the state on the map and regard it simply as one of the states of the Union; they don't realize that at one time it was an empire in itself.

Speaking of Boasting—

This state once belonged to Mexico and the line was the Red River of the South, which line is now the dividing line between Oklahoma and Texas, but the Mexicans have been pushed back south until the line between the two countries is now the Rio Grande river, and this is six hundred miles south of the former boundary.

We boast a whole lot of our having no desire to acquire territory but we took this country away from the Indians; we took Texas, a territory as large as the New England states combined, away from Mexico; we acquired a good part of the Middlewest and of the South by purchase from France, and Alaska from Russia at about five cents on the dollar, and yet we boast of not wanting to acquire new territory. If Italy wanted to take Ethiopia let's keep still about it. It happens to be none of our business.

If the public schools of today would teach more of the history of this, and other countries, and less of basketball, football, and other sports, the rising generation might learn where the United States came from. A good football coach can demand a greater salary than the presidents of our universities. But then, this is getting away from matters of the theatre. That expression that "there is no great loss without some small gain" is being manifested here since the reported freeze in California. When we first came here oranges were selling at the packing sheds for twenty dollars a ton, but since that California freeze they have gone up to fifty dollars and the rise in the price of grapefruit is being felt also, and this is making the Texas citrus growers feel pretty good and business is, of course, being benefited, but this is only sectional. Well, that's that.

They Go to the Theatre

They have a slogan down here that says something about the perpetual sunshine, but that's a lot of horseradish, for it has been cloudy and rainy now for about ten days and we have about forgotten what the sun looks like. This climate here reminds us a whole lot of Portland, Oregon, except that down here it stops raining occasionally, but even so, it doesn't seem to stop people from going to the shows. We drive down to Shine's Palace theatre in the rain and find it difficult to find a place to park April Shower. But speaking of Shine reminds us that he is putting on such good shows that we are being deprived of a lot of valuable sleep, and if this keeps up we are going to sue him for damages in the Kangaroo Court.

The other night he was playing Charlie Ruggles and Alice Brady in "Mind Your Own Business." We don't care much what kind of a picture Charlie plays in; we are going to be there if the Warden will let us out. In this one Charlie was the leader of the Boy Scouts but he and Alice were kidnaped by a bunch of guys and taken to a lonely cabin in the woods. They left one rough-neck in charge of them and went away. Charlie induced this bozo to go out and help him catch some snipes.

We remember getting a fellow to hold a bag to catch snipes one night when we were young and foolish and the poor sap held the sack until near midnight and almost froze to death. Catching snipes is an old one, but sometimes it works, especially in pictures.

Then There's Bob Smith

We don't know but what we told you about Bob Smith of the Mission theatre at Mission before, probably did, but Bob will stand repeating. Bob reminds us a whole lot of that boy Zimmerman who is the operator and manager of the San Marcos theatre at San Marcos (when he isn't playing golf) except that Zim—well, except, that's all.

Bob had a show last night that we went to see, and it was a pretty good show too. Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone did the most of the work in "Love on The Run," and it was love on the run, too.

But speaking of Bob, it may be of interest to you fishermen to know that Bob has a cabin down on the shore of Redfish Bay and we are going down there in a few days and hire some kid to catch us some redfish.

We took a lady with us when we went up to see Bob and her name was Smith and we introduced her to him as Kate Smith from McAllen, and we told him we had a friend at Alamo by the name of Smith, but no relation to the Smith Brothers. Then Bob gave us a coughdrop and said, "You know, Colonel, everybody's name was Smith until they got to going crooked and they changed their names to something else." Doggone that Bob anyhow, he acts just like these other longhorns down here.

Yesterday we drove down to Brownsville to see our old friends Andy Anderson and Mrs. Anderson from Detroit Lakes, Minnesota. Andy, you know, operates two mighty nice theatres at Detroit Lakes; that is, Andy professes to operate them but Herb does most of the work.

We wanted also to see J. C. Fanning, who operates the Brownsville theatres, but J. C. was down on the ship channel fishing and we didn't get to see him. If you want to see J. C. you have make an appointment two weeks ahead and then you will get to see him, provided they are not biting. Andy says he wants us to come down to Brownsville and show him how to catch a shark. When a theatreman wants to be shown how to catch a shark there must be something wrong, for they have been monkeying with sharks all their lives. Well, we are going to show him, but in the meantime we are going to send the Herald a picture of J. C. and the one he caught, and it will be no fish story either. Better watch for it.

HORSE-SHOES?

Another smashing M-G-M hit "THE LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY" commands industry attention! (following "After the Thin Man", "Camille", "Born To Dance", "Libeled Lady" and many others.)

The element of luck has no place in the M-G-M scheme of production. The true-and-tried producing personnel; the wealth of Star names and the boundless resources of the Greatest Studio in the World leave nothing to chance!

There are no horse-shoes on the theatres of our 10,000 customers. They leave nothing to chance! The M-G-M name is the beacon of assurance to the patron for a swell show; to the exhibitor for a profitable engagement.

PRESS EXPERTING

THE daily press, as always, is doing a great deal of experting on the motion pictures, and, as usual, unhampered by facts. Just at the moment the clipping bureau has delivered the editorial page of the estimable Baltimore Sun of February 15, which charges " . . . the disposition of the trade press is to keep Hollywood as provincial as possible and to insist that success can come only by catering to morons. Only this week one of the most imposing of these publications, the Motion Picture Herald, is urging the cinema not to become 'arty' because 'The customers are born young and never get over it'."

Whereupon the glib Sunpaper remarks "it is being demonstrated that motion pictures can be mentally mature in the best sense and still not threaten the producers with bankruptcy," citing four pictures in current circulation.

The list of four includes one picture "Black Legion" which will be found in the black as merchandise. Of the other three, one is an alien picture which is having a by-product career in "art cinemas" and special minority audience regions, with figures that prove nothing, and of two the producer in Hollywood remarked to the writer of this, and the prior, editorial: "Our real reason for making those is because of commitments I inherited, so that we shall on the whole lose maybe a little less by making them than by shelving them."

The Baltimore Sun, and others, having no access, it seems, to the facts, confuse a good press with a good gross.

WAR, FIRE, BABY PARADES

THERE'S a terrific lot of copy-catting conspicuous among the ardent uplifters who would remould the motion picture to their own desires. The repetitions are so many and so frequent that one suspects that they are busier rewriting each other than informing themselves about the subject.

Commonest of all these days is a crying out like that to be found in the report adopted by the Ohio Pastors' Convention, transmitted by the Ohio Council of Churches, which in a "fight for a healthy movie diet" says: "We protest subtle propaganda in pictures. Such, for example, as the tendency in newsreels to exceed the legitimate presentation of news and become outright propaganda for war and armaments."

If an ardent handful of young collegians and amateur radicals had not started raising hell on this pretext to get their names in the papers, the Ohio pastors would never have heard of the subject.

It is to be recalled that the first vociferations on war making menace in the newsreels were in exactly the same period from the same order of persons who were going into ecstasies over the artistry of "Chapayev," made in the USSR to show how a girl could machine-gun her way to glory.

The newsreels have been picturing launchings, target practice and navy operations for a quarter of a century, along with baby parades and fires. There have been more fires than naval pictures on the screen. Why not charge the newsreels with advocating pyromania? By the same reasoning Mrs. Margaret Sanger might well protest against the baby parades!

DECAYING CRITICS

BECAUSE of the continuous patter of bleats and whimpers that the motion picture has done dirt to the drama of the stage, showmen of the screen will find pleasant interest in the recent speech of Mr. Alexander Wollcott at a Lotus club function in his honor when in the course of commenting on the triumph of New York revivals of "Hamlet" and "Richard II," he remarked that this was in spite of the fact that "The theatre has been in a state of decay, according to its critics, for 3,000 years, and it should be pretty well gone by now." Mr. Woollcott appeared to feel that not the theatre but the critics were decaying.

GADGET REPORT.—The great General Electric Company which did so much toward invading our industry with sound machinery has now gone the whole route from jumbo turbo-generators to the boudoir. In fact, it seems that Mr. Young and Mr. Swope just think of everything. Their latest is a lovely pink electrically warmed blanket, with a nifty art moderne control box for the bedside table, with three heats forward and no reverse. It sells for sixty-five dollars and no twin bed models are offered. No Hollywood home should be without it. You can have your siesta toasted now.

THE motion picture industry as a large user of optical goods made by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company of Rochester will be interested in that concern's reported rejection of something like a couple of million dollars' worth of foreign war orders, on the ground that one day the devices involved might be used against us or our possible allies. Bausch & Lomb of Rochester and Zeiss of Jena in Germany make about 95 per cent of the optical precision instruments used for military purposes.

This Week

Chicago in Quandary

Chicago exhibitors are viewing with alarm, and despairing of coincidence as explanation of, a series of abruptly precipitated municipal restrictions such as rigid enforcement of the building code, official regulation of auditorium temperatures, sharply increased licensing fees, forthright assessment of fines for operation of chance games and related activities of like complexion. Changes of exhibitor organization personnel complicate the situation.

Details and ramifications of the predicament are explored on page 13.

Legislative Attention

Thirteen legislatures were called upon during the week to consider proposals pertaining to the motion picture industry. Taxes of both the direct and sales varieties, censorship fee increases and means of divorcing exhibition from production and distribution are sought.

A survey of legislative activities is presented on page 15.

Non-Theatrical

Producer licensee agreements have been extended to include non-theatrical release under the regular theatrical royalty charge by Electrical Research Products, Inc.

The company announcement is on page —.

Film Tells Film Story

Unique in its use of the motion picture and its people as story material is the Selznick International production, "A Star Is Born," wherein Janet Gaynor portrays, Technicolorfully, the steps by which a North Dakota farmer's daughter makes her way to the Academy-Awarded top in motion pictures.

Gus McCarthy's pictorial preview of the picture, subject of conflicting predictions in Hollywood, appears on pages 16-17.

Federal Control Planned

A flexible program for industry control, under which minimum wages and maximum working hours would be fixed by the government and the way paved for a broad system of voluntary agreements banning unfair trade practices, is under consideration by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in Washington, according to reports.

The proposal contemplates enactment by Congress of a bill making it a violation of the fair trade laws for concerns engaged in interstate commerce to pay excessively low wages or work employes unduly long hours. Administration of the act would be turned over to the Federal Trade Commission, where a new board would be created to formulate wage and hour standards for each industry, much as did the National Recovery Administration during the code period.

At the same time, legislation would be passed broadening the commission's authority with respect to fair trade agreements which, however, would still be voluntary, their adoption being encouraged by giving them exemption from application of the anti-trust laws.

The Television Tangle

Repercussions have been many since the Postmaster General in England indicated that the EMI (Electrical Musical Industries)-Marconi Television system had superseded the Baird in official favor. First was the revelation that televising by British Broadcasting Corporation thus was standardized on a 405-line basis. Next was a drop in the market value of Baird shares, and a general reduction in prices of receivers. EMI-Marconi offered a combination Television receiver and "all-world" radio receiver for $420.

More about this and other matters of British news importance is on page 42.

Character Actor's Market

Upsurge of the competitive spirit in studio operation has created what may be termed a character actor's market, ending for many players long inured to the vicissitudes of free lancing conditions somewhat less than favorable to maximum screen results and establishing systematized talent trading practice.

The trend is noted more fully on page 23.

MPTOA Invites Ad Men

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has invited the advertising-publicity heads of the large distributing companies to attend a presentation of new ideas in exhibition exploitation at the organization's convention next month. While this was the principal organized exhibitor development of the week, Ohio exhibitors reelected Ernest Schwartz president, the two state organizations in Connecticut decided to cooperate on legislative matters, New York's ITOA assailed distributors for score charges assessed and a new Kansas City exhibitor organization was announced.

Developments in the exhibition field are reported on page 49.

Cameramen

International Photographers Union Local 644 has warned its members that violations of the contract provision that newsreel cameramen cannot be assigned to short subject work will be punished with a fine of $500.

See page 70.

Debentures

Wall Street this week anticipated the calling in of Paramount's outstanding six per cent debentures and the placing of the company's common stock on a dividend basis for this year as a result of issuance by the company of $15,000,000 of new 3¼ per cent convertible debentures for exchange.

See story on page 44.

RKO Creditors Heard

Federal Judge William Bondy in New York late last week held an RKO creditors' hearing featured by attacks on the validity of the outstanding RKO common stock and its position in the company's reorganization and by the pressing of a petition bearing on the position of the RKO debentures. The next hearing on the reorganization plan was set for March 18. At the same time, the sale of the Orpheum Circuit's principal assets to Stadium Theatres was consummated with the payment of $700,000 cash.

These and other events relevant to the RKO reorganization are discussed on page 24.

Stock Plan Approved

A plan for reclassification of the stock of Educational Pictures, Inc., voted by the stockholders at a meeting last week, has been approved by the Chancellor of the State of Delaware.

Details of the plan are on page 44.

Oppose Dickstein Bill

Firm opposition to the Dickstein alien actor bill was voiced at Washington hearings by Gabriel Hess, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America counsel, by Joseph Seidelman, general foreign manager of Columbia, and by Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, while statements in like vein were being issued in Hollywood by Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger and others.

The situation is summarized on page 43.

As to Chance Games

New York and Omaha trade circles studied the chance game situation when independent theatre owners in the first city protested to the license commissioner that circuits operate Bank Night in illegal manner and the mayor of the Nebraska metropolis directed the council to study the subject, quoting exhibitors as desirous of discontinuing the games. RKO decided to drop them over the entire circuit and Loew's is abandoning them in New York.

The trend in these and other centers is reported on page 36.

Production Normal

Production attained normal seasonal level with Hollywood studios placing 10 productions before the cameras as five were taken to cutting rooms. Both groups embrace works regarded as of major box office significance.

Titles, personnel and sponsors of the product are given on page 23.

Capra-Riskin Again

A year in preparation for the cameras and a year in production, Columbia Pictures' $2,000,000 Frank Capra-Robert Riskin collaboration, "The Lost Horizon," their first since "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," was submitted to the press in Los Angeles and to a distinguished guest audience in Miami Beach with both professional and lay critics eloquent in approval.

Universal Loss Analyzed

Explanation of writeoffs which resulted in a net loss of $1,835,419 for Universal Pictures in 1936 was made this week by J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, on his return from a European tour of company branches.

Mr. Cowdin is quoted on page 70. A picture of Mr. Cowdin in Warsaw appears on page 11.

Australian Showmen Break

Outstanding among motion picture developments in the foreign field this week was the severance of relations between Union Theatres and Hoyt's Theatres, in Australia, with Union deciding on a program for building 200 new theatres to compete with Hoyt's during 1938. Outbreak of a sharp inter-circuit rivalry for product is regarded as certain to be a consequence.

The announcement is published on page 14.

Duals in Chicago Loop

Once supreme in the downtown Chicago area dominated in modern times by Balaban and Katz, the veterans, Jones, Linick and Schaeffer, have decided upon a double feature policy, the only box office stimulant not previously employed in the Loop district, for their recently leased McVickers theatre, previously operated at various times by both circuits.

The story is told on page 44.

Music Week Designated

The National Music Week Committee, headed by David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, has designated the week of May 2nd to 8th for the 14th annual National Music Week. The 1937 festival will be devoted to fostering local musical talent and will be designed to encourage communities to organize glee clubs, orchestras or other means of aiding amateur musicians who have failed to continue their musical talent because of limited opportunities.

Pulchritude Wanted

Announcing survey discovery of a shocking dearth of feminine pulchritude in Hollywood, Samuel Goldwyn has decided to send camera men and test directors through the land in quest of adequately personable personnel—and just possibly a whisper of publicity—for his forthcoming "Goldwyn Follies."

Mr. Goldwyn's comment on this remarkable situation is quoted in full on page 23.

Quigley Book Published

"Decency in Motion Pictures," by Martin Quigley, president of Quigley Publications, was published February 20th by the Macmillan Company, New York.

The book is reviewed by Terry Ramsaye on page 34.

Eastman Net $18,000,000

Net income of the Eastman Kodak Company for the year ended December 31, 1936, is currently estimated by the Wall Street Journal at about $18,000,000, the best reported by the company since 1930. The estimate is based on present indications. The company will not report its earnings figures for at least a month, according to the Journal.

The figure quoted would be equal to about $7.60 a share on the outstanding 2,263,150 shares of common stock, after all taxes, chargeoffs, provision for surtax on undivided profits, dividends on the preferred stock and a wage dividend of $2,220,000 granted to employees out of 1936 net income.

Net profit for 1935 amounted to $15,913,251, equal to $6.90 a common share.

A Matter of Millions

Exhibition paid to Electric Research Products, Inc., more than ten million dollars a year for the nine-year period of 1927 to 1935, and producers approximately three millions a year, says the nine-pound, three-volume report to the Federal Communications Commission, by its corps of accountants and economists, in the investigation into the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. But that's only a part of it. Testimony already given runs to more than two million words.

What the report looks like and more detail about its contents appear on page 25.

Scenarist Writes Novel

News of the man-bites-dog variety is that Frances Marion, distinguished scenarist, has written a novel, "Molly, Bless Her," which is about as undistinguished as most scenarios written by novelists.

The book is reviewed on page 34.

This Week in Pictures

THE MARCH OF TIME turns back in its flight and the constant camera finds fame-faring folks reliving their beginnings. (At left) Douglas MacLean, who flared across the cinema sky in 1919 as brilliant star of Paramount's "23½ Hours' Leave," is back on the set as producer of the same story for Grand National with James Ellison and Terry Walker, his leads, at the makeup table as he unfolds his plans to (left to right) Philip Krasne, company counsel; Pam Blumenthal, of the GN Board; Sidney Ridell, studio representative, and Edward L. Alperson, company president.

Fred Waring, whose fame was founded a dozen years ago in the cinema stage band cycle touched off by Balaban and Katz, returns from a long stay in radio to the film world by way of a Warner contract witnessed (above) by Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president.

OVERSEAS CINEMA circles interpreted as a signal distinction Queen Mother Mary's choice of the London Pavilion premiere of "Dreaming Lips," a Trafalgar-United Artists production, as occasion of her first public appearance since the death of King George V. A slum clearance project was beneficiary of the premiere.

Other first-nighters snapped by London photographers are (above) William Wyler, director, and Merle Oberon, star, in attendance at the opening of Samuel Goldwyn's United Artists production, "Beloved Enemy," at the Leicester Square theatre.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Universal Pictures board chairman home this week from a tour of European branches, was luncheon guest in Warsaw (right) of Zofia Nakoneczna, Polish star; U. S. attache Canty, J. Shapiro, correspondent of the London Morning Mail; Richard Ordwnski, president of the Polish film board of trade; the board secretary and William Levy, general manager of Universal in Poland. (Mr. Cowdin's report on his European observations is published in page 70 of this issue.)

ALLY AND FOE, in the business sense, joined in honoring E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, manager of the MGM Buffalo branch, on his completion of twenty years in the service of the company. The dinner at the Hotel Statler was arranged by a committee headed by Charles A. Hayman of the Lafayette theatre and including Vincent R. McFaul, George H. McKenna, Sydney Sampson, Richard H. Walsh, Robert T. Murphy and William J. Tishkoff. Rudy Vallee and his company entertained.

David L. Loew (left) brought to New York the completed print of his first Joe E. Brown comedy for RKO-Radio, "When's Your Birthday," which probably—for such are the ways of home office press agents—isn't in the container shown but in the safer baggage car ahead.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., more or less of Hollywood but decidedly more of London, appears not unpleased with New York as he arrives in the United States (right) to star in "The Prisoner of Zenda," which United Artists will release.

CHICAGO TURNS HEAT ON AND EXHIBITORS ASK WHY

License Fees Doubled, Building Code and No-Standees Rule Are Stringently Enforced; No Giveaways, Tight Censorship

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH

in Chicago

Chicago exhibitors are "on the spot." Each day the focus seems to be narrowing and exhibitors are wondering why. Here are some of the methods in which the municipal heat is being applied to the theatremen:

No more giveaways, Bank Nights, Screeno, or what not.

Stringent enforcement of the health ordinances.

Huge increases in theatre license fees.

A more strict enforcement of the theatre building code.

A tighter censorship on films.

The main reason for all this exceptional interest in the theatre business is that city authorities abruptly have taken a keen interest in the way theatremen have been operating, and, it seems, have found it not to their liking. The exhibitors, they feel, have been having their own way too long, and have taken advantage of the situation.

Series of Restrictions

The first blow came when the police department stopped all giveaway games, arresting the managers and those operating the games. The next blow was rigid enforcement of the health ordinance which forbids patrons to stand in the lobby of a theatre. They must either be seated inside or stand out in front and wait for a seat. Another surprise was announcement that theatre license fees will be increased materially starting July 1st. Finally, the building code and censorship regulations are expected to be more rigorously applied.

Lobby Standees Barred

When the giveaway "games" first were halted the theatremen refused to take the matter seriously. They changed their plan of operation for Bank Night, the most prevalent of the chance prize devices, and instead of requiring a patron to buy a ticket to the theatre to participate in the drawing, announced that anyone outside the theatre could claim the money if his or her name were drawn. When more arrests immediately were forthcoming, certain theatremen got an injunction to stop the police from making such arrests. In court the injunction was dismissed and the matter now goes to a higher court for consideration. Only last week several of the violators were brought into court, found guilty and fined $15 each, including costs. They sought a new trial and hearing of the motion was set for May 3rd.

The health ordinance enforcement is another poser. When the recent "flu" epidemic was at its height, all theatres were ordered to rope off seats in the lobbies and not allow any standees. If there were no seats in the auditorium the patrons were to stand outside the theatre and wait their turn. Special policemen were assigned so that one would be at each theatre. In the loop theatres, firemen were also on hand to see that the ordinance was carried out. Today, with the epidemic apparently a thing of the past, the ordinance still is enforced and just as rigidly.

WOULD MAKE FILMS ADJUNCT OF COURT

Motion pictures, often in the courts but only as a complainant or a defendant, would be given an official position in the federal judiciary, under the terms of a bill introduced in Congress last week by Representative Sam Hobbs of Alabama. Mr. Hobbs would equip all courts below the supreme court with motion picture cameras and sound equipment and all courts above the district courts with projectors and screens. Cases would be recorded on film in the courts of original jurisdiction and if an appeal is filed, the superior court would be able to review the arguments at first hand. The cost would be assessed against the parties in litigation.

One of the requirements is that the temperature in theatres must be no more than 70 degrees, and this too is closely watched by the city's representatives.

Just why, exhibitors are asking, has all this interest in the operation of theatres here developed abruptly and sharply? In years past, when such situations arose they were promptly settled. Some showmen say that a better understanding between city officials and the theatre executives accounted for the amicable situation that existed earlier.

Changes in Exhibitor Units

Until a year ago the Chicago Exhibitors Association was headed by Jack Miller, and there was much harmony between the theatremen and the city fathers. When Mr. Miller resigned as president of the association, which now consists chiefly of the Balaban & Katz and Warner Brothers theatres, Morris Leonard, of the B & K legal staff, accepted the presidency. Mr. Leonard continued to handle his duties with B & K along with heading the association.

At the time Mr. Leonard took charge it was reported that the association would be less active. Withdrawal of the Essaness circuit had reduced the sphere of operations of the association. In the meantime the Allied group had been materially strengthened. At the same time, friction between the two groups had dwindled.

But there has developed, exhibitors say cautiously, a lack of understanding between the theatre groups and the city officials, who feel that the theatremen have not cooperated with them as they should.

The Bank Night Issue

When the Better Business Bureau some weeks ago started a drive to eliminate chance games giveaways and demanded that city officials stop the game, theatremen refused to adopt the attitude that the money awards practice was wrong, as the city officials apparently hoped they would. Instead, the exhibitors raised a defiant "You can't do that to us." Whereupon the city government took sterner measures and stopped the games.

Then the health ordinance situation came along and the literal enforcement of it has cost thousands of dollars in grosses reported lost to theatres. Patrons have had to wait out on the sidewalks in cold and wet weather while the spacious lobbies are empty because of the no-standees rule.

Just why theatre license fees should be increased to almost double their present rate is another question confronting exhibitors, and there has been no indication of modification.

One Move Halted by Fee

Theatremen have protested against these signs of municipal pressure but little of concerted effort to lighten it has been evidenced. Exhibitors say that the way to do it is to get the proper individual to represent the theatre interests. That person, and in one instance it is reported that such a person, an attorney, was suggested, would know the feelings of the city officials. The fee for this representation was considered too high and there ended what might have been a settlement of the whole matter.

Now negotiations for peace will have to be started all over again, at a cost probably higher than was asked in the first place.

Want Things Settled

Smaller exhibitors and some of the circuit leaders feel that the attitude taken by leaders of the larger groups has caused the friction and they want to get things settled before more happens. Just what they will or can do has not revealed.

The return of Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied theatres from Florida this week, as well as the return of Mr. Leonard from a South American cruise, is looked upon by some as presaging a settlement. Jack Miller has come back to Chicago after a prolonged stay in the East. This has brought reports that Mr. Miller may enter into the picture somewhere, but Mr. Miller met them with a laugh and the comment that he was not particularly interested.

UNION AND HOYT'S SPLIT COMBINATION

Fight for Best Product Coming When Australian Circuits Separate Dec. 31, Says Auten

Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Greater Union Theatres, Ltd., operating the largest circuit of key city theatres in Australia, has decided to break away from Hoyt's Theatres and the two companies, from the beginning of next year, will go their separate roads, Harold Auten, New York representative of Union, said this week.

"This is bound to have a great effect upon the amount of product used in Australia," said Mr. Auten, "and on the revenue received by the various American companies as, obviously, there will now be a fight for the best product for first run in each city between the two circuits."

Mr. Auten added that he just had received a long cable from Mr. Doyle, in Sydney, instructing him to issue to the American motion picture industry the following statement:

"Mr. Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Greater Union Theatres, has cabled his New York office that at Greater Union's suggestion the notice which has been mutually given betweeen Greater Union and Hoyt's, cancelling the present General Theatres Corporation combine of these two theatre chains in Australia, will take effect on the 31st day of December, 1937.

"Mr. Doyle goes on to point out in his cable that, out of the total key city buying power of the present combine, Greater Union controls 67½% and Hoyt's 32½%, the key city situations being made up as follows:

"In Sydney, Greater Union have 5 first run theatres, Hoyt's having 2, each company having a half interest in an additional first run theatre.

"In Melbourne, both Greater Union and Hoyt's have 4 first run theatres each.

"In Adelaide, Greater Union have 3 first run theatres, and Hoyt's 1.

"In Brisbane, Greater Union have 4, and Hoyt's 1 first run theatre.

"In Perth, Hoyt's have 4 first run theatres, each company, i.e., Greater Union and Hoyt's, having a half interest in an additional first run theatre.

"In Newcastle, Greater Union have 4 first run theatres, and Hoyt's have none.

"The same condition exists in Tasmania, where Greater Union have six first run theatres, and Hoyt's none.

"Thus, out of a total of 40 first run theatres in the General Theatre combine, Greater Union own or control 27, and Hoyt's 13.

"In the suburbs, Hoyt's are independently numerically strong, but Greater Union, backed by strong financial resources, plan to build or acquire 200 suburban and country theatres during 1938, which will place them in a paramount position in Australia."

PLANS TO TELEVISE CORONATION TABLED

Plans to televise the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey in May have been abandoned by the British Broadcasting Corporation, the authorities having refused permission after months of negotiation. The necessity of the television transmitter being inconveniently close to the leading figures in the ceremony is believed to have been the deciding factor. Newsreel companies will be granted permission to film the ceremony in the Abbey but television crews will have to be content with scenes of the processions to and from the church.

GB's Directors Disagree on Plan To Close Studio

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Decision to pay a Gaumont British dividend on the preference shares was reached by the narrow margin of a five to four vote of the directorate, it was revealed in London this week in a press statement by John Maxwell. Joining Mr. Maxwell in opposition to the payment were D. Boardman, O. H. C. Balfour and Sidney R. Kent of Twentieth Century-Fox, the two last-named represented by alternates.

Disagree on Producing

The board also discused the company's production future. Although no official statement was issued, it was understood the meeting was adjourned following a major split in opinion, the Ostrers desiring to close the Shepherd's Bush studio, Mr. Maxwell opposing such a move, declaring his belief that production there would be profitable if the proper methods were used. The Ostrer plan is believed to be that the transfer of production is necessary under the contracts of the company with directors and players, and provides for Jessie Matthews going to Pinewood, and C. M. Woolf taking over distribution through General Film Distributors.

In discussing the dividend, Mr. Maxwell said: "The point at issue was whether it is permissible in estimating earnings to take into account the profits of subsidiary companies that had made profits and to leave out of the reckoning the losses of subsidiaries when they were sustained. I have referred the issue to our solicitors for counsel's opinion, as the other dissenting directors also have done, I understand."

Mr. Maxwell also declared that the losses of subsidiaries amounted to £623,000 ($3,115,000) to Dec. 31, 1936. It is understood the American interests, represented by Mr. Kent, supported Mr. Maxwell because the payment of the dividend will deplete the company's cash and depreciate the value of the Twentieth Century-Fox holdings. Understood to be a still more important reason is the fear of being associated with an action believed to be illegal and supported only by the Ostrer section of the board.

Press Expresses Criticism

The press is again critical of Gaumont finances with the Daily Mail financial editor suggesting that the film stocks valued in the balance sheet at £1,500,000 are actually worth half that, representing a loss of £725,000 against a reserve of only £500,000. He says that a dividend should not have been paid and that the reserve should have been conserved.

If the preferred dividend had been passed, holders would have been entitled to vote six months later. The impression prevails in London that Mr. Maxwell wanted the preference default in order to use the preference votes to defeat the Ostrer-Twentieth Century Fox control through Metropolis and Bradford. This concern's GB holdings would no longer be a majority if the preferred shares had voting power.

Financial advances from Lord Portal and Mr. Woolf are seen as helping GB meet its contract obligations to Alfred Hitchcock, Sonnie Hale and Robert Stevenson, directors, and Miss Matthews, Ann Lee, Nova Pilbeam, Lilli Palmer, Oscar Homolka and Desmond Tester, players.

It was indicated in informed circles Tuesday that a meeting has been set with Mr. Woolf and Herbert Wilcox, but the Maxwell opposition may defeat the plan and force the Ostrers to face the cost of continued production without much money in the bank, which would inevitably hasten a major crisis in the affairs of GB. The story of the possible stopping of production appearing in the evening papers in London Tuesday caused a slump in film shares.

Directors Issue Statement

In an official statement issued by the board of directors it was declared that the board recognizes the public interest in the future of the corporation, but "their first duty must be to the shareholders. Any premature statement must prejudice the delicate complex negotiations which have as their object the strengthening of the company's trading position."

Continuing, the statement said: "All that can be said at this stage is that a proposal is under examination which would assure substantial revenue on the production side, while leaving the company free to develop its prosperous theatre interests."

Conferences were to be held Wednesday with Mr. Woolf relative to a distributing affiliation with the latter. The board was also to meet formally on Thursday to consider the results of the conference.

Empire's President Denies Union Merger Discussions

Abraham I. Kindler, president of the Empire State Operators' Motion Picture Union, Inc., denies from the union's headquarters in Brooklyn that any discussions are being held pointing to a merger between Empire and Local No. 306 of the IATSE. Mr. Kindler asks publication of a "protest" against such reports in order to end "a panicky condition" among local exhibitors and Empire's membership.

Sound Patents Company Files Suit Against MGM

Sound Pictures Patents Company, an Illinois corporation, has filed suit against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, claiming infringement of two recording patents and asking an accounting of profits and royalties as well as damages. The patents in question involve the application of magnetic light beams and the synchronization of sound upon film.

LEGISLATORS OPEN ATTACK ON INDUSTRY IN 13 STATES

Proposals Range from Tax on Percentage Checkers to Barring Newsreel Cameramen from Courtrooms in Jersey

Bills to Divorce Production and Distribution from Exhibition Are Presented in Six States; Censorship Bills Studied

Film Measures Up To Legislatures

Alabama has enacted a 2 per cent sales and admissions tax.

Ohio would raise censoring fees from $18 to $120 a feature.

Divorcement of production and distribution from exhibition is sought in California, Indiana, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Minnesota, and Iowa.

South Carolina seeks control of sponsored commercial films in theatres.

Ohio has in mind a three per cent admission tax bill and another for seven per cent.

Massachusetts legislators defeated a bill to require a toilet for every 150 theatre seats.

The Indiana House defeated a censorship bill in committee.

Pennsylvania's censorship law would be extended to include prohibition of any scenes of violence.

Maryland would classify pictures for adult viewing.

Newsreel cameramen would be prohibited from New Jersey courtrooms — an echo of the Hauptmann murder trial.

City, state and national legislators have set up the motion picture as target of a new attack which in diversity of proposals surpasses anything previously leveled at the industry in this unusually active legislative winter. In thirteen states, measures directly restrictive of or expensive to motion picture interests, chiefly exhibitors, were before the legislatures. Elsewhere there were many bills under consideration which would affect the motion picture as well as other businesses, such as sales taxes.

Sales Tax for Alabama

Alabama's lawmakers approved a two per cent sales tax, while the legislators of many other states are clamoring for new or additional taxes on amusements. The Alabama measure, which becomes effective March 1st, includes motion picture shows, vaudeville, amusement parks, athletic contests, skating rinks, dance halls, the sale of time or the facilities of broadcasting stations, the sale of all newspapers and magazines, and the sale of advertising space in publications.

A bill has been introduced in the Nebraska unicameral legislature calling for a 10 per cent tax on gross income from film rentals and a 10 per cent tax on admissions. A potential cost to the industry of $600,000 a year was estimated by distributors and exhibitors at Omaha. Another measure before the Nebraska governing body would impose a license fee of $1,000 for each distributor doing business in the state, and an amendment provides for the prosecution of any exhibitor who overbuys product to an extent harmful to competing exhibitors.

Fees for Checking

A measure in the lower house of the North Dakota legislature is aimed at theatre admission checkers. It provides for a $5 annual license fee and a monthly report to the state auditor accompanied by remittances of $10 a month for services performed in cities of less than 2,000 population; $15 a month in cities between 2,000 and 4,000; $20 a month in cities from 4,000 to 6,000; and $25 a month for checkers in cities over 6,000 population. A second House bill, placing an additional one cent tax on amusement tickets, has been killed.

The Ohio House of Representatives is considering a measure which would repeal the $3 a reel censorship fee and impose a tax of two cents a foot on all film shown in Ohio. An alternate measure would increase the censorship fees from $3 to $5 a reel. Approval of the first bill would mean an increase from $18 to $120 in fees for each feature of six reels shown in the state.

An admission tax bill providing for levies of 5 and 10 per cent has been introduced in the Vermont legislature.

A measure pending in the Wisconsin Assembly provides for an amusement tax of 3 per cent on gross receipts of theatres. Revenue from the levy would go into the state's general fund for old age pensions. The bill exempts athletic contests of grammar and high school teams and amusements sponsored by religious or charitable organizations. Another bill introduced in the Assembly under the sponsorship of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities would impose a 10 per cent tax on theatre admissions.

The attack on circuits affiliated with distributors has been extended to three more states. Bills to divorce exhibition from distribution are pending now in California, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. The Iowa Affiliate of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, voted at its convention last week to sponsor a similar bill in the state legislature. A playdate bill also will be introduced which will carry a provision giving the state police over the motion picture industry.

The judiciary committee of the North Dakota Senate is studying testimony submitted at a hearing on the bill which would require producers to discard their theatre interests. Al Steffes and H. M. Richey, officials of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, urged passage of the measure but objected to an amendment which would permit the circuits to retain their present holdings. The bill has been passed by the House without the amendment.

State legislators are not confining their attentions to taxes. A hearing was held last week by the Maryland House on a bill to classify pictures. In cases of those designated for adults only, persons under 18 years of age would be barred from showings.

The Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors would be required to reject all motion pictures which depict murder, suicide or highway robbery, in a bill presented in the legislature last week.

In South Carolina a measure to prohibit commercial advertising on motion picture screens is being considered.

Sunday shows, a subject of controversy in many communities, have been barred in one community, and in a Virginia town a law prohibiting them has been repealed. Films will be shown on Sundays at the Liberty theatre in Bedford, Va. In discussing the matter with town officials, Dan Weinberg, manager of the theatre, promised that no shows would be given at hours when church services are held. Sunday shows for charity were banned in College Park, Ga., at a meeting of the city council.

New regulations governing the use of motion picture apparatus have been issued by the Boston Commissioner of Public Safety. The use of 2,000 foot reels is officially sanctioned and special rules have been made for new theatre construction. A separate rewind and film room of not less than five by eight feet, adjoining the projection room and of the same construction, is stipulated. The requirements call for larger portable booths which must be designed for temporary use for one projector only. The use of asbestos cloth booths is prohibited.

Mrs. Johnson To Lecture

Mrs. Martin Johnson, widow of the explorer, who was killed in an air crash, is to show "Borneo," the last jungle film made by the couple, in the Kansas City Municipal Auditorium on March 3rd. Mrs. Johnson will lecture after the showing.

Reelect Portland Censor

Mrs. Thomas M. Joyce has been reelected chairman of the Censor board at Portland, Ore., for another year. Major Paul Hathaway was elected vice-chairman.

Robert Lord, associate producer at Warners, has been signed to a new contract. He recently completed "The Prince and the Pauper."

"STAR IS BORN" SHOWS

A Herald Preview in Advance Stills by Gus McCarthy

IRONIC in view of its reputation as a braggart among the arts is the motion picture's infrequent use of the motion picture, its affairs and its people, as story material. Printed fiction is overrun with heroic, villainous and otherwise noteworthy writers and poets whose profession is dealt with as of perhaps just a shade less than cosmic importance. Painters have always found time to provide posterity with truckloads of self-portraits and most of today's radio programs give more emphasis to the method of operation of radio broadcasting than to the entertainment conveyed or the sponsors' product.

There are those who say that this seeming restraint on the part of motion picture producers derives from a scanning of box office records chalked up against motion pictures about motion pictures, but as many more rise to point out that most of these films were made with tongue in cheek or by persons afflicted by a violent professional inferiority complex. This is what dialogue writers would describe as a moot point, if the adjective weren't a microphonic dud, and has nothing to do with the case of "A Star Is Born," the subject of this piece.

"A Star Is Born" is being produced in Technicolor by Selznick International, which is to say by David O. Selznick, for distribution by United Artists. Tentative release date is May 19, although technological or other vicissitudes may result in revision of the date. As this is written, the picture is rounding into completed form on schedule and Hollywood is discussing, with a degree of interest revealing marked and commonly discounted pride of profession, progress made and prospects of the film both as box office material and documentary significance. The project is regarded by all as likely to stand for some time as the industry's quasi-official utterance on the subject colloquially known as crashing Hollywood.

The story is offered as a straightforward account of how a young lady reared in North Dakota got into motion pictures and, ultimately, won an Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award and the husband of her choice. It is described as "startling human interest drama realistically portraying the heartbreak, despair and bitterness that so often are the accompaniments of screen success." Yet it is by no means lacking comedy contrast, love interest and swift, vigorous action, plot complication and suspense.

Indeed, those elements, which all agree presage entertainment and commercial merit, have been literally poured into the production. Janet Gaynor is cast as "The Small Town Girl" grown up, wise to the ways of the world, capable of grappling with fate, who wanted screen fame and upon whom luck smiled. Fredric March is seen as the brilliant picture star whose career faded as that of the protege he loved and married blossomed. The supporting cast is large and worthy. In important roles it includes Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine, Lionel Stander, Edgar Kennedy and Owen Moore.

William A. Wellman, whose long association with pictures has made him intimately familiar with the triumphs and tragedies of countless tyros, wrote the story in collaboration with Robert Carson. He also directed the production. The talents of the noted team of Alan Campbell and Dorothy Parker, whose incisive and biting dialogue have been important factors in many films, are blended in the screen play. Howard Greene, behind the camera on "The Garden of Allah," is the photographer.

How this drama of a Hollywood the world worships but does not really know will fare at the hands of the public nobody can predict, although everybody will try. Here, in this sanctum of supermen and women, there is a feeling of definite optimism. Naturally, the producing organization is sublimely confident that "A Star Is Born" will receive an enthusiastic and profitable popular welcome.

With the public, as always, rests the decision.

Rollins College Confers Doctor's Degree on Harry M. Warner

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures, with a group of international figures who received honorary degrees at Rollins College. Mr. Warner was awarded the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. Left to right: Thomas J. Watson, Mr. Warner, Lord Davies, President Hamilton Holt of Rollins College, Dr. Van Vlissingen and the Reverend Ralph W. Sockman.

"A man of will and vision in the development of a young and vital art; an executive genius; a practical idealist; a benefactor of many philanthropies." Thus did Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College, turn to Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures, and present to him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities.

The occasion was the Founders' Day convocation of Rollins College, last Monday, at Winter Park, Florida. A year ago the university awarded a similar degree to Franklin D. Roosevelt. Monday's ceremony was the first conducted by Rollins in honoring a motion picture executive and marked one of the very few times a degree had been extended to the head of any motion picture company.

In citing Mr. Warner for the honor, Richard Burton, professor of English literature at Rollins, said:

"Harry Warner was brought to this country by his parents at the age of seven. He was educated in our public schools and, from an early age, devoted his energy and his vision to a phase of the theatre then in its pioneer stage, rapidly bringing it to its present estate. His career reads like a romance. Warner Brothers, through Vitaphone, were the first producers to sponsor sound films. They also were the early experimenters in color on the screen and have been conspicuous in utilizing the finest literature of the world for picture purposes. Their productions include such film masterpieces as 'A Midsummer Night's Dream', 'Anthony Adverse', 'Green Pastures', and 'The Story of Louis Pasteur'. Mr. Warner's business sagacity has enabled him to carry out ambitious plans at a time when many similar organizations suffered from the financial depression."

Mr. Warner's acceptance of the degree brought the response that, "I hope and pray the screen will continue to play a great part in preserving Americanism and in giving the youth of tomorrow the opportunities it gave us yesterday."

The recognition came just 34 years after Harry Warner led his brothers Albert, Jack and the late Sam Warner from the business of a bicycle shop in Youngstown, Ohio, to the town of Newcastle, in Pennsylvania, where they opened their first motion picture theatre, the Castle.

Foreign Press Society Presents Annual Awards

Members of the Foreign Press Society of Hollywood presented awards to winners of "1936 Bests," selected by poll, at a luncheon last Wednesday. The correspondents voted "Fury" the best picture, Luise Rainer the best actress for her work in "The Great Ziegfeld," and Paul Muni the best actor for "The Story of Louis Pasteur." Rouben Mamoulian's direction of "The Gay Desperado" received the award for the best direction.

GB Enlists U. S. Army For Preview at Fort

Tuesday night Gaumont-British in New York enlisted the 16th Regiment, an army of military major domos and the fort at Governor's Island to preview its new feature, "You're in the Army Now." (Reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of February 20th under the title "O. H. M. S.") Diner and cocketails were served to 40 exhibitors and reporters in the officers' club at the encampment, with Arthur Lee presiding.

PRACTICAL BASIS FOR AIR-CONDITIONING

Substantial revision of practices in air-conditioning of theatres is advised by J. T. Knight, Jr., of the Paramount Theatres Service Corporation, in an article written for Better Theatres, offering an answer to the question, "What is the best system of air-conditioning today?"

The trouble with theatre air-conditioning, Mr. Knight declares, is not with the available equipment, but with system design and operating practices which result from ill-advised economy, misleading municipal regulations, and the failure of theatre managements to determine true comfort conditions according to factors peculiar to each theatre.

"We frequently hear theatre men," he points out, "comparing the cost of an air-conditioning improvement with an installation that perhaps was made last year, just as if air-conditioning were a cut-and-dried package commodity having a standard price everywhere."

A practical method by which each manager may determine the effective temperature best suited to the comfort factors of his own theatre is given in the article, which will appear in the March 6th issue of Better Theatres.

For theatre owners and managers confronted with the problem of selecting floor coverings which will give long wear and conform to certain decorative standards, yet come within a definite price range, the types of carpeting most generally considered are analyzed in an article to appear in the same issue accompanying next week's Herald. In the opinion of the author, Eugene Clute, well-known writer and editor in the field of interior decoration, Wilton weaves, rather than Velvet, are generally preferable for theatres despite wide adoption of Velvet, exceptions to this appearing largely where long-run economy and appearance must be sacrificed to low initial cost.

Ask Momand Action Be Moved from Boston

Distributor defendants in the $100,000 anti-trust suit filed in the United States district court at Boston by George S. Ryan, attorney for Mrs. Loretta Momand, mother of A. B. Momand, whose similar $5,000,000 litigation the attorney is also handling, have entered a plea that the case be withdrawn from the Boston court.

Defendants, with the exception of RKO Distributing corporation, complain that Boston is too far from the scene of alleged damages, the Odeon theatre in Shawnee, Okla., and that trial of the case would necessitate great inconvenience and expense in transporting witnesses.

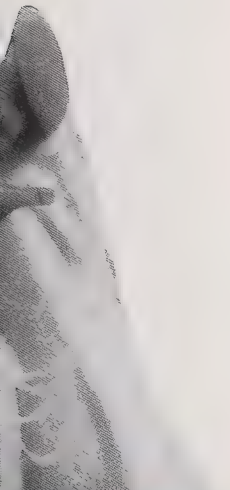
ROMANCE! The most powerful love story either Carole or Fred has ever starred in. An up and down romance as real as young love itself.

GLAMOUR! When you add to the glamour of Carole herself the exotic appeal of Dorothy Lamour, star of "The Jungle Princess", you've got something to talk about.

COMEDY! Charlie Butterworth's funniest picture. You haven't learned to laugh till you've seen Hollywood's ace dead pan comic as the hottest piano player in Panama.

EXCITEMENT! Fred in another of those brawls that had you cheering in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."



MUSIC! Fred plays the trumpet and sings. Carole carols. Dorothy Lamour swings. Butterworth plays hot piano. There are five song hits.

Pulchritude Shortage

Samuel Goldwyn, preparing to glorify a new crop of feminine beauties in his forthcoming "Goldwyn Follies," has just completed a survey of suitable talent in Hollywood. According to the survey, there are only 300 outstanding beauties now working here, and more than 80% of these are under stock contract to major studios. These girls do not receive screen credit, but under their contracts they earn from $50 to $100 a week, in some cases as much as $250.

Mr. Goldwyn considers the situation serious, from his point of view, as the number of beauties available is not adequate to his requirements. To meet his needs, the producer is planning to send out teams of cameramen and test directors to various key cities.

"It is a difficult task, getting the really beautiful girls to come out and get tested," says Mr. Goldwyn. "We don't want to be limited to any one class for our material.

"I am writing to Junior Leagues, college dramatic clubs, and chambers of commerce, in fact to any group where girls of beauty or talent may be found.

"Even at that it will be difficult, because many girls of extreme beauty have no interest in a screen career."

Mr. Goldwyn asserts that, although hundreds of girls come here every week seeking picture employment, very few have the qualities the screen demands. Many of them have been told by friends to come here because they look like certain established stars. These are precisely the ones that the producer says he can not use. "We don't want carbon copies," are his words for it.

Production Normal

Holding to the normal seasonal pace, Hollywood started 10 pictures and finished 5 during the week. Both sides of the production ledger are sprinkled with pictures that seem to have potentialities of attracting better than average interest from exhibitors and theatre goers.

Both the new MGM units apparently are in the big feature category. Because of the repute attained by previous editions, "Broadway Melody of 1937" stands out as the more important. Being produced on lavish scale, with personnel, story content, music, spectacle and substantiating effects of the quality that arouses maximum interest, it will feature Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor, Binnie Barnes, George Murphy, Sophie Tucker, Buddy Ebsen, Robert Wildhack, Charles Dorin, Judy Garland and Larry Adler. Roy Del Ruth is directing. The second picture, which because its title, "The Old Soak," has already provoked controversy, will feature Wallace Beery, Lynne Carver, Janet Becher, Ted Healy, Eric Linden, Una Merkel, Judith Barrett, James Bush, Robert McWade and George Sidney. J. Walter Ruben is directing.

$1,250,000 BUDGETED FOR WALL STREET STORY

RKO-Radio's cost sheet on "The Toast of New York" is expected to foot up a total in the neighborhood of $1,250,000.

The production, now in its third month before the cameras, deals with Wall Street personalities and affairs in the 1860*'s a period dating the beginning of many great fortunes—and misfortunes.*

Edward Arnold is starred in the story, which is from "The Book of Daniel Drew," by Bouck White, and "Robbers Barons," by Matthew Josephson.

Ruggles Is Featured

Paramount started two. "Turn Off the Moon," which Louis Seiler directs, will feature Charles Ruggles, Mary Carlisle, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs and Ben Blue. "Hills of Old Wyoming," a Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy feature, presents William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden, Gale Sheridan and Clara Kimball Young. Nate Watt was assigned to direct.

Two started also at Columbia. In "League of Frightened Men" Walter Connolly, Irene Hervey, Lionel Stander, Allen Brook, Eduardo Ciannelli, Walter Kingsford, Leonard Mudi, Ian Walse, Kenneth Hunter, Nana Bryant, Charles Irwin, Jonathan Hale, Jameson Thomas, Rafaela Ottiano, Edward McNamara, James Flavin and Herbert Ashley will be seen. Alfred E. Green is directing. The cast of "Right Guy" includes Paul Kelly, Jacqueline Wells, George McKay, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Montague Shaw, Wade Boteler, Edward Earle, John Tyrrell and Harry Illisham. D. Ross Lederman is the director.

Resuming activities, Goldwyn Productions started "The Woman's Touch" for United Artists release. Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea are starred, supported by Charles Winninger, Andrea Leeds, Erik Rhodes, Ella Logan and Broderick Crawford. John Blystone is the director.

Republic's contribution to the new work is "Navy Blues." It will offer Mary Brian, Dick Purcell, Warren Hymer, Lucille Gleason, Horace MacMahon and Joseph Sawyer. Ralph Staub is directing.

With Lew Landers as director, Radio started "Borrowed Time." The cast is made up of Onslow Stevens, Paul Guilfoyle, Gordon Jones, Constance Worth, Barbara Pepper, Vinton Haworth, Frank M. Thomas, George Irving, Willie Best and Patsy Lee Parsons.

At 20th Century-Fox "Angel's Holiday started. Jane Withers is starred with Joan Davis, John Qualen, Robert Kent and Frank Jenks the currently named principals. Lou Seiler is directing.

Paramount Completes Two

Paramount accounted for two of the five finished pictures. The first, "Souls at Sea," discussed recently in a Motion Picture Herald pictorial preview, features Gary Cooper, George Raft and Frances Dee, with Henry Wilcoxson, Harry Carey, Robert Barratt, Olympe Bradna, Robert Cummings, Beulah Bondi, Gilbert Emery, George Zucco, Porter Hall and Jamison Thomas, Henry Hathaway directed. "The Girl From Scotland Yard," an Emanuel Cohen production directed by Robert Vignola, will present Karen Morley, Robert Baldwin, Katherine Alexander, Eduardo Ciannelli, Monti Lloyd Crane, Bud Flannigan, Phil Sleeman, Alphonse Martel, Don Brodie and Eddie Featherstone.

"Racing Luck" was finished at Columbia. The cast lists Dorothy Wilson, Charles Quigley, Eddie Nugent, Patricia Wilson, Gene Morgan, John Gallaudet, Gordon Elliott and Arthur Aylesworth. Lambert Hillyer directed.

Universal completed "The Stones Cry Out." The cast is composed of Nan Grey, Judith Barrett, John Howard, Robert Warwick, Ralph Remley, Edward Ellis, Benny Bartlett and William Davidson. Harold Young directed.

The final picture is MGM's "Captains Courageous." It will present Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore, Melvyn Douglas, Charley Grapewin, Mickey Rooney, Harry Carey, Jack LaRue and John Carradine. Victor Fleming directed.

Types at Premium

The Hollywood character actor, who for many cinematic years has gone his placid way almost completely submerged by the brilliance of the star name, has gradually and decisively come into his own. Every alert producer has at least ten good character players on talent roster and, as a consequence, is able to negotiate character trades for top name players.

The doubling of Radio's contract player list in the past year is a concrete illustration of the current importance of the character actor, as approximately twenty of the seventy-six actors and actresses now under contract are character people. These, according to studio advices, are continually valuable for star player trades when not active on their home lot.

HOLDERS QUESTION RKO STOCK STATUS

Motions and Arguments Cause Delay of Hearing on Reorganization Plan Until March 18th

Attacks on the validity of the outstanding RKO common stock and its position in the company's reorganization, together with the pressing of a petition having a bearing on the secured position of the RKO debentures, were the highlights of the RKO creditor's first hearing in connection with the reorganization of the company, before Federal Judge William Bondy in New York on Friday.

Arguments on the status of the common stock and other motions pertaining to the reorganization precluded discussion of the RKO reorganization plan itself, so the court set March 18 for the first hearing on the plan and indicated that the preliminary motions argued would be disposed of on or shortly before that date.

The attack on the status of the common stock was led by Ernest R. Stirn of Milwaukee, holder of 1,264 shares of the old RKO Class A stock, which under a recapitalization plan adopted in December, 1931, was eliminated for the present RKO common under an exchange on the basis of one share of new common for four shares of Class A. Mr. Stirn refused to exchange his A shares for the common and charged that the recapitalization plan was invalid and was placed in effect without a majority vote of the stockholders. His petition asserts that the old Class A stock, prior to the 1931 recapitalization, held a preferential position above that of any other RKO security outstanding at that time and, therefore, is still entitled to a comparable preferenial position under the present reorganization plan.

Validity of the RKO common also was attacked by John Stover, who acquired Class A stock after the recapitalization plan had been placed in effect and subsequently exchanged it for the common.

Judge Bondy allowed attorneys for Mr. Stirn and Mr. Stover until March 15th to prepare briefs and rebuttal papers and indicated that his decision might be ready by the time of the next hearing on the plan, March 18th. He also reserved decision until then on the petitions of the two stockholders to intervene in the reorganization proceedings. A third attack on the validity of the common has been made by Francis Hickey, a stockholder of Washington, D. C., who, however, did not appear at last week's hearing.

The question of the secured position of the RKO debentures is involved in a petition by the RKO trustee for authority to retire by a cash payment the $650,000 of RKO gold notes outstanding, which are held by the Bank of America National Association. The notes are secured by virtually all the going assets of RKO, whereas the debentures have a second lien on the assets while the gold notes are in existence. Some legal opinion holds that the debentures may lose their secured position by retirement of the gold notes, although the RKO trustee has not made this contention and proposed the retirement of the notes solely as a step which would save RKO $2,100 a month in interest charges.

Judge Bondy also reserved decision on a petition by the preferred stockholders' committee of Orpheum Circuit for leave to intervene in the RKO reorganization proceedings.

The sale of the Orpheum Circuit's principal assets to Stadium Theatres Corporation, a wholly owned RKO subsidiary, was also consummated last Friday with the payment to Marcus Heiman, Orpheum trustee in bankruptcy, of $700,000 cash. On Wednesday, however, United States District Judge Francis G. Caffey granted permission for a review of Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn's order approving the transaction.

There are approximately $2,100,000 of creditor's claims against Orpheum, exclusive of those held by Stadium which totaled more than $3,000,000, but are subordinated under the terms of the sale. Thus, the participating creditors will receive approximately 30 cents on the dollar for their claims on this basis.

Hippodrome Appeal Up March 12

Meanwhile, Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson in New York had signed an order permitting the Hippodrome Company of Ohio to appeal from an order reducing its $888,666 claim against RKO to $88,666 A hearing on the appeal was set for March 12. The claim is for rent on the Hippodrome in Cleveland, which RKO leased in July, 1930, and abandoned in February, 1933. The Hippodrome Company stated that it would be willing to accept $451,666 in settlement of its claim.

At the same time, Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in New York signed an order in the RKO reorganization proceedings permitting the Irving Trust Company, as trustee, to cross appeal against the Fort Worth Properties, Inc. The Fort Worth Properties had entered a claim for $507,500 and on January 18 were allowed $17,139 in settlement. The trustee claims that the company should have been allowed only $3,737.

Judge Caffey also signed an order on Saturday in the reorganization proceedings permitting W. Gordon Burnett to appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals from an order signed by Judge William Bondy in New York on January 25, which disallowed his claim for $41,172.

Lincoln Deal Assists Cooper Foundation

The deal between J. H. Cooper of New York and Bob Livingston of Lincoln, Neb., has been revealed as a move to build up the J. H. Cooper $1,000,000 Foundation for aid to underprivileged children. For the concession from Mr. Cooper of the best of the second run pictures at the Livingston Capitol, the house must turn over 35 per cent of the first $1,000 grossed each week to the Foundation, take out the next $200 for the theatre, and then give 25 per cent of all the balance over $1,200 to the Foundation.

SAYS STARS ON RADIO ENDANGER ATTENDANCE

Action of the large producers in tying-in with General Mills in a weekly broadcast series direct from studio stages goes unnoticed by the MPTOA — its officers had "no comment" but it brings from Allied States Association a warning of box office jeopardization.

"It is hard to believe that major executives would endanger the entire industry to pick up such small change," declared Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman, who predicts that "broadcasting from studios will inevitably interfere with theatre attendance".

"Moreover," continued Mr. Myers, "it is bound to lessen the value of many stars participating therein. Radio exploitation for films and theatres is helpful only when combined into a good show. Having heard Fred Astaire and other box office 'champions' destroy themselves on the air, I fear the worst.

"It is too bad that this should happen just when the goose has resumed laying those bright shiny eggs," Mr. Myers concluded.

Studio Broadcasts Delayed Until March

The General Mills broadcasts direct from the sound stages of the large studios in Hollywood, over national networks, have been postponed until March 14th. The deal was closed last week by Bagley, Horton and Hoyt, Chicago agency. So far, details of the personalities to broadcast and the programs themselves are somewhat hazy. A problem to be solved is the schedule by which the programs from the various studios will be governed. Originally, the initial show was to be "Love Is News," a Twentieth Century-Fox picture, but the film has been completed.

Zukor Dinner in New York Set for March 29

The testimonial dinner to be given Adolph Zukor by theatre owners of New York, originally scheduled for March 27, has been postponed two nights and will be held March 29 at the Waldorf-Astoria. William Brandt, chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, said that March 27 is the second night of Passover and if the dinner were held that night many persons would remain away.

Independents Adopt New Longer Reel

Independent distributors such as Republic, Grand National and Gaumont British are adopting the new standard 2,000-foot reel and new releases from the companies are being received at exchange centers on the larger spools, Arthur Dickinson of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who returned to New York recently from a tour of southern and middle western exchanges, has announced.

FEDERAL REPORT RELATES TALE OF BELL SYSTEM IN MOVIELAND

Three Volume, Nine Pound Publication, Complete with 93 Tables, Credits the Company with Master Hand in Design

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

"Uptown and Down—or With Erpi through Broadway and Wall Street"—might be the title of a hundred and fifty million dollar story in three volumes just completed for the Federal Communications Commission.

The report is the Commission's account of the adventures, sometimes scientific, sometimes dramatic, sometimes financial, but always just about colossal, of what some call the Telephone Company and some call the Bell System, in movieland.

For the nine years, 1927–35, the picture industry has paid to Erpi $94,851,215, which in direct payments has cost:
Exhibitors about $10,000,000 a year;
Producers about $3,000,000 a year.

Thus for the first time the price of the sound revolution of the art and industry of the motion picture is written down in official figures—about $13,000,000 a year so far—an imposing figure by itself, but not so awe inspiring when measured alongside the production budgets of Hollywood or the gross incomes of the world market of the screen.

The Federal Trade Commission's report credits the Bell System and Erpi with a vast major design and a far-reaching master hand in the shaping of the motion picture map, citing operations from the days of the first alliance with Warner Brothers' Vitaphone to placing Sidney Kent with the Fox Film Corporation and most recently financing aspects of the "new" Universal.

661 Pages, 93 Tables

The job of preparing the report—it's a nine-pound baby conceived by Congress in 1935 in a resolution ordering the Commission to investigate all activities of the American Telephone and Telegraph—was done by a staff of economists and accountants hired by the Commission, and was based on information acquired through study of the A. T. & T. books. It served as the basis of hearings held in New York last Christmas. Dr. Francis Staten was in charge of the Erpi phase of the report, which constituted the Commission's presentation of direct testimony.

The three volumes, planographed—printed from a flat surface, as in lithography—Webster's Dictionary—consist of 661 pages and 93 tables. But that's only the beginning. The Erpi report is only a part of the file in the case. It is expected that eventually all reports and testimony will be printed, and Commission officials said this week that the testimony already runs between two and two and a half million words.

Only a limited number of copies has been prepared, for distribution among the Commissioners, members of the staff engaged in the investigation, and members of Congress who may call for information. When the report of the investigation is sent to Congress, copies of the Erpi report will be included.

AUSTRALIAN CENSOR ASKS QUALITY QUOTA

The Commonwealth motion picture censor at Canberra, Australia, Cresswell O'Reilly, in his annual report, says the quality of British features varies between greater extremes than those of other nations. It is impossible to determine the value of legislation requiring a quota of British films, he added, but if it is reenacted, a clause stipulating the quality of the quota, similar to recent legislation by New South Wales, should be included to raise the average of the British standard.

$152,029,326 Total Revenue

The Commission shows in the report on Erpi that the organization had a total revenue during the nine-year period of $152,029,326, of which $94,851,215, or 62.4 per cent, was derived from exhibition and $28,479,902, or 18.7 per cent, from production, total motion picture revenues being $123,331,117, or 81.1 per cent of all income. The gross operating profit on motion picture activities was $5,411,772 for the year 1935, alone.

Since the end of 1926, the commission finds, Erpi has been the leading agency for the exploitation of non-utility products by the Bell System.

These activities yielded but a small part of the total Bell System revenues, it is pointed out, but, as in the motion picture industry, they gave the telephone company a dominant position in many lines.

Speaking of its control over the film industry, the commission reports: "Within this field the Bell System leads in the supply of equipment both to producers for recording sound films and to exhibitors for reproduction of sound film. Further, as a result of operations in the motion picture field, the Bell System achieved a powerful financial influence in the industry."

Patent Licensing Traced

Control in some fields was furthered by the telephone company's policy with respect to licensing and cross-licensing of patents, it is pointed out. In some instances this policy resulted in strengthening its position in telephone communications in return for its relinquishing to others the major exploitation of patent rights elsewhere as, for example, wireless telephony.

"The outstanding example of direct exploitation of by-products for profit is that of the sound motion picture equipment supply activities of Erpi," the report continues. "In this field, the Bell System has refrained from licensing others under its patents (except for licenses to RCA under the cross-licensing agreements) in the interests of protecting its own direct exploitation of this field. There is an evident reluctance to license independent manufacturers not only in the sound motion picture field, but in other fields also where the Bell System considers that it may itself wish to exploit the patent rights directly at some future time.

"In the direct exploitation of sound motion picture equipment, the prestige and financial stability of the Bell System has been used in the promotion of its non-utility business. This was emphasized at the time of the signing of the recording license contracts with the major motion picture producers; and, as is shown in sales letters, the Bell System prestige and reputation has been recounted to prospective buyers of theatrical sound motion picture equipment.

"The financial resources of the Bell System have been used to advance its interests in the motion picture industry, and the patent strength of the system has been a valued factor in meeting the competition of independent manufacturers."

The justification given for the cross-licensing agreements, that they were needed to relieve a patent deadlock situation hampering progress, is refuted by the commission, which charges that the agreements do not constitute a free interchange of licenses but, excepting a few instances of reciprocal interchange, licenses are granted in specific fields so as, in effect, to divide those fields between the several parties.

"In the motion picture field, the outstanding instance where there has been a bilateral exchange of licenses, the effect has been to combine the patent resources of the parties, emphasizing their mutual advantage over third parties in the field," it is declared. In this field, an "unbending policy" of refusal to license has prevailed both before and since the Government suit.

"The major share, over 80 per cent, of the total revenues of Erpi has come from the motion picture industry," it is declared. "The exploitation of this business was first carried on by the Bell System through an exclusive licensee, The Vitaphone Corporation, since the Bell System, as a matter of policy, did not want to carry on direct exploitation. By an agreement of April 20, 1926, between Western Electric and Vitaphone Corporation, exclusive license was granted to the latter for recording and reproduction of sound, The Vitaphone Corporation agreeing to sub-license other producers. Western imposed conditions calling for a large measure of direction over the conduct of The Vitaphone Corporation. * * *

Leasing Policy Cited

"Direct exploitation of the motion picture field, a major change in original policy, was undertaken by Erpi on the termination of the exclusive license to The Vitaphone Corporation. The management of Erpi considered this an extensive and profitable field and desired to make it an exclusive Bell System field. After a year, during which no action was taken by the major producers in accordance with a joint agreement, Erpi was successful in licensing the major producers, and by the end of September, 1928, had recording licensees controlling substantially all of the motion picture produced and exhibited in the United States.

"In supplying recording and producing equipment to the motion picture industry, Erpi has followed a policy of leasing the equipment to producers and exhibitors, retaining title in itself. The license contracts used have been the key instruments in efforts to dominate the motion picture equipment market, containing restrictive clauses limiting the use of the equipment."

The report discusses the "interchangeability" controversy which grew out of provisions which attempt to restrict recording licenses from distributing their pictures to exhibitors not using Erpi or "equal quality equipment," and to prevent exhibitor licensees from reproducing pictures not recorded on Erpi apparatus, asserting that the intent was to make the business "as exclusive as possible to secure the maximum profit" rather than, as claimed, to protect quality and performance standards.

"Double Royalties" Issue

The "double royalties" issue arose out of provisions that producer licensees must pay royalties to Erpi on sound records made with the use of any technical information supplied by Erpi or with any equipment or system covered by any of the patents under which licenses are granted by Erpi. Combined with the minimum annual royalty requirement (usually $100,000), this provided an effective barrier to the use of competitive equipment.

Service from Erpi on theatre equipment was compulsory under its contracts until 1934, a source of considerable revenue as shown by the net profit of $886,000 from this source in 1933. After this requirement was changed, the company showed a loss, $269,620 in 1935. Similarly the supply of repair and replacement parts proved profitable, the revenue being $1,627,000 in 1930, but when the requirement was changed, the company began to show a loss.

"The Bell System has acquired financial interests in the motion picture industry for the purpose of exercising influence and control to protect and expand its hold on the apparatus market," the commission charges. "The interest acquired was at one time considered by the Erpi management to be sufficient to control the conduct of the motion picture industry. The use of financial power and influence is illustrated by the activities of the Bell System in connection with the acquisition of motion picture studios, in the financing of motion pictures, in the loan of $15,000,000 to the Fox companies and in the influence exerted in connection with the reorganization of Paramount-Publix Corporation."

Acquisition of Studios

As part of this program, Erpi acquired General Service Studios, Inc., on the West Coast, and Eastern Service Studios, Inc., in the East, contrary to the announced telephone company policy of restricting itself to the supply of apparatus. These projects were undertaken originally, it is declared, "to provide facilities for the promotion of the educational and industrial motion picture fields, but subsequently the studios were used to provide production facilities to handle 'independent' motion picture productions and to induce the recording of these productions on Erpi equipment in order to divert royalty revenues from competitors of Erpi."

Similarly, Erpi has engaged in the financing of productions to divert production from competitive recording equipment and increase its royalties, "to supply work for its controlled studios, to assist its licensees in financial difficulties, and to increase its prestige in the industry."

LEGAL STATUS ASKED FOR FIGHT PICTURES

Organized effort to remove the law prohibiting the interstate transportation of fight films is the object of a new corporation formed in the District of Columbia.

The Association to Legalize Interstate Transportation of Fight Films, Inc., organized by C. P. Myer and Edward McDearmon of Washington, plans immediate agitation among Congressmen for repeal of the federal statute.

Through a subsidiary, the company participated in a loan of $750,000 to Universal Productions, Inc., in November, 1935, by Standard Capital Company and Charles R. Rogers, the lenders securing an option to purchase control of Universal, and subsequently $300,000 more was loaned to Universal Productions by the Erpi subsidiary, Exhibitors Reliance Corporation, it is shown. In March, 1936, Erpi contracted with Charles R. Rogers and Standard Capital Company to purchase $2,000,000 of debentures to be issued by a company to be organized to acquire control of Universal Pictures Company under the option.

Total advances for motion picture financing by Erpi and subsidiaries to the end of 1935 were $3,571,918, of which $850,401 was then outstanding, it is shown.

The financial relations of the Bell System with William Fox and the Fox companies, the commission charges, "were undertaken to promote friendly relations with these interests which were expanding their properties and actively promoting the new sound motion picture art, to insure the use of Erpi equipment by the Fox companies, and to assure Erpi of rights under any patents that might be acquired by the Fox interests." Under the protection of Erpi, Mr. Fox was enabled to purchase West Coast Theatres in 1928; the following year, the Bell System loaned $15,000,000 to help finance the purchase of Loew's.

Thereafter, the report continues, Fox appeared to be "less cooperative" with Erpi, and the company declined to help him further when his affairs reached a critical condition in 1929. The Bell System personnel was active in the trusteeship which managed his affairs, and Erpi, the Commission says, was largely responsible in the ouster of Fox from control, funds advanced by the Bell System aiding Harley Clarke to acquire control of the Fox companies.

Mr. Clarke was more "cooperative," but after a time Erpi became dissatisfied, and when Mr. Clarke got into difficulties in 1931, J. E. Otterson, president of Erpi, sought the appointment of a friendly management and Sidney Kent was made executive head of Fox Film Corporation.

By these various moves, the commission asserts, "the financial influence of the Bell System in the motion picture industry had become so pervasive by the end of 1932 that the Erpi management initiated plans for a directed reorganization of the motion picture industry.

"Discussions looking to a broad reorganization of the industry were carried on with the Chase National Bank, another large financial factor in the industry. The plans developed called for a 'horizontal' reorganization: The separation of the artistic and promotional activities of the producer from the actual physical operations of studios which were to be operated on a service basis; separate organization of distribution facilities; separate organization of theatre properties.

"The activities of the Erpi management in the years 1932, 1933 and 1934, in connection with the Fox and Loew's properties, the organization and operation of motion picture service studios, motion picture financing, and the Paramount reorganization, were directed toward the effectuation of this plan. The reorganization plans of the Erpi management were not consummated presumably because of a reluctance on the part of the Bell System to support such a program."

Dominant Position Claimed

Nevertheless, the report says, the position of Erpi and the Bell System in the motion picture apparatus supply market has been a dominant one. Over 90 per cent of the sound motion picture production recorded for distribution in this country has been produced on Erpi recording equipment. In the theatre field, the initial advantage was gained during the operation of the interchangeability provisions of license contracts, Erpi having 1,046 equipments installed compared with 95 for competitors at the end of 1928, but thereafter its great advantage waned, although its dominance continued, having 5,319, or 34.38 per cent of the total installations in June, 1935.

Most of Erpi's profits from regular operations were recorded in 1928, 1929 and 1930, when revenues from the film industry were large, totaling $10,361,022 in those three years. The two following years piled up losses, and for 1933-35, inclusive, profits were low, aggregating only $500,532.

"The indications," the Commission comments, "are that Erpi profits will not again reach the level of the peak years, since revenues from theatre reproducing equipment have remained at around $1,000,000 per year for several years as contrasted with $23,000,000 in 1929; service revenues have declined and this business was operated at a loss in 1935; repair and replacement parts are yielding but a small return; and recording revenues have been at a low level, $341,000 in 1935 as contrasted with $6,097,000 in 1929. The Erpi management, recognizing this decline, has asked for additional fields to exploit, but no significant expansion into new fields has occurred."

Volume on Trade Practices

A 380-page volume of the report is devoted exclusively to the trade practices of the Bell System in its relations with the film industry. In this volume, in great detail, are traced the development of the Telephone Company's license agreements with producers and exhibitors, the administration of those agreements, and the company's financial interest in the motion picture industry.

Through its licensing agreements, it is declared, Erpi achieved dominance in the film industry; its hold on motion pictures was strengthened by its financial operations in which, the commission asserts, "Erpi pursued a policy of avoiding the outward appearance of responsibility for these arrangements, preferring to get into a position where it could control what was done in its interest. This desire to remain in the background is further emphasized by the statement of R. E. Anderson that the acceptance of notes convertible into a controlling stock ownership of Western Studios was designed

Biographic Drama

The story told is that of Jim Fiske who, during the years following the Civil War, rose from the status of humble New England peddler to a mighty capitalistic power, whose sensational financial speculations and vivid romantic adventures amazed and thrilled the nation. The dramatic and romantic motivations were drawn from Mortimer Josephson's book, "The Robber Barons," and Bouck White's "The Book Of Daniel Drew." The time covers the period from 1861 to the "Black Friday" of 1869.

Edward Arnold is starred in the leading role, and his character is atmospherically similar to the part he played in "Diamond Jim Brady," hail fellow well met, ruthless financial operator, and great lover. Coming to this picture following "John Meade's Woman" and "Come And Get It," Arnold is surrounded by a featured support cast whose name value has acknowledged merit. Included are Jack Oakie, currently in "That Girl from Paris"; Cary Grant, who lifts himself up several notches as a performer in "When You're in Love;" and Frances Farmer, who was with Arnold in "Come and Get It." Additionally the production will present Donald Meek, a promising newcomer named Thelma Leeds, Dudley Clements, Marie Marks, Ginger Connolly, Joseph De Stefani, George Offerman, Jr., Robert McClung, the harmonica playing boy in "On the Avenue," and George Cleveland.

An indication of the potential production class of the film is seen in the teaming of producer Edward A. Small and Rowland V. Lee, director, to bring the story to screen realism. Together they accounted for "The Count of Monte Cristo." Small's latest production venture is "Sea Devils," while Lee's most recent Hollywood efforts are "One Rainy Afternoon" and "The Three Musketeers."

California Straight Ahead

(Universal - Trem Carr)

Drama

Though the story is not without romantic love interest and comedy, the picture is basically a drama. That quality assumes a topical significance inasmuch as it brings cross-country motor trucking into competition with railroads for the business of coast-to-coast freight traffic. Seemingly logically developed, it tells how a young bus driver got into the trucking business. In these initial phases much attention is devoted to romance and comedy, but these elements culminate in tragedy. In the second part, with action drama the keynote, it details a cross-country race between train and truck caravan for big business contracts. The trucks win and now, to establish the story's topical nature, the highways are crowded with massive freight trucks.

The story is by Herman Boxer, who has no previous credits listed. Scott Darling, a collaborator on "Charlie Chan at the Opera" and "Return of Jimmy Valentine," did the screen play. Arthur Lubin, whose 1936 accomplishments include "Yellowstone" and "House of a Thousand Candles," is directing.

John Wayne, forsaking his cowboy roles for the moment, is starred. The girl who shares the romance with him is Louise Latimer. The supporting roster includes a number of standby names, Robert McWade, Theodore von Eltz, Tully Marshall, Emerson Tracy, Harry Allen, LeRoy Mason, Grace Goodall (silent serial star), Olaf Hytten, Monty Vandergrift and Lorin Raker.

Production details, which call for a maximum of thrill action, feature a nitro glycerine blast, and the cross-country truck fleet, is revealed as a self-sustaining unit including everything from a rolling machine shop and commissary to a traveling hospital.

The Devil Is Driving

(Columbia)

Drama

The subject matter of this production deals with a theme that is acutely familiar to almost everyone, the power of wealth and politics to influence officers of the nation's courts. In contrast is a love interest that affects a man's regeneration.

A young lawyer, making use of perjured testimony, succeeds in having a wealthy client acquited of a drunken driving charge. His unscrupulous triumph erects a barrier between him and the girl he loves. As district attorney, he wages a safe driving campaign. Called upon to prosecute, on a similar charge, the man he once before had saved, he apparently is losing the case when, in a dramatic climax, he confesses his past dishonesty and causes the defendant to acknowledge his guilt. Though debarred, he becomes head of the Highway Safety League he organized and finds happiness with the girl.

Richard Dix is featured in the leading role. The girl is Joan Perry. The supporting cast is made up of capable players. Listed are Frank Wilson, Henry Kolker, John Wray, Dora Early, Nana Bryant, Ann Rutherford, Arthur Loft and Ann Howard. Harry Lachman is directing.

While not a major production, the feature is of the sort that lends itself readily to cooperative civic contact. As production detail illustates the manner in which highways are made safe, there undoubtedly will be opportunity for tieups with newspapers, police departments, auto clubs and insurance companies.

Internes Can't Take Money

(Paramount)

Drama

Not as much hospital atmosphere as the title implies is included in the production. Though the leading character is an interne, the fundamental plot is gangster-colored dramatic romance. It is the story of a hospital attache who, in helping a friendless and persecuted girl wins the gratitude of a vicious public enemy and with his assistance succeeds in finding the girl's missing child. It is rigidly tense in the climax; an interne who can't take money is the central figure in a situation where his gangster friend threatens to kill him unless the petty henchman, who knows the secret of the child's whereabouts and whose life depends upon the interne's living, discloses his knowledge.

The story, by Max Brand, upon which the production is based appeared serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine. The screen play is by Rian James, noted for his writings about hospitals and whose book, "The White Parade," was produced on the screen. Direction is by Alfred Santell, who made "Winterset."

Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck, together in "Banjo On My Knee"—McCrea also recently in "Come And Get It" and "We Three," Miss Stanwyck in "The Plough and the Stars"—are the leading players. The third important character, Lloyd Nolan, the gangster, was seen in "Texas Rangers" and "Big Brown Eyes." This trio and Stanley Ridges carry the action, while the supporting cast includes Lee Bowman, Barry Macollum, Irving Bacon, Gaylord Pendleton, Pierre Watkin, Charles Lane, Priscilla Lawson, James Bush, Nick Lukats, Anthony Nace and Fay Holden.

A story that seems to include the best elements of both a gangster and hospital tale, it is being given a production treatment wholly in keeping with the theme. Naturally serious, comparatively little comedy is included but in its place there is suspense packed action.

Cafe Metropole

Romantic Society

Being produced on an elaborate scale to match the smart and modern theme, this story, localed in the Paris of today, narrates the exciting adventures of an American heiress who falls in love with a countryman forced to masquerade as a Russian prince by circumstances over which he has little control. Running companion to the main plot are the stories of a blustering but lovable father, a suave headwaiter, a bewildered but not uncanny Russian emigre, and a harried cashier.

Promising to be lively entertainment the production is of primary commercial interest because of cast assignments. Loretta Young and Tyrone Power, fresh from their first co-starring appearance in the recently previewed "Love Is News," are the romantic leads. Adolphe Menjou, currently in "One in a Million," returns to the type of role, suave headwaiter, in which he has scored some of his best successes. Charles Winninger, seen in "Showboat" and more recently in "Three Smart Girls," will be Miss Young's father. Gregory Ratoff, whose versatility is attested by performances in "The Road to Glory" and "Sing Baby Sing," is the Russian whose identity Power is forced to assume. The cashier is Christian Rub. Name strength does not stop with the leading group. Included also are Bill Robinson, Helen Westley and Georges Renavent.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT PLAN CITED

to keep Erpi out of the technical position of holding stock."

"The financing of motion picture productions by Erpi was prompted by a desire on the part of Erpi to achieve certain objectives," the report charges. "These objectives may be summarized as a desire to increase royalties arising from the use of Erpi recording equipment, to lease additional recording equipment, to assist Erpi licensees who were in financial difficulties, to increase Erpi's prestige in the sound motion picture business, and to compete more effectively with recording studios equipped with RCA or with socalled 'bootleg' apparatus."

In financing production, Erpi worked through Exhibitors Reliance Corporation, which had been organized in 1929 to handle deferred payment notes for Western Electric theatre installations. Through Exhibitors Reliance, Erpi financed productions of Educational Pictures, and, through its studios, gave financial assistance to independent producers, including Manhattan Pictures' "Moonlight and Pretzels", "Dodsworth" and some Hecht-MacArthur pictures.

Pictures Produced

Up to the beginning of 1935, Eastern Studios had produced, with Erpi loans, "Take a Chance," "Crime without Passion," "Once in a Blue Moon," "The Scoundrel," "Cuesta Abajo," "El Tango on Broadway," "His Double Life" and two then unnamed Exito Productions pictures, for release through Paramount; "Moonlight and Pretzels," released through Universal; "Gambling," released through Fox; "Social Register," released through Columbia, and "Emperor Jones," released through United Artists.

At the same time, Erpi also had assisted in financing 20 other features and a large number of industrial pictures.

At the close of 1935, Exhibitors Reliance had made total advances of $639,842 to Educational Productions, Inc., $22,527 to Educational Studios, Inc.; $805,572 to Picture Alliance Corporation, $125,000 to Universal Productions, to which Erpi also had advanced $300,000, and $1,978,977 to independent producers, a total of $3,571,918, of which $850,401 was then outstanding. Earned revenues on these advances included $327,399 in interest and $397,851 in royalties, a total of $725,250 of which $355,285 was unpaid.

Forty pages of the report are devoted to a resume of the Erpi-Fox transactions and another 13 pages to Erpi's unfulfilled plan for reorganization of the motion picture industry. With respect to the latter, the Commission says that the exhibitors of the country were perilously close to a new and dangerous situation, since, according to the report:

"In connection with its plans for coordinated theatre operation, Erpi officials, in August, 1934, considered the promotion of a 'management plan' for theatres in towns of less than 4,000 or 5,000 population. There were stated to be 7,785 theatres in towns of less than 4,000 population which were not operating profitably either from the standpoint of the exhibitors, or from the standpoint of Erpi and the motion picture producers who supplied equipment and sound pictures respectively.

"To meet this situation, it was proposed to organize a General Theatre Management Company, ownership to be in the hands of participants, who would be certain producers, Erpi, and general equipment suppliers. This central company would govern the complete operation of the plan on a national basis.

BANK NIGHT LOSER STAGES SIT-DOWN

Robert Harmon, San Jose, Cal., salesman, has instituted a one-man sit-down strike in a Sacramento theatre because he has been trying for two months to win a Bank Night prize. He sleeps in the theatre and orders his meals sent in from a nearby restaurant.

The striker says he has sufficient funds to pay for meals and admissions until March 15th and that he will continue his strike until that time at least.

"Regional management companies, 25 or more in number, were to be organized by individual exhibitors in such districts selected by the central company. The central company would make contracts with its participating owners, the producers and suppliers, specifying the locations at which the participants' business would be handled through the management plan. The central company would in turn contract with the regional companies, authorizing them to make five-year contracts with theatres for the supply of picture programs, equipment and managerial assistance.

Percentage or Flat Fee

"The combined service to theatres was to be paid for by a percentage of the gross receipts of such theatres or an adjustable flat fee, of which the regional company would retain a share for management; the balance would be remitted to the central company, which also would retain a management fee, distributing the balance to the producers and suppliers."

"A plan of this character," the Commission points out, "would have linked the supply of equipment, repairs, parts and service to the distribution of pictures, and, if successful, could be expected to strengthen the position of Erpi and the Bell System in the apparatus field. * * * Erpi, in 1934, was concerned about the future of these activities. The management plan was one proposed method of stabilizing and extending this business. This plan for small town theatres was complementary to the plans for reorganization of the major motion picture companies."

While the plan was never put into effect, the Commission points out, "the significant fact, for purposes of this account, is that the Bell System position growing out of its relations with the motion picture industry has been at times sufficient for responsible officials to value it as sufficient to dominate the conduct of that industry."

Staten Testifies

Francis A. Staten, accountant for the Federal Communications Commission, testified that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company had tried to dominate the motion picture industry. The idea, he said, was to get exclusive rights for the sale and service of film equipment. Mr. Staten said that the telephone company's film operations had been conducted since 1926 mostly through Electrical Research Products, Inc., a subsidiary.

"The position of Erpi and the Bell System in the motion picture apparatus supply market has been a dominant one," he said. "Nearly all (over 90 per cent) of the sound motion picture production recorded for distribution in the United States has been produced on Erpi recording equipment.

"In 1933, it considered its position strong enough to control the motion picture industry."

Prior to 1929, when William Fox cooperated with Erpi, it helped him buy the West Coast Theatres Company and lent him $15,000,000 to buy the voting stock of Loew's Inc., Mr. Staten asserted. When Mr. Fox withdrew his cooperation and became financially embarrassed, he added, Erpi fostered Mr. Fox's ouster and advanced funds to Harley L. Clarke to acquire control. Mr. Clarke later became uncooperative and Erpi's choice, Sidney R. Kent, became executive head of the Fox Film Corporation, Mr. Staten said.

Meanwhile, Special Counsel Samuel Becker who was conducting the special investigation, tendered his resignation to President Roosevelt, who accepted it. Mr. Becker said his work "has reached the stage where I feel I can be released."

Mr. Becker told the President in his letter of resignation that "the investigation will have furnished the essential facts without which a wise communication policy for the federal government cannot be formulated."

Mr. Becker said he would resume practicing law in Wisconsin.

President Roosevelt told Mr. Becker in a letter: "It is a hard job at which you and your associates have been so devotedly working. . . . But it is a job which must be done, with increasing thoroughness if government is to be truly intelligent—if it is to keep abreast of every fact on which intelligent judgment depends."

Commissioner Paul Walker of the FCC said the investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company would be completed by July 1st. He said Mr. Becker's departure "means that the active work on the inquiry is drawing to a close."

Vocafilm Trial Date Set

NEW BOOKS ON FILMS PASS IN REVIEW

DECENCY IN MOTION PICTURES. —The account of why there is a Production Code. By Martin Quigley. Published by the Macmillan Company, New York. 100 pages, cloth, $1.

Many and important aspects of the evolution of the motion picture, determined by reaction between production, distribution, exhibition and the ultimate consumer at the box office, have been influenced, through the last two decades of the screen drama, by Martin Quigley. This influence and its expressions, some of them more effective than history has recorded, have been unobtrusively exerted and presented. This little book, bound in blue cloth and numbering just a hundred pages, is a document in consistent quietude, but emphatic the while.

One most conspicuous aspect of the performance of Martin Quigley, the author, so well known in the self-contained world of the motion picture, is here again demonstrated, because here again he deals with the most controversial aspect and elements of the contemporary and recently contemporary scene, without raising his voice, without ostensible emotion, and dealing the while with the art and industry which interests him most, with issues which concern him most. His calmness is exciting. Here is not Martin Quigley, the motion picture publisher, nor the churchman, nor the critic, but, simply, Martin Quigley the citizen, the representative of decent America, having his say, empowered by special knowledge and experience. He is, despite all of what might be considered his possible special interests, here just attorney for humanity.

With patience, with forbearance in the face of provocations, in this volume we find the man who was the father of the Production Code which met the largest and most serious of all of the many social and moral problems of the motion picture in its adjustments to society, discussing it impersonally, in terms of basic principle.

In this slim, compact, sharp, volume, Mr. Quigley records the rise of what we may call the "decency problem," and the meeting of it. One might wish that he had told more of what he foresaw of it, of his labors in bringing the Code into being when the screen so sorely needed it and yet, unaware, did not accept it until necessity bore down, and how in time it came to be the salvation of a situation of crisis, when the screen had to be saved from both its friends and its foes—equally dangerous.

Here if ever in an epochal period of adjustment between a great industry and society, was a flaming opportunity to say: "I told you so." He has not done that, and has evidenced no indication of a temptation to do it.

Incidentally, while he has not said so in explicit terms, one discovers, too, that motion pictures are rather more than merchandise to the author. It is to be found that he likes the screen, possibly quite as much as those volumes of the older art of the printed word that line his library shelves up at Islandhearth, and maybe a little bit more than the drama of the stage that he follows so closely.

Turning the pages of the little blue book one discovers on Page 9, an assertion: "The function of art is to ennoble. Art is as much a servant and tool of civilization as science. . . ."

There, one may fancy, will be about where the Younger Criticism will reach out to take issue, and a merry time will be had. The resulting comment will most likely forget that possibly humanity is more important than art. Mr. Quigley, to be sure, has not been unaware, what with certain references in passing to Mr. Joyce and Mr. Hemingway. It would appear that it is Mr. Quigley's opinion that human experience crystallized into a code of decency has tended to do more for the race than what some call "realism" and "art."

In sum, it seems to be Mr. Quigley's opinion that motion pictures ought to be for the people, and that by the forces of the public good they will be, and prosper thereby. —T. R.

MAKING A MOTION PICTURE IN 1848. Henry Lewis' Journal of a Canoe Voyage from the Falls of St. Anthony to St. Louis. Published by the Minnesota Historical Society. 58 pp. $1.

The "motion picture" of titular allusion was a panorama painted by Henry Lewis on canvas for theatrical exhibition as a picture of the Mississippi Valley. In strict definition a moving rather than a motion picture, it measured 1,325 yards long and 4 yards high, being unrolled from one spindle onto another in such manner as to bring contiguous areas successively into spectators' view within a frame comparable in size and shape to the modern motion picture screen.

This device, displayed with profit in the United States and Europe during the middle years of the last century, is described by Bertha L. Heilbron in an introduction to the volume as "ancestor of the modern moving picture." The Lewis panorama was one of several which had the Mississippi Valley as their common subject.

The panoramist's journal of his canoe travels on the Mississippi preparatory to commencement of work on his panorama occupies the major portion of the book, which is copiously documented and pointedly illustrated. The work is of interest historically but has little immediate pertinency to the cinema save as indicative of early yearnings.—W. R. W.

MOLLY, BLESS HER! A novel by Frances Marion. Published by Harper & Bros. 320 pp. $2.

Relevant to the motion picture solely on the man-bites-dog theory of news values is the fact that this is a novel written by a scenarist. Relevant to the whole broad business of writing for entertainment purposes is the fact that the scenarist's novel is no better and no worse than most novelists' scenarios. Unlike these, it is flung to the public without benefit of the manifold conditioning ministrations commonly accorded books put to screen use. It is not, therefore, a very good novel, which is not to say that it might not and may not be made into a pretty good picture

Miss Marion's story is about a group of actresses and actors past middle age and unemployed who hire out as housekeeper, butler, chef, parlor maid, gardener and so on to a millionaire whose Long Island estate is the principal scene of action. The housekeeper is named Molly Drexel, her stage fame credited to a play called "Tillie's Bad Dream" and her personality fashioned after that of the late Marie Dressler. The publisher remarks, in a jacket notation, that the character is one that might have been played by Miss Dressler, and the book is dedicated "In Memory of Marie, bless her," but the story is not biographical.

Events which transpire on the country estate are for most part of humorous nature and when continued masquerade as servants becomes impracticable the again unemployed troupers use them as material for a play in which all regain their former prosperity, Molly ultimately marrying the millionaire. (A single mention of the screen notes it as a medium for which the character fashioned to suggest Marie Dressler is declared to be unqualified.)

Miss Marion's long accustomed reliance upon action is no doubt accountable for frequent narrational lapses. She repeatedly assembles her characters, creates a situation and then leaves it up to the reader to assume that such and such happened with this or that result. She dispenses with detail of the kind that a camera provides and she keeps her people doing things without bothering very much about telling why they do them.

The story is, as the publisher has pointed out, one that might have been used by Marie Dressler as a picture. She might have made it a good picture. It's a "B" book.—W. R. W.

NEW YORK AND OMAHA ATTACK CHANCE GAMES

License Commissioner Calls Practice "Disgraceful"; Omaha Mayor Asks Action

New steps to eliminate chance games from theatres were taken this week in two key centers. In New York after independent exhibitors protested the conduct of chance games by the circuits to the city license commissioner Loew's dropped Bank Night in the city and RKO announced it would abandon the games nationally. In Omaha, Mayor Dan Butler has requested the city council to study the chance games with a view to prohibiting them.

The strongest blows suffered to date by chance games were the RKO announcement and the decision on Wednesday of Loew's, Inc., to abandon the practice in its Greater New York theatres, because "the public is fed up with them."

Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew's circuit executive, announced that the houses "will immediately and permanently" abandon Bank Nights, Screeno and all other audience games. Those theatres having Bank Night money accumulated will "run off" the "bank," distributing monies already promised, and then not resume any games.

"Loew's Theatres," said Mr. Moskowitz, "went into the audience game idea reluctantly. We did it only after most other theatres in our neighborhoods had started the practice. It seemed apparent at the time that the public wanted them."

Loew's admission that the public is turning against the practice is the first to come from any important exhibition interests. Only three weeks ago the company extended the games on an "inter-city" basis throughout Greater New York.

The RKO announcement was made by Nate Blumberg, general manager of the circuit, who said that within the next two weeks Bank Night, screens and similar games would be dropped by all RKO theatres in the country.

As aftermaths of recent police attacks on the games, nine Chicago exhibitors were fined for operating Bank Night and three independent Philadelphia exhibitors have filed suit to restrain the police from interfering in the operation of the giveaways.

Following a protest from attorneys for the Independent Theatre Owners Association, License Commissioner Paul Moss in New York called a meeting at which Melvin Albert of the Independent Theatre Owners Association complained of the manner in which Loew's and RKO were conducting Bank Night and Screeno. He said the games were operated in violation of a recent decision of the state court of appeals, in that patrons had to buy tickets in order to participate. Circuit representatives denied the charge.

Loew's was represented by C. C. Moskowitz and I. Frey, and RKO by William England. The circuit officials told Mr. Moss that their companies would discontinue the games provided the independent exhibitors would do so. Mr. Albert said that he could not talk for the ITOA and that any decision would have to come from Harry Brandt, president of the exhibitor group.

Mr. Moss, commenting on the game situation at the conclusion of the meeting said:

"It is disgraceful. It has become a dog eat dog affair. The idea started with theatres giving away $10. It rapidly grew to $3,500 and pretty soon this will be increased to $5,000. Next they will be giving the theatres away."

The commissioner also said that there had been complaints by a number of children that they had been charged adult prices and because of crowded theatres could not sit in the sections reserved for them.

Says Some Exhibitors Want Ban

Mayor Butler of Omaha, instructing the city council to give further study to chance games, said that some of the theatre men themselves were anxious to drop the plan.

"It looks as though a syndicate having a copyright on Bank Night is getting all the gravy," he said. "Some of the theatre men tell me it is actually hurting their business on all days except Wednesdays, and they would like to get out from under."

City Attorney Seymour Smith's recent ruling that Bank Night is conducted legally in the city blocked an attack on the games which had been started by a group of ministers and declarations by the city fire and police commissioners that fire hazards were being created.

Nine new convictions for violations of the Chicago ordinance prohibiting the conduct of chance games in theatres have been added to the city court records. Municipal Judge Sonsteby levied fines of $15 each against the owners of the Ridge, New Drake, Illington, Elmo, Tiffin, West, Logan, Lawndale and Harvard theatres.

Suits in equity have been instituted by three Philadelphia independent theatre managers naming the mayor, the director of public safety and the superintendent of police in an effort to restrain interference with Bank Night and other chance games. The plaintiffs, Leo Posel and William Stigel of the New Lyric, Abe Rovner and Walter Muller of the Girard and Morris Somerson of the Palm, claim that the games are not in conflict with any city or state law and are a valid method of advertising.

Non-Theatrical Royalties Cut

Electrical Research Products, Inc., has extended the terms of all producer licensee agreements to include non-theatrical release under the regular theatrical royalty charge.

Whitford Drake, executive vice-president of the company, said, in connection with the announcement, "Previously all non-theatrical rights were reserved subject to additional payments but now major companies may avail themselves of this wide market at a saving of millions of dollars."

George Hassell Dies at Work

George Hassell, musical comedy comedian and screen actor for 35 years, died last week in an automobile in which he and four companions were riding from the Twentieth Century-Fox lot in Hollywood to a location near Chatsworth. His companions believed him asleep, but were unable to arouse him when the car reached their destination. Death was due to heart failure. Mr. Hassell was 56 years old.

He entered motion pictures two years ago, after a long career on the legitimate stage when the late Lowell Sherman saw him in a road company of "The Student Prince." Mr. Sherman engaged him for "Night Life of the Gods" and since then the actor appeared in "The Flame Within," "Becky Sharp," "Dressed to Thrill" and "Captain Blood." He was working with Shirley Temple in "Wee Willie Winkle" at the time of his death.

A daughter, Virginia, also of the screen, survives.

Balabans Lose Mother

Mrs. Gussie Balaban Levin, 67, mother of Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, and of John, Harry, David and Elmer Balaban, all of B. and K. Theatres in Chicago, died in Miami, Fla., last Friday following a stroke suffered the week before. Her husband, Max Levin, and all of her sons with the exception of A. J. Balaban, who is in Europe, had been called and were at her bedside when the end came. The body was returned to Chicago for burial.

Graetz Funeral Held

Funeral services were held last week end for Paul Graetz, 47, German actor, who died in Hollywood of heart disease. He was preparing to play a role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Countess Walewska." Born in Berlin, Mr. Graetz became a favorite character there. He made 11 pictures in England for British International Pictures, Gaumont British and Warner Brothers and then came to Hollywood in 1936.

Rites Held for James Dever

Funeral services for James Dever, 73-year-old veteran newspaper man, were held in Staten Island, N. Y., this week. Mr. Dever became assignment editor for Fox Movietone News after the sale of the New York World to Scripps-Howard, but was forced to retire as a result of permanent injuries received in an automobile accident.

Fred F. Creswell Dead

Fred F. Creswell, 52, salesman for United Artists, died in Atlanta last weekend. Mr. Creswell, former district supervisor for Southern Enterprises, had been with United Artists in north Georgia and eastern Tennessee for the last three years.

The estate of Richard Boleslawski, filed this week in Los Angeles for probate, amounted to $18,675.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

Exhibitors would benefit, the public would benefit, the whole motion picture industry would benefit if all of the newsreels stopped taking pictures of bloated Washington politicians just long enough to have their Capitol Hill news cameramen make the trip to Washington, Georgia, to film one Luke D. Faver, who, instead of going on a tangent of municipal finance, the home and mother, in his campaign for mayor, announced his platform as simply—"I need the money." He was elected by an overwhelming majority, and now this incalculable politician is voting to reduce his own salary. It seems he didn't need quite so much money.

Paramount is making much of the fact that they have discovered a "find" in the person of Martha Rye, taken to Hollywood by them a few months ago from a comparatively obscure New York night club, at the usual fat fee. Miss Raye, however, belittles the company's effort at glamorization, telling the New York American the other day that "she staggered into stardom."

"Hiccoughs, wobbly legs and a flair for publicly insulting strange men put me where I am today," she chortled.

Hiccoughs, wobbly legs and a flair for publicly insulting strange men can also put her where she was yesterday.

Motion picture people on moneyed Park Avenue in New York now have caterers for their dogs—and let Hollywood with all of its dog mausoleums top that. "Canine Caterers" cart "fresh food daily" to the pooches. A telephone call brings garcon with the menu.

Margaret Sullavan, known privately—very privately—to her family as just plain "Peg," has all too frequently cast aspersions in the direction of the Hollywood which as frequently has tried so hard to warm her cold-shouldering with fame in the movies at large fees. Only the other day a Universal executive unhesitatingly admitted that "her main interest in life is finding fault with Hollywood."

Now Miss Sullavan brings her complaint to the Broadway play, "Stage Door," where, as the star, she soap-boxes that everything in Hollywood is speeded up. "In two years," she cracked, "you're a star; in four years, you're forgotten, and in six years, you're back in Sweden."

The lobby buzzer then signaled the end of the intermission and the crowd started moving in to their seats. Mr. Coward clapped an arm across his companion's shoulder and said, "And that goes for your Desdemona, too."

Only it wasn't Miss Ashcroft. She had moved away. It was a strange woman.

The last we heard, the Crusades were conducted by Europeans 200 years before Christopher Columbus discovered America.

QUALITY IN AIR PROGRAMS

"For 43 year I sella da banan—now I maka da pix." So chortled an extra player engaged the other day in New Orleans by Morrie Ryskind, Universal producer on location down in those parts for atmosphere scenes for his new feature, "New Orleans."

"All day I maka da pix, and I driva my truck," he grinned. "De truck, she is 12-year old, but she run like hell."

The "actor" was selected as a picturesque figure to make a typical New Orleans background. Morrie Ryskind found him at French market, liked his truck, liked him, so asked him to do some work for him.

He worked all day before anybody noticed his name. The name is painted on the side of his truck—it's S. J. Capra.

"I gotta people in Hollywood," he finally confided to Mr. Ryskind.

"Yeah?" Morrie yeahed, making polite conversation.

"Yeah," Mr. Capra said. "His-a name is Capra—like mine. He's my nephew. He'sa Frank Capra. He maka de pix, too. I neva see him. But justa same he's a big moom-picture man."

For those who have forgotten for the moment just how big a "moom-picture man" is Frank Capra, we suggest that they ask the Cohn Brothers at Columbia to show them the books on Mr. Capra's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "It Happened One Night," "Lady for a Lady," and, maybe later, his new "Lost Horizon."

When Spangler Arlington Brugh left the old family homestead in Nebraska for a career in Hollywood, the first attention paid him by the producers, and, eventually, Metro-Goldwyn, was the "suggestion" that he change his name to Robert Taylor. Then and there, the real Robert Taylor, of Pittsburgh, Pa., started heading for a lot of trouble.

For a year the spectre of that new film hero (the Spangler Arlington Brough Robert Taylor) has been haunting Pittsburgh's real Taylor.

Last week, for instance, Pittsburgh Taylor arrived in New York to marry. After the ceremony, he and his bride went to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where Hollywood's Taylor also stops. No sooner had the bridal party registered than the expected flood of telegrams, telephones and mash letters started pouring into their suite.

Pittsburgh Taylor considers Hollywood Taylor a usurper, and is thinking of changing his name to Spangler Arlington Brugh for the sake of anonymity.

Bi-Linguals

Bi-lingual production in England, which developed on a considerable scale in the early days of the talkers was abandoned as a general practice some years ago, largely due to the expense of production in England as compared with the Continent. It is being revived, as a basic feature of studio policy, by British Unity Pictures which, with Kurt Bernhardt and Eugene Tuscherer as producers, is making a series of pictures at Ealing.

With the international market in view this company says that it is organized to make a quality picture in both French and English at an average price of £40,000 to £50,000. The first feature, "The Girl in the Taxi," is to cost £45,000.

Starring in the English version are Frances Day and Henri Garat, with support from Lawrence Grossmith, Jean Gillie, Mackenzie Ward, Helen Haye, John Deverell and Ben Field. In the French version Garat will repeat his part opposite Meg Lemonnier, English-born star of the Parisian musical comedy stage, and there is a special starring engagement for Jules Raimu, Comedie Francais celebrity who already has made a reputation through "Les Messieurs de la Sante" and other films, in the foreign language cinemas of England and America. Blanchette Brunoy, Serge Flateau, Blanche de Neige and Charles Deschamps are other French artistes who will come to Ealing.

Kurt Bernhardt, internationally famous through "The Last Journey," is also known for his discovery of Marlene Dietrich and of Danielle Darrieux. His last picture was "The Beloved Vagabond," for Toeplitz.

Tuscherer is a Hungarian who was production chief for the Terra company of Berlin; he found Anna Sten in small parts and cast her for the role in "The Brothers Karamazov," which brought her a Sam Goldwyn contract. In Paris he made "Gold in the Street" with Albert Prejean.

Director of both versions will be Andre Barthomieu, whose "Le Mort Enfruite" is the current hit of Paris.

Ralph Hanbury, managing director of Radio Pictures, Ltd., visits with Anton Walbrook for a moment at the press reception given by Radio when the Viennese star arrived in London after starring in the company's "Michael Strogoff."

Documentary

In the opinion of many critics the British "Documentary" film is the most striking achievement to the credit of British production. A Documentary film is an interest film and something more. It pictures, explains and to some extent dramatizes real life, facts, and it is definitely educational in that it aims always to convey specific information. It is significant because, in pursuing that aim, its producers have developed a technique very far superior to that of a majority of British entertainment films. "Night Mail," picturing the operations of an express letter-carrying train, and "Cover to Cover," illustrating the whole processes of book production, are in some ways the most important films made in England for five years, and John Grierson of the Post Office Film Unit and Paul Rotha of the Strand Film Company are undoubtedly two of the most important figures in the whole British industry.

The interesting things about the Documentary is that, originally a propaganda effort of unusual cleverness, it has forced its way into entertainment programs on sheer merit, and without losing its propaganda character. "Night Mail," for instance, is the more striking advertisement of Post Office efficiency for being first-class entertainment. Forced to make a specific message acceptable, the Documentary producers have developed methods of direction and camera management which ultimately may determine that long overdue British screen idiom.

In "The Way to the Sea," the Strand company is presenting an argument for railway electrification and in the process publicizing the British Navy and the beauties of the Isle of Wight. "The Future's in the Air" pictures the air route to Australia in operation and gives Australia's industries effective publicity while letting the British public see something of such British overseas possessions as lie on the route.

Film dealing with the problem of the Depressed Areas and with Community Land Settlement are on the schedule. It sounds rather dry, but, of interest to America it may be, is the fact that these films, in the perfection of their special technique, are likely to prove as far superior to the run of British productions as anything made in Hollywood does. In comparison with the best American "interests," and particularly in their commentaries and use of sound generally, the British "documentaries" show up more than well. Practically without exception they are made by young men with an indifference, which approaches contempt, for "Elstree" and its ways. Yet "Cover to Cover" had a 10-week West End run, and in 1937 this nominal sub-department of British production may well produce a score of equally significant films.

Finishes "The Frog"

Herbert Wilcox Productions, at Pinewood, shot the final scenes of "The Frog," adaptation of the Ian Hay-Edgar Wallace stage hit, and the next activities of the unit will be directed to the Anna Neagle "Victoria the Great." Simultaneously in work will be the Tullio Carminati-Lilli Palmer "Vienna Sunset."

Final scenes of "The Frog" were spectacular, big cabaret sequences following the staging of a fire at a gramophone factory. Gordon Harker is the main lead.

The premiere of the Wilcox, "This'll Make You Whistle," at the Empire last Friday, created an unusual state of affairs. The stage original, after a Palace season, is playing at Daly's Theatre, about a hundred yards away, and cinema and theatre, both facing on Leicester Square, offered identical program announcements to the passing pleasure-seeker.

Discovering England

Alfred Hitchcock's plans for scenes for "A Shilling for Candles," his new picture for Gaumont-British, are interesting to those who have been arguing, in and out of season, that the real England, and real English men and women, should just now and again be seen in English films.

Says Mr. Hitchcock, about some other British producers, "Their films go out into the world taking an impression that the English live either in cottages or cocktail cabinets, and speak with their lips twisted or a plum in their throats. Totally ignored is that vital stratum of British humanity, the middle class. . . . If we in this country got our education only from films we should

BRITAIN STANDARDIZES TELEVISION IN MARCONI SYSTEM, REDUCES COSTS

EMI Offers Combined Television and "All-World" Radio Receiver for $420, And Many Other Makers Follow Suit

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

All future Television transmissions by British Broadcasting Corporation will be by a system of 405 lines interlaced, 50 frames a second, with a synchronizing impulse ratio to picture of 30:70. The Postmaster-General made this news of standardization known in indicating that the Baird system was abandoned, by the British Government, in favor of the EMI system, which answers all the requirements mentioned.

Announcement of the change was followed by big cuts in the prices of television receivers. Electrical Musical Industries, radio-gramophone-television combine controlling the victorious EMI-Marconi system, reduced its standard price from £89:5s to £63 and offered a combined Television receiver and all-world radio receiver for £84 ($420), a reduction from £126. The prices immediately were imitated by General Electric and other makers.

Simultaneously, it was announced that the extra space available at the Alexandra Palace, official transmitting station, by the removal of the Baird apparatus, would permit an extra daily hour of Television, and that Sunday transmissions might be expected in the summer.

Baird Shares Decline

Baird Television, Ltd., hard hit by the decision that a rival system had triumphed after the trial period of dual transmission, held a hurried Board meeting and issued a statement declaring that the official announcement did not imply a monopolistic policy or the final adoption of one system. It also stated that Baird developments would not be checked.

In face of these statements, indicating an intention on the part of Baird to evolve a system answering the new requirements, and despite further reassurance that Baird receivers were capable of taking E.M.I. transmissions, Baird shares fell (deferred ordinary, from 4:6d to 2:3d, preferred ordinary 2:0d to 1:4½d) while E.M.I.'s went up from 24:3d to 26:3d.

See Wide Extension of Range

Indicating a possible wide extension of the range of Television in the future, R. A. Watson Watt, superintendent of the Bawdsey research station of the Air Ministry, said in a paper to the Royal Society that he had discovered three electrified regions in the upper atmosphere, from five to forty miles below the "Heavyside Layer" (which reflects radio short waves back to earth) which similarly deflected the ultra-short Television waves, preventing them from passing into space. B B C experts commented that Mr. Watson's researches explained the previously unaccountable fact that Television sound had been received at Cape Town and Johannesburg, in South Africa, and that sight signals also had been received there and, if a receiver had been available, would have enabled these distant places to receive pictures intended only for the 25 mile circuit served by the Alexandra Palace. Describing the South African results as "freak," Television experts said that the Watson discovery nevertheless indicated that world television transmissions were a definite possibility.

Meanwhile, using the EMI Emitron camera, regarded as the main instrument in that concern's victory over Baird, the BBC carried direct transmission a stage further by televising the England-Ireland amateur boxing contests; the most ambitious "outside broadcast" yet attempted by the Alexandra Palace staff.

REJECTS CHURCH PLEA TO BAR "PASTURES"

Lord Tyrell, president of the British Board of Film Censors, has rejected a request from the Free Presbyterian Church of Scotland to ban "The Green Pastures."

In a letter Lord Tyrrell describes the film as reverent in tone.

"We shall be attacked for having passed it, and we should have been attacked if it had not been passed," he commented.

Dixey Product Called Likely to Become Available Shortly After Flotation of Company by the Independent Groups

Dixey Production

The Independent Exhibitors Distribution Company (the Dixey plan) will be active at a very early date as a cooperative production and distributing organization, announcements this week indicating that personnel is being lined up and plans made in all departments and that product is likely to be available to exhibitors very shortly after the public flotation of the company in a week or two.

The most important announcement on the personnel side was that A. George Smith had joined the board as director in charge of production. Mr. Smith was managing director of Goldwyn, Ltd., in London before the fusion with Metro. Later he controlled PDC here, and for some years he has been one of the most prominent of independent producers, with a reputation for close costing and accurate planning which is a great deal more unusual here than in Hollywood. His choice is an indication that IEDC intends to base its production on anti-waste principles.

Negotiating with Pascal

Also added to the Board is J. H. Iles, owner of the two big amusement parks, Bellevue, Manchester, and Dreamland, Margate, and backer of the Joe Rock enterprises. Tied in with his appointment is a contract with Rock Studios for floor space and service for I.E.D.C. productions.

Already announced to have an option on the Rock production, "The Edge of the World," and to have contracted with Ludovico Toeplitz for films to be made in the Mussolini studio in Rome, IEDC is currently negotiating with Gabriel Pascal, who recently announced the production of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" and has a number of American celebrities in his future plans, and with Otto Klement, who is likely to be associated with Alfred Zeisler in a new production unit. It also has acquired the English version of "Courier de Sud," in which airman Mollison will appear as the aviator hero.

Altogether, an official statement says, the "Dixey Scheme" is assured of forty pictures in two years, including six "supers," from contracts at present being negotiated, all of which stipulate for economical production.

Exhibitors' Visit to U. S.

The visit of British exhibitors to the United States last summer was so much enjoyed by those participating that it is being repeated this summer, again under the supervision of the London and Home Counties branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, though Arthur Taylor, the secretary, will not be able to make the journey. The party sails on the Queen Mary on May 19th and returns on the Normandie on June 21st, and the itinerary, as last year, includes a Hollywood tour.

Gets G-B Dates

Two pictures produced by British International Pictures, studio wing of the John Maxwell organization, Associated British Pictures, have been booked as first features at the New Gallery, Regent Street, G-B "West End" house. They are "The Dominant Sex" and "Aren't Men Beasts," and the schedule is that the second follows the first in two weeks.

Though BIP pictures have been used as supports in G-B theatres, it is many years since a feature from Elstree was the main attraction at any of the G-B show houses. The booking is regarded in the trade as an instance of the effectiveness of the Maxwell influence in G-B affairs, and the continuance of drastic economy in various departments of the Gaumont business is ascribed to the same cause.

Producing Jointly

Associated British also made an interesting announcement on the production side, saying that it had entered into an arrangement with British National Films to produce jointly with that company a series of pictures for distribution by Wardour Films, renting subsidiary of A.B.P. The first will be "Interval for Romance," with Arthur Tracy, and it is understood six pictures are planned.

British National, established by John Corfield with the backing of Lady Yule and J. A. Rank, previously released through General Film Distributors. Mr. Rank recently disposed of his holdings.

British National at the same time has disposed of its holdings in Pinewood Studios, it is understood, to J. A. Rank, and Mr. Corfield has resigned from the Pinewood board. It is expected that the BN films for Wardour will therefore be made at the BIP studio at Elstree.

May Accept Commission

A modification of the views of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association in regard to the Films Commission, suggested by the Moyne Committee to administer a new Flms Act, is pointed out in a report of the General Purposes Committee to the CEA General Council.

The General Purposes Committee says that it is "a reasonable assumption that cooperation of the KRS (distributors) will not be forthcoming" for the CEA suggestion of a compulsory arbitration court, and that, in view of this INDUSTRY OPPOSES CONGRESSIONAL BILL BARRING ALIEN ACTORS IN U.S.

Only 61 of 534 Contract Players Are Foreigners Admitted under Visas or Quotas, House Hearing Is Told

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The major presentation of the motion picture industry on the Dickstein alien actor bill was submitted last week before the House Immigration Committee in Washington by Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who said that existing laws give adequate protection to American actors and artists and in no way limit artistic and earning opportunities for native talent. Representative Samuel Dickstein is chairman of the committee, which heard stage and music representatives this week.

The attorney's opposition to the bill was supported by Joseph H. Seidelman, general foreign manager for Columbia, who followed him on the witness stand, and by statements made in Hollywood by Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger, and others. Industry opposition also was expressed at the first hearing last week by Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Hess pointed out that of 534 contract players employed by eight of the largest studios, only 61 were foreigners admitted under visas or quotas, and asserted that of the 22,000 extras employed in 1936 it is believed 90 per cent were American citizens.

"It would be a foul aspersion upon American motion picture producers to charge that they deliberately discriminated or that they at present discriminate in giving employment in favor of foreign born actors against native born actors," he told the committee. "No such charge would emanate from any responsible quarter. No one should be permitted to utter such a charge without being compelled immediately to substantiate it with proof. Such a charge would be wholly baseless and libelous.

"It is fitting to assume that those persons born abroad who were employed and are employed as actors and artists in American motion pictures, and especially those who achieved great success and distinction therein, were fitted therefor, just as it is fair to assume that the persons born abroad who were employed and achieved distinction in other pursuits, vocations and professions were fitted for the employment they received in the United States by those who employed them."

Leading Position Cited

However, Mr. Hess continued, there are certain basic principles underlying the employment of foreign talent in American pictures.

"American motion picture producers have aimed at the successful development of motion pictures to give to the American public and the people of the world the best that the world affords in motion picture entertainment," he explained. "For that purpose they continually seek to achieve the successful commercial utilization of developments in the art of motion pictures here and abroad, and to bring to the American studios the best motion picture actors and artists, directors, writers, and technicians that the world affords.

SCREEN ACTORS' GUILD, BRITISH EQUITY AGREE

An agreement has been reached between the British Actors' Equity Association and the Screen Actors' Guild of America governing the conditions under which members of either organization may work in the territory governed by the other, according to a report from London. Primary conditions are that visiting artists must join the association of the country in which they are working and respect the terms laid down by that association. A. M. Wall, secretary of the British group, said that "serious action" would be taken against any visiting artists in England who do not conform with the agreement.

"For some time this country has enjoyed supremacy in the production of motion pictures distributed throughout the world. Today in most countries into which motion pictures are imported American motion pictures by far exceed the number of motion pictures of any other country.

"It has been estimated that from 30 to 40 per cent of the total gross revenues from the distribution of American motion pictures are derived from foreign countries. Nearly every American motion picture made at the important studios in Hollywood is made for showings in other countries of the world, in addition to the United States, and every such motion picture in fact receives distribution throughout the world."

So great a hold has the American picture achieved in foreign markets that some governments have become disturbed and have endeavored to develop native production, employing artistic and technical talent from Hollywood for that purpose, Mr. Hess said.

This competition may in time prove serious, he indicated, and it is necessary, therefore, to continue to develop new talent and new personalities and to insure authenticity of atmosphere and locale in pictures dealing with foreign subjects, as well as to insure proper pronunciation in "dubbing."

Handicaps Seen

"No one will be misled in contending that because 61 foreign actors are employed in the production of American motion pictures an equal number of American actors are thereby deprived of opportunities of being employed in the motion pictures in which such foreign actors and artists appear," he said. "In the light of ordinary observation and common experience, such a contention would be palpably fallacious.

"In view of what has been here advanced concerning the necessity of maintaining worldwide distribution of American motion pictures and the necessity for employing some foreign actors for the production of the best and most appealing motion pictures and to assure worldwide distribution, it is believed to be already evident that it is precisely the employment of such foreign actors which makes possible opportunities for a host of American actors to develop their art in motion pictures, and moreover gives employment to many Americans engaged in the many other vocations, professions and crafts which together must join their efforts for the production of successful motion pictures."

No Discrimination Against American Players but Dickstein Bill Would Handicap Producers, Committee Hears

Under the bill, it would be impossible for the producers to get much of the talent that becomes available, Mr. Hess pointed out. It would, for instance, be impossible to get an American actor to go to some of the foreign countries from which a producer might wish to import talent. Other considerations, he said, also would tend to handicap the producers.

As a result there would be a falling off of revenues from foreign distribution which would make impossible the present large expenditures for individual pictures which producers figure will return a profit from foreign sales, and the American market would be invaded with pictures made abroad in the English language with foreign entertainment personalities, he said.

Most important was this: "Increased restrictive measures by foreign governments against American motion pictures would be given encouragement and retaliatory measures by such governments might be expected. It would no longer be possible for American producers in combatting such proposed foreign legislation to show that some foreign actors from the countries proposing such legislation appear in motion pictures brought into such country from America."

"American producers," the attorney concluded, "might be compelled both in an attempt to maintain their markets and by the 'quota' laws of other countries to make numbers of motion pictures abroad at foreign studios with foreign talent not obtainable in the United States, thus narrowing opportunities for American actors and artists, and depriving other persons of an opportunity to earn a livelihood in the vocations and crafts employed in American productions."

Foreign Picture Given

A more detailed picture of the export situation was given the committee by Mr. Seidelman who represented all producers who ship films abroad.

Mr. Seidelman asserted that from 60 to 95 per cent of all films produced in this country are exported, and so powerful has become our dominance of the world situation that in no country, except Russia and Germany, is the number of American films exceeded by foreign or other language pictures. Some countries, he added, are 100 per cent American, so far as pictures are concerned.

"Were it not for the revenue derived from this foreign market," he explained, "the producers would be forced to curtail the cost of their product, resulting in a dropping in the quality of the films, and as a consequence, no doubt, loss of many patrons of motion pictures in this country as well.

"By placing a ban against artists, important or unimportant, from nations friendly or unfriendly indiscriminately, the American producer will surely be the first to feel the axe of retaliation and in a very short time embargoes will be placed against the importation of American films."

when he came to Hollywood in 1912 was cut short by Mr. Dickstein after the actor had declared that his success was due to an opportunity to develop his art in the United States and that his pictures have increased the business of his company 200 per cent.

Favored by Equity

Appearing in favor of the bill, Charles Henry Freeman, New York concert manager who said that he did not represent any organization, was given nearly two hours to voice his criticism of those who opposed the measure. He discussed chiefly the "Metropolitan clique" which he charged held the fate of any aspiring opera star in its hands.

Actors' Equity favors the bill but is well able to look after its own interests, Mr. Dickstein was told by Frank Gillmore, president of Equity. The organization will approve the measure if minor amendments such as a provision permitting the entry of entire companies are added, he said. The Equity official added that only 46 aliens out of a total of 2,000 actors would be affected by the measure.

Similarly, the American Federation of Musicians will favor the bill if instrumental soloists and orchestra conductors are excepted. General Samuel T. Ansell, attorney for the organization said, however, that even with this amendment his clients would have small interest in the bill.

The measure was called "ridiculous" in a statement by Samuel Goldwyn in Hollywood. The director said that foreign governments are subsidizing their own film industries by placing stringent quota laws against American-made pictures.

"Now," he said, "this Dickstein bill would add an American menace to American-made films. The advent of foreign talent to Hollywood has been one of the biggest boons toward building up the American film industry. We must not forget that American motion pictures have great markets in every other part of the world."

Walter Wanger, in a telegram to Representative Charles Kramer of California, urged defeat of the bill "to save the jobs of thousands of Americans who would not have their jobs if the relatively few foreign stars in Hollywood were forced to make their pictures outside this country."

The producer said he had made a very careful survey of the American industry in Europe last summer, conferring with the heads of several governments.

"The passing of a bill such as the Dickstein proposal," the telegram read, "will be felt not only in eliminating the international stars, which in itself is un-American and inexcusable, but in giving these other countries a justified attitude that the American film is nationalistic and self-seeking and should be curbed in its international influence. The ambition of every foreign country is to spend any amount of money in order to have a film industry comparable to the American. At a time like this, when the industry means so much more to American goodwill throughout the world, it seems inconceivable that anything as reactionary and narrow-minded as the intolerable Dickstein bill could be contemplated by the American people."

Film Board Election

The annual meeting of the San Francisco Film Board of Trade was held last week and resulted in the election of officers, as follows: President, George A. Smith, Paramount; vice-president, Charles Muehlman, Warners; secretary-treasurer, George Ballentine, Fox. These, with the addition of D. J. McInery, United Artists, and Barney Rose, Universal, also comprise the board.

Governor Bars Film Of Spanish Revolution

Governor George H. Earle last Saturday ordered the picture, "Spain in Flames," barred from Pennsylvania, according to the Associated Press. "This picture is pure communistic propaganda, dressed as a plea for democracy," the governor is reported to have said after seeing it at a private showing. Governor Earle's action upheld the State Board of Censors, which earlier declined to approve the picture.

"Probably the worst thing about the film is that it definitely asks for and encourages recruiting of men of military experience for the government army. The inference cannot be evaded that the government of Spain would like trained American veterans to enlist in her army," the governor is quoted.

Expect Call of Paramount Stock

The calling in of all of Paramount's outstanding six per cent debentures and the placing of the company's common stock on a dividend basis for this year is expected in financial quarters as a direct result of the issuance by the company of $15,000,000 of new 3¼ per cent convertible debentures for exchange, it was revealed late last week.

Financial sources estimate that approximately one-third of the outstanding $22,500,000 of six per cent debentures due in 1955 will be presented by holders for exchange on a bond-for-bond basis for the new 3¼ per cent debentures, due in 1947 and convertible into common stock of the company at $33 1/3. The remaining one-third of the new debentures, or $7,500,000 of six per cent debentures still, it is estimated, would be outstanding on March 9 when the exchange right expires. This procedure ultimately would result in fully retiring the six per cent debentures whether the volume of exchange is greater or less than that estimated. The six per cent debentures are callable by the company at par plus accrued interest at any time on reasonable notice.

Placing the company's common on a dividend basis is looked for in order to make the conversion of the new debentures into common attractive. This is regarded as particularly likely in view of the fact that the new debentures are convertible into common at $33 1/3, whereas the common is now selling at slightly more than $26.

The new debentures are also callable by the company at par and accrued interest at any time with notice. Their ultimate conversion and retirement would effect annual interest savings of $1,350,000 for the company. An interest saving of approximately $635,000 is made possible immediately.

Paramount's net for the last quarter of 1936 is estimated in Wall Street at approximately $4,000,000.

If the Wall Street reports are accurate, a 1936 profit of approximately $6,000,000 is indicated for Paramount, taking into account certain year-end adjustments. Profit for the first three-quarters amounted to approximately $2,250,000. The 1936 figures, however, reflect the benefit of a special inventory reserve of $2,500,000 set up out of 1935 earnings.

Duals Entering Chicago Loop

Reopening of the McVickers theatre this week in the Loop section of Chicago brings double features downtown for the first time since the practice became general in the city. Up until a year ago the theatre had been operated for some years by Jones, Linick and Schaeffer and prior to that it had been a leading Balaban and Katz unit. The theatre was closed in 1936 because of a shortage of pictures and the lease was returned to the Chicago Board of Education, which has control of the property. Last week the Comet Amusement Company, B. and K. affiliate, signed a 30-year lease with rental for that period totalling near $2,000,000.

Operation of the theatre will be by John Jones of the J. L. and S. organization, which will run the house in partnership with Balaban and Katz. The B. and K. circuit will supply the product through their various deals with major distributors. It is reported that the pictures to play the house will be spot booked and no contracts for a certain group will be made. This arrangement gives the house a choice of product from all companies.

The theatre is scheduled to run pictures in the last week of the "A" release period, which makes the films available immediately after they have appeared in B. and K. Marbro, Tivoli and Uptown.

Up until the present time the Jones, Linick and Schaeffer circuit has been one of the chief competitors of Balaban and Katz. With the exception of the RKO Palace, their State Lake has been the only opposing first run house to compete with the six Loop theatres of B. and K. On May 1, however, B. and K. take over control of the State Lake, which they purchased some months ago along with the State Lake Building.

New Educational Plan Approved

Approval by the Chancellor of Delaware of a plan for the reclassification of the stock of Educational Pictures, Inc., has been announced at Wilmington. The plan had been previously approved at a meeting in Wilmington on February 8 by stockholders representing more than 78 per cent of the preferred and 83 per cent of the common stock of the company.

An amendment to the certificate of incorporation has been approved to provide for a revised capital structure consisting of 150,000 shares of 60 cent dividend cumulative convertible preferred stock, $5 par value, and 500,000 shares of $1 par value common stock. The plan provides for the sale of the issue of new preferred stock to obtain funds to pay the company's present indebtedness and for adequate working capital to meet current business requirements. The plan also makes provision for the exchange of the company's old 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock, $100 par value, now outstanding in the amount of 17,946 shares, for new common stock.

situation, "your Committee would not view with apprehension a Films Commission, provided it consisted of persons having a practical knowledge of the film trade."

This declaration modifies the previous CEA declaration in its official comment on the Moyne Act, to the Board of Trade, that "we are emphatically opposed to a Films Commission, invested with executive powers, composed of people entirely independent of the film trade," so far as this statement was preliminary to the CEA's plea for an arbitration court. In indicating that it will accept a Films Commission, of trade complexion, the CEA has come nearly into line with the Film Group of the FBI, which accepted the principle of a Films Commission if it included trade members, though the Film Group did not suggest, as the CEA appears to do, that all the members of the Commission should be members of the industry.

Coronation Newsreels

British Movietone News, which recently announced plans for an exclusive Technicolor version of the Coronation celebrations, now proposes to fly negatives and prints of the newsreel to New York, the first by the airship Hindenburg, due in New York on May 14, and the second by plane. If Col. Lindbergh's transatlantic air service is operating at that date he may carry the films, but it is stated that Amy Mollison and Beryl Markham also have volunteered for the trip.

Sir Gordon Craig, general manager of British Movietone, plans to fly with the prints. He said that while both color and black and white negatives will be on the Hindenburg, the prints of both versions will reach New York twenty-four hours earlier by plane.

The newsreel companies are pooling resources in order that a completely adequate Coronation film may be delivered to the theatres as soon as possible. In conference with the General Purposes Committee of the CEA, special delivery plans have been worked out, employing air, rail and road, to supply a greater number of theatres in a shorter space of time than ever before.

Official cooperation is assured, due to the realization that a Coronation film in the cinemas on the evening of the same day will help to relieve street congestion. From the exhibitors' point of view, immediate exhibition of the film is seen as the only effective safeguard against a big slump, in Coronation Week, at the box-offices of all places of entertainment.

Suffering Animals

On February 11th Sir Robert Gower, M.P., formally presented in the House of Commons the "Cinematograph Films (Animals) Bill," the object of which is "to prohibit the production or exhibition of films depicting suffering to animals, or in the production of which suffering may have been caused to animals." The measure was read a first time.

Sir Robert is chairman of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The Bill is supported by a number of Members of all parties. It represents the views of a considerable section of the British public, which has adversely commented on many American "nature" and other films. Newspaper rumors attaching to a recent Hollywood super-picture have tended to inflame this opinion.

Capital and Provincial News Theatres, controlled by Norman J. Hulbert, is using substandard (16mm) film for local news items at its theatres in Liverpool, Portsmouth, Southampton and Brighton. Supplementing the national news reel material, these subjects are shown by an Ensign projector with a special lens arrangement giving adequate enlargement for the standard screen.

know more of the life of a middle-class American than we do of the English people who fill the trams and trains at rush hours."

This is gratifying chiefly in that it comes from a British producer. The plea for a little of the real life of this country on the screen is an old one. It was very vigorously expressed recently, on behalf of American film patrons, by Alistair Cooke, film critic of British Broadcasting Corporation. Commenting on Mr. Cooke's utterances in Fame, the writer suggested that the best business policy for British producers would be to "concentrate on stories offering America that intimate glimpse of the British scenes for which, obviously, it is pining."

It is good news that so imaginative a director as Hitchcock is of a like mind, and interesting to learn that he intends, in "A Shilling for Candles," to show the British workman as he is, to depict a minor court of justice as it functions with unpaid Justices of the Peace, to show the English countryside as it appears to those who never have ridden in a high-powered car.

"Hitch's" picture, incidentally, is the only one in immediate prospect at Shepherd's Bush. The other active G-B unit is in South Africa on "King Solomon's Mines." At the Gainsborough studio at Islington, the Hulbert-Courtneidge "Take My Tip" is finished and "Okay for Sound," under Marcel Varnel's direction, is the only activity.

TRADE PRACTICE ACTION NOW UP TO COMPANIES

The responsibility for further action on the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America trade practice program rests with the seven distribution companies which committed themselves to supporting it, Ed Kuykendall, president of the exhibitor organization, said in New York this week in commenting on the failure of the distributors thus far to authorize branch managers to participate in the setting up of the local conciliation boards through which the exhibitor organization hopes that seven-tenths of its trade practice program might be realized.

The MPTOA convention will be asked to adopt a new policy on the program, Mr. Kuykendall indicated.

It was disclosed last week that a majority of the companies which replied to the MPTOA program have definite objections to taking any immediate action on the local boards.

Dinner Meeting Held By AMPA Committee

The committee on advertising awards of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers were to meet at dinner Thursday in the Hotel Edison, New York, to complete plans for the annual awards of the organization.

Vincent Trotta, art director for Paramount, is chairman of the committee and associated with him are S. Barret McCormick, director of publicity and advertising of RKO; S. Charles Einfeld, director of publicity and advertising of Warner Brothers; John C. Flinn of Variety; Paul Gulick, publicity director for Universal; Al Selig, advertising director of Gaumont British; Hyatt Dabb, publicity and advertising director of Columbia; Paul Benjamin of National Screen Service; Milton Weiss of MGM; Tess Michaels of United Artists; Herbert Berg of Paramount, and Al Sherman, of Columbia.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine New Pictures

Of nine new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency during the current week seven were approved for general patronage and two were listed as unobjectionable for adults, as follows:

Class A, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Borderland," "The Devil Diamond," "Ein Falscher Fuffziger" (German), "Land Beyond the Law," "Naszut Felaron" (Hungarian), "Sea Devils," "Wings of the Morning." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Her Husband's Secretary," "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney."

Consolidated Case Heard

Argument was heard recently before the state supreme court at Dover, Del., in the case of Consolidated Films, Inc., in which the question of stocks and dividends payable were main issues. Decision was reserved and the court adjourned until March 19.

'AD' MEN INVITED TO MPTOA CONVENTION

Cleveland Exhibitors Reelect Schwartz; New Organization Formed at Kansas City, Kan.

The first "round table" discussion between exhibitors and the advertising heads of all the large companies to increase box office receipts is in the making, for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, from March 16th to 18th, at the Biltmore hotel in Miami.

A discussion of new and potential ideas in advertising and exploitation of motion pictures, the use of advertising accessories, press sheets, lobby displays, theatre fronts, mailing, newspaper space and the new media of film advertising on the air will comprise the basis of discussion in which the following advertising men have been invited to participate: Hyatt Daab, Columbia; Silas Seadler, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Robert M. Gillman, Paramount; S. Barret McCormick, RKO Radio; Charles E. McCarthy, Twentieth Century-Fox; Paul Gulick, Universal; Monroe Greenthal, United Artists, and S. Charles Einfeld, Warner Brothers.

While the MPTOA was rounding out its convention program, organized exhibitors elsewhere this week—

Met and reelected officers, in Ohio;

Agreed to cooperate on legislative matters, in Connecticut;

Criticized distributors for score charges, in New York;

Owners formed a new organization, in Kansas City, Kan.

George Baker, of the Electric theatre, was elected to head the Kansas City, Kansas, Theatres Operators Association, which has just been formed. Charles Vaughan, of the Art, is vice-president, and Fred Meyn, of the Pershing, is secretary-treasurer.

The group includes twelve theatres. In addition to those mentioned, they are the Fox Granada, W. D. Fulton's State, Ed Burgan's Gauntier, Tenth Street, and Home; W. D. Fite's Kansas, Harry Horrocks's Midway, R. R. Biechele's Osage, and A. L. Dare's Rosedale. Exhibitors operating the colored houses in Kansas City, Kan., also have been invited to join.

Cleveland Owners Elect

Ernest Schwartz was unanimously elected president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association for the third consecutive term, at the annual meeting last Thursday. The entire slate was reelected, as follows: Albert E. Ptak, vice-president; John D. Kalafat, treasurer, and G. W. Erdmann, secretary.

The Cleveland exhibitors also elected the following directors for one year: Henry Greenberger, P. E. Essick, Frank Porozinski, L. G. Baldwin, Frank Gross and Morris Berkowitz.

Besides M. Schwartz' third term as president, this is Mr. Kalafat's sixth year as treasurer and Mr. Erdmann's 11th year as secretary.

The organization voted to show the Shirley Temple Red Cross film during the Red Cross membership drive at every local independent theatre.

In Connecticut, the competitive Allied Theatres of Conecticut and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut cast aside their organizational differences to meet on common ground for attacking anti-film legislation. Allied appointed a special legislative committee, consisting of Maurice Bailey, Dr. J. B. Fishman and Ralph Pasho, to meet with the Connecticut MPTO's committee on legislation, consisting of Irving Jacocks, Edward Levy, Arthur Lockwood, Samuel Weiss and Edwin Raffile. Both groups will meet Thursday at the Hotel Bond, New Haven, preceding the first hearing by the State Judiciary Committee of bills affecting motion pictures.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association, in New York, named Leon Rosenblatt, Abram Cohen and S. Traversi as a committee to raise a special fund for New York exhibitors who may have to apply for loans to pay increased wages for projectionists under the new setup provided in the merger of Allied and Local 306 unions. At the same time the organization has set out to force the large distributors to state their position on score charges.

MPTOA to Hear Colonel Byoir

Announcement was made Tuesday by the MPTOA of the acceptance by Colonel Carl Byoir of an invitation to address the Miami delegates. Colonel Byoir is considered one of the outstanding public relations counselors.

The MPTOA convention program this week neared completion with the determination to set aside the second day for a discussion of improved theatre management and ways and means of increasing attendance at theatres, in connection with the round-table to be held with the distributors' advertising directors.

Also added to the program this week were the following discussions:

"Winning New Patrons," by Roy L. Smart, Wilby-Kincey Management Company, Charlotte, North Carolina.

"Value of a Theatre to the Community," by M. A. Lightman, Malco Theatres, Memphis, Tenn.

"Value of Mailing Lists and Rural Advertising," by Brownie Akers, Griffith Amusement Company, Oklahoma City, Okla.

"College Town Theatre Operation," by Stanley Sumner, University Theatre, Cambridge, Mass.

"Theatre Operation in England," by Percy Phillipson, President, Automaticket, Ltd., London.

"Box Office Values and Booking Problems," by Morgan A. Walsh, San Francisco.

"Theatre Insurance and Accident Prevention," by Henry Anderson, insurance department, Paramount Theatres, New York.

Additional talks are being arranged.

Committee Chairmen

Committees which will meet with exhibitors and later report to the convention include the following, with their chairmen:

Resolutions: Chairamn, Edward G. Levy, New Haven, Conn.

Music Tax: Charles W. Picquet, Pinehurst, N. C.

Unfair Trade Practices: O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga.

Films Maintain Discipline For Workhouse Inmates

Know They Can't Attend Shows If They Misbehave

by E. H. MAYER
in Cincinnati

Motion pictures are playing a part in application of the credo of A. M. Sauer, superintendent of the Cincinnati Workhouse, that individuals in places of detention can be helped to respect themselves by being treated with respect. Inmates of the institution, which was a federal prison as well as workhouse when it opened in 1869, never are called prisoners or convicts; they're patrons when the motion picture show starts.

The screen programs are being provided through the suggestion and continuous cooperation of Joe Goetz, assistant divisional manager of RKO Midwest. These showings are conducted on Friday afternoons—as part of the inmates' recreation period—in the dining hall, on the front wall of which a screen has been painted. Local exchanges supply the film gratis. The projection apparatus is encased in a fire-resistive container.

The showings in the Cincinnati Workhouse are proving to be much more than entertainment. Not only do they exert a highly constructive influence because of the content of the pictures, but they also have become the medium of restoring discipline. When an inmate becomes refractory, he is reminded that a continuance of his misbehavior will deprive him of attending the next "picture show." This usually has the effect of causing him to "snap out of it."

Although Mae West and Shirley Temple are the favorites at the institution, preferences frequently are expressed for gangster, crook and mystery pictures, and they are shown. On these occasions the inmates openly discuss and criticize the action and technique of the central characters, and here Superintendent Sauer "comes into the picture." He is quick to capitalize an opportunity to point out that the criminal cannot get away with it, at least not for long. His remarks are not in the way of a "lecture," but rather on the order of a man-to-man conversation, and the inmates accept the object lessons in the proper spirit.

This writer has observed the inmates during the showing of a picture. They lose themselves in the story. Their emotional reactions are keen and spontaneous. They often unknowingly register aloud their approval, resentment or sympathy, and are as ready to discuss the content and ending of a "parlor picture" with a love theme as the more virile type of story.

"Lynton" Testimony To Be Heard in West

A stipulation authorizing the taking of testimony at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, beginning March 1, in the accounting and damage action of Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes against MGM, has been signed by attorneys for the principals involved. The accounting testimony is an aftermath of the recent decision which held that the plaintiffs' book, "Dishonored Lady," had been plagiarized by the motion picture, "Letty Lynton." The plaintiffs' estimate the damage at more than $1,000,000. Special Master Gordon Auchincloss will hear the testimony.

38 of 1,400 Pictures Cut by Boston Censors

Approximately 1,400 motion picture features, shorts and special features were approved by the Boston Department of Public Safety, under provisions of the Massachusetts Lord's Day laws during 1936. Only 38, or less than three per cent, were cut and most of these eliminations were minor ones.

Nuovo Mondo Pictures Company Reorganized

Nuovo Mondo Motion Pictures, Inc., has been reorganized with additional capital. This organization has an exclusive contract for the next five years with Unione Nazionale Esportazione Pellicole, Rome, Italy, for the distribution of Italian pictures in this country.

Asher Acquires General Franchise in New England

Showing Safety Reel

A two-reel sound picture, produced by the Pennsylvania State Department of Revenue, will be exhibited in all schools throughout the state in an effort to teach traffic safety. The $22,000 spent on the production and distribution of the film is being met with revenue from a new five-cent charge to garages for safety inspection stickers.

RCA Grants Licenses

Consolidated Film Industries and the DeLuxe Laboratory have obtained RCA licenses to manufacture and market improved non-slip printers for processing high fidelity sound tracks, according to Edwin M. Hartley, RCA Photophone executive.

Columbia Buys Radio Series

Columbia has purchased the motion picture rights to "Community Sing," radio program heard weekly over the national Columbia Broadcasting System network, and will produce a series of short subjects using the program as the background.

Edward Hudson, formerly with Paramount in Portland, has been named Oregon manager for Grand National.

Paul Gulick Interviewed On WINS Program

Paul Gulick, publicity manager for Universal, was interviewed by Chamberlin Brown on WINS last week. Mr. Gulick reviewed the roster of new stars developed by the new Universal and predicted success for the forthcoming releases of his company. Asked whether, in his opinion, the screen has hurt stage plays, Mr. Gulick said:

"I suppose they did at first. But to my mind, the real pity is that the stage and screen try to be so much alike, whereas they are not really alike at all. Authors write plays now with both eyes on the movies, and pictures try vainly to reproduce the values of the stage, ever since sound came into pictures. If both would go about their own business, both would be better off."

Upholds Handbill Law

The right of cities to pass and enforce anti-handbill ordinances was upheld by the Indiana supreme court this week in refusing an injunction to an East Chicago, Ill., retail store. The decision, which was of interest to exhibitors who use handbills extensively, said: "Handbills and advertising matter, when thrown loosely about, may become waste matter. The statutes authorize cities to prevent the deposit of any unwholesome substance on private or public property."

Plan Publicity Union

The American Advertising Guild, recently organized in New York, is seeking to increase its membership through the formation of an amusement unit and the inclusion in the group of all those active in publicity work. The publicity membership would not be limited to any one field, but would include films, the legitimate theatre, radio and the like. The guild plans to seek an affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Gebber Completes Staff

Executives of Hollywood Studios, Inc., Hollywood, have been appointed by Maurice Gebber, president. They are: Lloyd H. Clifton, vice president; Oscar F. Horn, studio attorney; Louis Felix, secretary-treasurer; Ray Kleinburger, director of public relations; John F. Meehan, studio manager; Dick Hunt, publicity; Harry Jolson, casting director, and Joseph Diskay, musical director.

Will Replace Hawkins

Mrs. Beatrice Kaufman, eastern story editor for Samuel Goldwyn with headquarters in New York, will fill in the place which becomes vacant with the resignation of William W. Hawkins, Jr., her assistant. Mr. Hawkins becomes eastern story editor for Columbia, succeeding William C. Lengel, recently resigned.

Schulberg Appoints Fisher

B. P. Schulberg has appointed James B. Fisher as head of his newly organized story department in Hollywood in anticipation of an increase in production activities. Mr. Fisher resigned from the Radio story department to accept the post. He will also act as special contact man between the Schulberg company and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

The Lost Horizon

(Columbia)

Dramatic Spectacle

On the screen of the appropriately chosen Four Star theatre in Los Angeles behind doors barred to all save accredited representatives of the press, Columbia Pictures corporation on the afternoon of February 19th submitted this $2,000,000 collaboration of Director Frank Capra and Scenarist Robert Riskin—their first since "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"—and none called the cost excessive.

Almost simultaneously, due to time difference, socialites, statesmen, financiers, film executives, visiting royalty and professional entertainers of screen, stage and radio were witnessing the world premiere of the picture at the Lincoln theatre on Miami Beach—whence the production moved overnight into the Miami Mayfair on a two-a-day schedule—and here, amid ceremonies typical of a Hollywood first night, the price was again pronounced commensurate.

Comment flowing inland from both coasts displays singular unanimity on vital points. Daring appears again and again as descriptive of the Capra-Riskin departure from their precedential "Mr. Deeds" and "It Happened One Night." Bold, enterprising, resourceful, spectacular, imaginative, stimulating and inspiring are words juxtaposed to such as masterly, triumphant and consummate in encomiums from all quarters. Heard, too, is speculation in the vein of Edwin Schallert, who asks, in the Los Angeles Times:

"How far will it go in the realm of popularity? Will it be for the few or the masses? Who knows?" To which he replies in his next paragraph, "Indeed, this amazing dream creation may prove in perfect tune with the public consciousness of the moment. For it is well established that the James Hilton novel enjoyed the widest sort of favor."

The picture is a strange amalgamation of vigorous realism and idyllic spiritual and romantic illusion. Continually bearing evidence of it producers' courage in essaying something extremely new and different, the show is exceptionally well presented. Leaving no doubt that much money, patience and thought were poured into its manufacture, it is exceptionally well acted, directed and staged. The mechanical embellishments, dramatic photography and musical accompaniment add impressively to the film's unorthodox entertainment quality. To bring reason and order to its conflicting contrasts—that the story may come within the ken of ordinary folk as well as those appreciative of the less prosaic values in life—Frank Capra's direction technique avoids routine lanes.

Dynamic in its realism, yet actually a fantasy, Columbia embarked on a genuine adventure when it started the picture. The best brains in the studio were occupied with it for almost a year. Motion Picture Herald anticipated the film in a pictorial preview published May 30, 1936. The company's faith in its undertaking places a great responsibility upon the shoulders of the exhibitor who must sell the show to the public. As the studio dared to do something new, so must showmen be prepared to depart from formula exploitation treatment.

The time of the story is the present. Revolution breaks out in inner China. A little group of civilized people, Robert Conway, British consul, Lovett, a fossil collector, George, Robert's brother, law alluding Barnard and wanton Gloria board a plane. Believing they are being flown to safety, they discover they are flying into an interior that lies beyond any horizon. The plane crashes and natives find the victims. Then, for them, physical and mental time stops.

They are led into Shangri La, a seeming Garden of Eden where there is no sin and peace and contentment reign.

The picture is not a dream. It is not told in retrospect. It is the chronicle of a strange, romantic, dramatic, mental and spiritual adventure. Sold simply as that, it is not beyond the bounds of reason to anticipate its fantastic embellishment will be understood and appreciated.

Reviewed at the press preview given by the studio in the Four Star theatre, Los Angeles.

Michael Strogoff

(Radio)

Drama

Save as it introduces an alien vein of comedy, this re-relating of the epic adventures of Jules Verne's Michael Strogoff, courier of the Tsar, sticks closely to the melodramatic theme and spirit of the novel. Basically the show is thrill action entertainment, through which run continuous threads of romance and drama, and incidents of intrigue, cruelty, sacrifice, despair. The film is extremely well done. The spectacular displays of military might and ferocity are sometimes awe-inspiring in character. The quality of personal performances is of superior caliber. Those of Akim Tamiroff, Anton Walbrook, Fay Bainter, Margot Grahame and Elizabeth Allen are particularly impressive. In their peciliar way the comedy antics of Eric Blore and Edward Brophy are uniquely effective in provoking laughter to abate the tension of the stark drama in which the principals are involved.

As Radio has brought the story to the screen under the production guidance of Pandro S. Berman and direction of George Nicholls, Jr., an honest attempt has been made to give it appeal to the greatest number of theatregoers. While preserving the grim quality of the original the producers have demonstrated recognition of the varied demands of modern-minded audiences by including a comedy contract never envisioned by M. Verne. Students of literature may be inclined to look askance at the departure, but judging from the manner in which the preview audience accepted it the majority of regular picture followers should not be inclined to be overly critical.

Tartar hordes, led by traitor Ogareff, ravaging and destroying as they sweep out of Siberia, stir the Tsar of Russia to action. Michael Strogoff is chosen as courier to make a perilous journey from St. Petersberg to Irkutsk, carrying to The Grand Duke plans by which the fury of the invading host may be stayed.

On his dangerous mission he is compelled to combat the intriguing wiles of an alluring spy, Zangarra, who betrays him into the hands of Ogareff only to repent of her treachery. He meets, helps and falls in love with Nadia, refugee. Compelled to deny his own mother so that the secret of his identity might be preserved, he is made captive by Ogareff to become the victim of horrible torture. A Russian army routed by the savage foe, Strogoff is freed and with Nadia makes his way to Irkutsk. But Ogareff, learning the secret of Strogoff's mission, has preceded him to pose before the Grand Duke as the Tsar's courier. With demoniacal fury, Ogareff plans to massacre all the Russians, but Strogoff arrives in time to halt the vicious plot. Victor in a bloody hand-to-hand battle with the traitor. extracting full revenge upon Ogareff for having caused his mother's death, Strogoff leads the Russian armies to victory. His reward is honor from the Tsar and the hand of Nadia in marriage.

Attaining the status of a good thrill action melodrama, the production is one in which the adult intelligentsia will find much to admire in the quality of acting and production technique, one to give the gallery gods plenty of opportunity to cheer and hiss. Under proper presentation, and means for showmanship exploitation

The Great Barrier

(G-B)

Drama

This is one of the most ambitious films to the credit of British enterprise and definitely proof that an understanding of the needs of the international, and particularly the American, market is growing in England. It is a story packed full of action, a vivid picture of an historical pioneering episode, with a rich range of beautiful scenic backgrounds. Picturing the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is worthy of comparison with the screen epics in which American companies have shown the conquest of a continent. Speedy, peppy in dialogue, spectacularly in the super class, it has plenty to offer to American audiences. That seventy-five per cent of it was shot in Canada is an asset in itself.

Selling talk ought to be easy for the exhibitor. The slow progress of the railroad from coast to coast, in face of dissension and financial crises in the board-room and sterner opposition from swamp and mountain at railhead, is history seen in the making. Famous characters like James J. Hill play their part (it is represented that a road was blasted through the Rockies to avoid linking the line with Hill's) and there is a reproduction of a meeting with the Canadian Prime Minister at which the latter gives an unofficial "go ahead" to the harassed directors. The real drama, all the same, lies in the wilds. Pictures of the railhead settlement filled with unpaid and rioting workmen, while a pioneer party seeks a pass through the Rockies, provide plenty of popular thrills, but there is deeper drama in the sight of a locomotive sinking, with the newly-laid track, into a morass which bars the plotted route.

Hickey, a gambler, and his friend Steve, a remittance man, go to the railhead of the C. P. R., looking for easy money. Sequel to a saloon rough-house is that they are sentenced to thirty days of compulsory labour with the construction gang. Hickey, in love with the gang-boss's daughter, finds work more stimulating than gaming; Steve gets into the clutches of a saloon harpy and quarrels with his friend.

In Montreal, the railway company is in difficulties. The line encounters hundreds of miles of swamp and strong efforts are made to merge the enterprise with that of James J. Hill and carry the railroad onto American soil. In a last effort to maintain the original plan, it is decided to try to find a pass through the Rockies. The pioneering party is headed by Major "Hell's Bells" Rogers and Hickey and Steve are both in it. Terrible hardships, desertions, and accidents reduce the party until only the Major and Hickey survive to light the beacon which tells them at the railhead that the pass has been found.

The story is deftly blended with the historical episodes and owes a lot of its effectiveness to Richard Arlen and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Press shown at the Tivoli before a royal premiere at the Gaumont Haymarket, it made them sit up and take notice. All comment rated it a real audience picture.

Doctrinal Drama

This contribution to the library of Russian governmentally sponsored films depicting life as purportedly lived in the USSR appears to have as its major and practically sole purpose the glorification of the G.P.U., represented as a benevolent organization immensely effective in rehabilitation of criminals by kindness. The picture differs from most of its predecessors in that it offers less of story and more of doctrine. It is proportionately ineffective as entertainment and therefore, in seemingly logical consequence, as propaganda.

The story, if it may be so described, deals with the G.P.U. officers' handling of convicts in the building of the White Sea Canal. Half a dozen players portray convict types and the case histories of their conversion to the G.P.U. points of view by oral suasion and declamatory eloquence occupy most of the running time. A man and a woman whose resistance to regulation is outstandingly stubborn are vocally violent, but nothing physically important comes of it. They, too, yield to the rhetorical urging of their jailers and turn out to be leaders in their work as they have been leaders in crime.

There is no sustained love interest, and occasional situations that threaten to develop plot complications are resolved into nothingness by assiduous application of argumentative dialogue. There are the usual intrinsically interesting scenic shots and vivid personality portraits. The technical aspects of the production are typical of films from this source.

Reviewed at the Cameo theatre, New York, which specializes in this kind of material and is patronized by the type of audience for which it is designed, the applause for this production was less than usually forthright. — WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Melodrama

In melodramatic manner the vicious workings of the small loan shark racket are exposed. While the show includes a love interest that provokes sympathy, it does not contain much romance as that term is popularly understood, and it is practically devoid of any tension-easing comedy. Yet in its mood, the picture is well done. Story content, acting and direction are above average, and because a definite topical significance attaches itself to the motivation, it affords exploitation possibilities not commonly found.

To the key of intelligently grounded dialogue, the film moves to a series of carefully contrived dramatic situations in which effort is made to show what happens to a borrower when he is unable to repay a loan on time; the brutal terrorism which loan sharks practice upon fearful victims and the manner in which one victim courageously collaborated with the authorities to break up the racket. As production and directorial technique elects to concentrate on drama which has considerable human interest, the story might have been ripped out of newspaper headlines in any community where the loan business has been investigated and the unethical workings have been revealed to the public.

Unable to repay loan shark Leo Carrillo a small sum borrowed to give his wife, Helen Mack, and children a country vacation, Chester Morris is set upon by thugs and beaten. Desperately endeavoring to escape further tortures, he steals company funds to repay the loan. His plight brought to the attention of the police, Morris still menaced by Carrillo's thugs, cooperates with the authorities. Though shot by mobsters, Morris goes before the grand jury to identify photographs of Carrillo and his strong arm men.

The Last of Mrs. Cheyney

(MGM - Weingarten)

Comedy

The cast features three currently popular players. The support includes quite a batch of favorably regarded performers. Settings, dressings and general production atmosphere are in the most approved 1937 modes. So far, so good. But the story is archaic and apt to be considered by many as moth eaten. It deals with characters and situations to which the public has been apathetic in previous similarly premised screen subjects. In the light of today's standards, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" is a windy dialogued, semi-farcical comedy with English background.

Paradoxically, the show is a mingling of brilliance and stodginess. It depicts what happens when an American feminine Raffles, masquerading as blue blood and aided by a collection of super-crooks, sets out to loot the jewels of British aristocracy of the pre-War era. In true story book fashion, it has the American sharpshooter herself taken in romantically by a scion of British nobility who is more suave and debonair than the smartest representative of Park Avenue. When the denouement is reached, not even the disappointed members of her gang or the members of the set she planned to fleece are mad. Contrariwise the boy and girl seem to be very glad that they will be able to spend their time in happy romance.

Very much as originally conceived by Frederick Lonsdale and presented on the screen and stage of a less modern-minded world, the show is one which to a great extent must depend upon the pulling power of names to excite much public attention. A glance at the production credits should be sufficient to show whom and what to sell.

Don't Tell the Wife

(RKO Radio)

Urban Comedy

What goes on behind the scenes while dealers in fraudulent securities mulct the public and the devices by use of which operators of these shadey enterprises conduct their nefarious manipulations in attempted circumvention of the law are matters dealt with lucidly if incidentally in this brisk and plausible comedy. Not less but rather more explicit because unlabored are points made with reference to the technique and viewpoint of the get-rich-quick school of confidence men. And more effective because counterweighted with these substantial elements is the appeal of comedy material admirably phrased and intelligently enacted.

Prominent members of a large cast are Lynne Overman and Una Merkel as the young married people who sustain the love interest, Guy Kibbee as the oldster who brings them into ultimate agreement on matters of principle, Thurston Hall, Guinn Williams, William Damarest and Harry Tyler as confidence men associated with Overman in the sale of what they believe to be worthless gold mine stock. They handle adroitly the lively but plausible dialogue and their performances are evenly balanced and convincing. The plot is conventional only in its consummation and the semblance of realism is preserved by confident direction.

The story is about Steve Dorset, retired confidence man, whose former confederates persuade him to join them in one more gold mine stock selling enterprise which, they argue, will escape prosecution, if the mails are not used, because the mine in which shares are to be sold really exists. He deceives his wife as to the legitimacy of the enterprise by employing as company president a presumably stupid individual whose name, Winthrop, she confuses with that of a capitalist whom she respects. Stock is sold by telephone and money rolls in, but Winthrop writes a letter promising a ten point rise within a fortnight and this brings government inspectors on the scene. Many complications follow, but Winthrop discovers that the gold mine really contains gold in quantity and the ending is the happy one.

Let's Make a Million

(Paramount)

Comedy

This little comedy has almost as many exploitation angles as it has characters. It may be offered as a soldier bonus comedy, an American Legion story, a small town romance, a tale of the oil country, an exposition of fraudulent stock sales technique, a homespun account of life and love among the common people or a character portrayal by Edward Everett Horton, this last being the most accurate and comprehensive description. Mr. Horton dominates practically every scene save those in which Margaret Seddon and Margaret McWade, the "pixilated sisters" of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," carry forward the characterizations achieved in that film.

Mr. Horton is cast as Harrison Gentry, small town merchant, war veteran, American Legion treasurer and henpecked bachelor nephew of maiden aunts with whom he lives. He receives $1,100 bonus money and much advice as to how he should spend it instead of as planned, financing a long deferred marriage and honeymoon. Promoters of fraudulent oil stocks victimize him and, through his example, his friends of the Legion. When their deception is exposed he is accused of conspiring with them. Recovering a portion of the money, he risks it in further diggings for oil, which is found in time to save him from physical or legal punishment for his operations. He is called hero and marries the girl.

Treatment is humorous throughout. Charlotte Wynters plays the girl in the case with understanding. Supporting players graphically depict a large number of small town types. The manifestly comic intent softens the effect of two or three somewhat remarkable plot coincidences. Mr. Horton's performance is on a par with his best.

Reviewed at Loew's Ziegfeld theatre, New York, where it ran with "Camille," it elicited chuckles indicative of amused approval, emotional rebound or both.—W. R. W.

The Devil's Playground

(Columbia)

Comedy-Drama

The names of Richard Dix, Dolores Del Rio and Chester Morris afford substantial marquee material for exploitation of "The Devil's Playground." Use of naval vessels in its production is another mentionable circumstance. That the picture shows what happens inside a sunken submarine, how modern equipment facilitates escape and how divers effect rescue when such equipment becomes fouled, may be set forth as a special reason for seeing the picture. The story is more or less familiar and the performances of the principal players are of the kind best described as characteristic.

Messrs. Dix and Morris are presented as pals in the naval service separated early in the picture by reassignments. Miss Del Rio is presented as a dime-a-dance girl who marries Dix to obtain the security his savings and present shore assignment as service diving instructor will afford her. He is ordered to brief sea duty immediately after their wedding and his friend, unexpectedly arriving in port, passes a week's leave in dalliance with the girl he does not know is his friend's bride. Dix, returning, discovers them in an embrace and thrashes his friend, failing to realize his wife's guilt. His friend boards a submarine which sinks and Dix refuses to go to his rescue until he learns of his bride's falsity. Then he saves his friend any they resume their former relationship, the girl returning to the dance hall to seek new companionship.

Love is News

Comedy, Romance, Drama

A smartly clever readaptation of the rich girl-newspaper reporter idea, topically titled "Love Is News" looks like desirable amusement for any kind of audience. Analysis of the story content and action, dialogue, characterizations and situations and the name value of the leading and support players shows exploitation quality that really should inspire showmen to go out and do things.

Essentially, the show is comedy romance drama that assumes a farce identity, sometimes slapstick. The most attractive thing, however, realizing that it has been given the benefit of good production and staging, is that it is different from similarly envisioned predecessors, one of those features that rollicks along, surprising incidents popping up with pleasing irregularity. There's no waiting for something comic to happen, the comedy occasionally coming before the audience is ready for it, with the laughter engendered by one situation hanging over to drown out the effect of what happens next.

The plot is simple but provacative. Loretta Young, rich girl, hates publicity; consequently she decorates the headlines continually. By a ruse, reporter Tyrone Power, who is always in editor Don Ameche's dog house, tricks her into a story that she preferred to keep secret. It's a scoop, but it's nothing to the scoop all the other newspapers have when Miss Young announces to the other reporters that she's endowing Power with $1,000,000 and is going to marry him. Mr. Power naturally is chagrined by this affront to his professional abilities, nor is his lot made any the lighter by the rantings of the city editor. His pleas to Miss Young for mercy only result in his being tossed into more hot water, incidents and sequences permitting the supporting cast to add to the merriment. Finally, when Power has been hauled over the coals until his hide is blistered, the girl relents and marries him.

Gay and airy stuff, assuring the maximum amount of amusement for the most varied patronage, the picture's tempo, dialogue and action are rapid fire. Spontaneously human and always wholesome, the film is of the character that automatically appeals to young folk and to the more mature.

Previewed in the Village theatre, Westwood. The storm-drenched Saturday night audience forgot all about rain and floods while the film was on the screen.—G. M.

Picador Porky

(Vitaphone)

Looney Tune Cartoon

The likeable pig invades a Mexican town and with the aid of two stooges and his usual trickery tries his hardest to win the prize as the champion bullfighter. Porkey is awarded the prize money, but wisdom being the better part of valor the pig turns the money over to the bull and swiftly takes his leave of the town. Music plays an important part in these "Looney Tunes" and the arrangement for this is particularly good. Running time, 8 minutes.

Knee Action

(Columbia)

Comedy

Andy Clyde in this subject is an inventor of sorts. His first attempt results in a washing machine and when that does more than is expected of it Clyde converts it into a dish washer. The failure of the inventions, however, is due in great part to the activities of little Rudolph, whom Clyde inherited when he married Rudolph's mother, Florabelle. Being the apple of his mother's eye, Rudolph can do no wrong but nevertheless manages to upset the Clyde apple cart sufficiently to send Clyde packing to a quiet place in the country to rest. Vivien Oakland plays Florabelle, and Tommy Bonds is Rudolph. Running time, 17 minutes.

Dexterity

(MGM)

Excellent Pete Smith Short

A marvelous display of expert skill and superhuman confidence is the matter for presentation in this Pete Smith specialty short. Charles Carrer displays his excellent juggling technique. Harry Jackson does his exceptional stuff of axe swinging and whip snapping with the aid of his son and daughter as trusting subjects. Vyrl Jackson demonstrates the talent that has earned him the reputation of being the world's horseshoe pitching champion. Much of the credit for this thrilling act must go to Mrs. Jackson who allows her husband among other stunts to hurl the iron shoes at a paper bag placed upon her pretty head and thus demonstrates for the ladies in the audience the acme of conjugal trust. Paul Sydell and his highly trained canines perform a set of tricks that will be the envy of all pooch owners who have the hardest time even getting their pets to sit up and beg. The entire composition, excitingly edited and breezily presented by the exuberant Mr. Smith, is first rate film fare for any audience. Running time, nine minutes.

Dick Tracy

Action Serial

An action-packed serial, the subject gives promise in the first two chapters of being one of the best bets in its sphere of entertainment in recent years. Produced by Nat Levine, the story is based on the widely popular cartoon strip of the same name. Deviating from the original in a few details, with Tracy a G-man instead of a metropolitan cop, it retains the episodic flavor of the cartoon with something added. The two initial chapters have such interest arousing scenes as the attempted destruction of San Francisco's new Bay bridge by employing sound waves, the introduction in a mysterious and dramatic fashion of the Lame One, sinister character and the brains behind the spider gang, and Tracy's escape from the power plant hideout of the gang. Ralph Byrd as Dick Tracy is likeable and quick of action. Others in the cast are Kay Hughes, Smiley Burnette, Lee Van Atta, John Picorri, Carleton Young, Fred Hamilton and Frances X. Bushman. Direction is by Ray Taylor and Alan James. Running time, 15 chapters of approximately 20 minutes each.

Community Sing, No. 1

Words and Music

The first of a new series, this subject takes its cue from the radio program of the same name. With Wendell Hall leading and with the lyrics superimposed on the film, the audience is invited to join in the singing. Billy Jones and Ernie Hare do a song, as does little Jolly, the 10-year-old singing star. The songs are all of the type particularly suited to group singing. Andy Sanella and his orchestra do the playing. Running time, 10 minutes.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 6

(Paramount)

Informative

Items included in this latest edition of the Paramount Pictorial group are carefully selected and interestingly presented. Factors of entertainment value number some fine shots of a mountain lion cornered up a tree, eye-filling colored shots of twilight shadows falling over land and sea, and an expert demonstration of the fine art of skiing by that past master of the sport, Hans Schneider. Alois Havrilla, David Ross and Stan Lomax lend their radio-educated vocal chords for narrative purposes. Running time, 10 minutes.

Screen Snapshots No. 5

Of Interest

In this number of the "Snapshots" series, always of interest, are shots from the movie fathers-and-sons barbecue, which was held on a ranch on the outskirts of Hollywood. The dedication of the new Del Mar fair grounds has Bing Crosby, its sponsor, and Governor Merriam officiating. Fredric March receives a giant postcard, which contains the signatures of all the citizenry of Racine, Wisconsin. At the Domino Club a party is held to entertain former screen favorites, and Anita Stewart is shown getting material for her photographic album. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Paneless Window Washer

(Paramount)

Popeye Routine

Adopting a new profession that will do justice to his by now fabled prowess, Popeye, the ever popular proponent of the spinach diet, this time is a window washer, and what kind of window washer he is will serve as material for many a chuckle and hearty guffaw. Competition is offered our hero in the rugged and equally determined form of a rival window cleaner. The contest wherein the two boys alternately perform their special cleaning tricks and pummel each other from floor to floor is comic business in the best Popeye tradition. Of course, the moral support of the faithful Olive Oyl and the more important aid of Popeye's favorite vegetable dish clinch the argument for him. Running time, seven minutes.

Gold-Quest of the Ages

Interesting

This subject presents in an entertaining manner some of the highlights of mankind's quest for gold. Done in color, the subject opens with a meeting of Marie Antoinette and Cardinal Rouan with a Dr. Caliastro, alchemist, who fraudulently claimed a way of making gold by chemical means. The doctor convinced his visitors of his magic and they saw in it a short cut to end the state of bankruptcy existing in France, but subsequent tests proved the method false. When gold was discovered in California cities sprang up over night. The camera roams around one or two of these former cities, now ghost towns, whose populace rapidly dwindled when the gold petered out. Other aspects of gold, mining, smelting also are shown. Narration is by Robert Sherwood. Running time, 10 minutes.

Torture Money

(MGM)

Gripping

Packing the dramatic punch of a full sized feature into its twenty minutes of running time, this subject presents a gripping and rapidly paced expose of the accident racket to fleece insurance companies. A young reporter works his way into the confidence of the racketeers. Selected as the next victim for the "accident," the investigator is forced to undergo the experience of being beaten and bruised to make the frameup seem real. He is still able to tip off the police. The whole tale is vividly told; the grim atmosphere of the plottings excellently produced. The brutal subject matter does not make the short entirely satisfactory material for the Junior Matinee. Running time, 20 minutes.

In Old Wyoming

(Paramount)

Song Presentation

Presenting the scenic background that inspired the song of the title, this collection of expertly photographed and colored shots of wild and beautiful western country is a subject that will improve any program. Pictorial effects of animal life in striking natural setting, glimpses of wide mountain ranges and expansive sky, picturesque cowboys in the saddle herding steers and horses or sitting around camp fires singing their songs of the hills, are combined into a pleasing bit of arresting visual entertainment. The one slight drawback is the overdone treatment of the song's refrain by an orchestra and male chorus. Robert C. Bruce is responsible for the unusually fine camera and coloring work. Running time, nine minutes.

—banishes the last of the 3 Bugaboos of Evaporative Washed Air Cooling Systems

Uneven Air Distribution. In 1926, Kooler-Aire Engineering conquered this "bugaboo" with the patented Kooler-Aire Dual Deflector which solved the problem of proper and even distribution of the cooled air throughout the theatre.

Cooler Day Fluctuations. In 1936, the "bugaboo" of air "dumping" on cooler days when the cooling system is cut down to reduced volume was eliminated by the Kooler-Aire Equalizer. This tested control device automatically maintains correct air velocity with reduced air volume, thus avoiding drafts, cold spots and hot dead air pockets.

Muggy Days. Now . . . this last "bugaboo" of how to maintain a pleasant cooling effect on muggy days has been conquered by the New Kooler-Aire Atmospheric Balancer. Most hot days are low humidity (dry) days when Kooler-Aire gives excellent cooling results. But there are a few hot "muggy" days each season when increased air motion is desirable. It is on such days that the Kooler-Aire Atmospheric Balancer goes into operation automatically, increasing the air motion in the breathing zone and thus maintaining a normal cooling effect.

Only Kooler-Aire gives you these advantages

With the complete automatic control of conditioned air provided by the Kooler-Aire Dual Deflector, Equalizer and Atmospheric Balancer, Kooler-Aire now gives perfected results never before possible with any evaporative washed air system.

The Kooler-Aire reputation is built on the satisfaction of thousands of users who know that it is a safe, healthful, efficient system, low in first cost and very low in operating costs.

You can't afford to install any air conditioning system . . . or to be satisfied with the results you are now getting from your present installation . . . until you know all about these latest KOOLER-AIRE achievements. Mail the coupon today, for the Kooler-Aire book of Air-conditioning facts.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 57

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 57 was: (A) Manufacturers of, and dealers in, spherical, parabolic and eliptical mirrors such as are used in connection with certain types of projection light source state their focal lengths. Have such mirrors any exact focal length? Explain. (B) Does current generated in a dynamo or a battery seek earth? Explain. (C) Define "short circuit" and "ground."

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; C. L. Loft; J. R. Prater; L. Cimikoski; H. Edwards; H. B. Smith; A. L. Cooper; T. F. Bochert; W. E. Edmonds; G. E. Doe; O. H. Felt; H. Todd and L. B. Masters; W. L. Bancroft and S. D. Manning; L. Stanford; T. S. Lorinbaugh.

Section A is replied to as follows by A. L. Cooper: "Spherical mirrors do not have a definite focal length for all light rays reflected therefrom. Parabolic and elliptical mirrors are in reality spherical mirrors partially corrected by tilting their outer edges back sufficiently to cause light rays reflected from these zones to focus approximately at the same place rays reflected from the more central zones focus. The amount of departure from the true spherical curve denotes the type of mirror it is. In the face of these recognized facts, I would say parabolic and elliptical mirrors do have a definite focal length, but that the spherical mirror does not."

G. E. Doe says, "The true spherical mirror can have a definite, fixed focal length only when the light incident thereon emanates from a theoretical point, which is of course an impossible condition. This is true because in the very nature of things, for all to focus at one point (which is necessary if the mirror is to have a definite, fixed focal length) all rays incident thereon and reflected from such surface must reach the mirror surface at an angle that will cause them to all reach exactly the same point of focus, and this cannot possibly be done if the light source have area. I say, therefore, that spherical mirrors working with a projector light source cannot possibly have any one, fixed focal length. Instead, in practical projection work, rays from different diametrical zones will be focused at different distances from the mirror surface.

"Elliptical and parabolic mirrors are surfaces in which a more or less effective attempt is made to correct the condition above named by departing from the true spherical curve at the outer zones of mirrors. This attempt is broadly effective, but hardly enough to justify statements that such of them as are designed for use in projection work have a fixed, true focal length. I have small doubt that mirrors could be and perhaps are thus treated so effectively that all rays are focused at the same point, thus providing them with true focal length, but I also am quite certain that such correction would be very much too expensive to justify its use in forming the mirrors used in projection work."

D. Danielson says, "Manufacturers mention the focal length of mirrors such as those under discussion, said measurement being the distance from the vertex of the mirror to the point where parallel rays incident on the mirror surfaces should be brought to a point of focus. However, spherical aberration, present in all spherical surface reflection surfaces, will cause rays reflected by the more outer zones to be focused progressively nearer the vertex as the distance from the mirror axis of the point of reflection increases, which of course makes it impossible to name any one point as the focal length of the mirror.

"However, in parabolic and elliptical mirrors, (particularly the latter), this fault is in considerable measure overcome, permitting the point to be spotted where parallel rays incident upon the mirror will be brought to a focus. However, if the object (light source in our case) be placed at the point required to cause reflected rays to be parallel, still they will not be thus reflected for the reason that the object (light source) has area, hence rays from its various points of surface will meet points on the mirror surface at different angles. The focal length of such mirrors is therefore not exact and cannot be except with a point light source."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 63

(A) What is the duty of projectionists when a shipment of film arrives from the exchange?

(B) What reports should be made if film is found to be oil smeared, excessively dirty or in poor mechanical condition?

(C) In event an exchange refuses to heed complaints of film in poor condition, what steps should be taken?

(B) E. H. Toedte says, "Current generated in a dynamo or a battery has no tendency to enter the earth except when the earth provides a path to opposite polarity of the same power source of sufficiently low resistance to permit current to flow."

C. Lonie answers, "Current generated in a dynamo or a battery does not seek the earth except when the earth is connected with and offers a sufficiently low conductance path between positive and negative of the same dynamo or battery."

(C) P. and L. Felt reply, "A dead short is a direct connection between conductors of opposite polarities of the same power source. A short circuit may be a connection between conductors of opposite polarities of the same power source having sufficiently low resistance to permit heavy flow of current. It is ordinarily an accidental or unintended connection that permits current to flow in large quantities without doing any useful work, and possibly much harm, aside from the waste it represents."

"A ground, as usually considered, is in the nature of a limited short circuit. It is a short circuit of such high resistance that only a limited amount of current may flow. Or it may be an intentional connection of one conductor of a system with the earth for certain purposes. Grounding of the Edison three-wire system neutral offers an illustrative example."

Comments Further On Vacuum Tubes

J. R. Prater writes in to discuss vacuum tubes concerning points raised in Question No. 52. He says, "Brother Oldham has excellent understanding of many items in the matter of vacuum tubes, but he experiences trouble in joining them together properly. Quoting from his answer to the above named question: 'In a vacuum tube there are three elements, mounted close to and facing each other. As the lead-in wire, tube prongs and socket prongs are all close together, some capacitance exists between them, they all being at different potentials.'

TICKET REGISTERS PREVENT LOSSES

Cowdin Returns, Explains "U's" Financial State

Completing a survey of film conditions throughout Europe, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal Pictures Company, declared Monday on his return to New York that in all 11 countries he visited in the last two months the motion picture industry was making rapid strides as the result of better pictures and improved business and political conditions.

Mr. Cowdin's return brought the annual announcement of financial operations as made public for stockholders. The company reported a net loss of $1,835,419 for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1936, after giving effect to wholesale write-offs. Joining Mr. Cowdin in the financial statement was R. H. Cochrane, Universal's president.

Sees Increased Demand

"With the return of normal economic conditions I see an increased demand for American films on the continent," Mr. Cowdin said. "The 'New Universal' films are meeting with high favor in all European countries, including England, and the foreign market looms as a big factor in the future development of 'New Universal.'

"'Three Smart Girls' and 'My Man Godfrey' are proving tremendous successes abroad. 'Three Smart Girls' opened last week in Vienna's leading theatre to one of the most enthusiastic receptions ever accorded an American film," he said, adding: "'Show Boat' has just opened in London and is doing a tremendous business.

"Our associates in England, General Films Distribution Ltd., are making great strides in the development of their own films and theatre outlets."

While in Paris Mr. Cowdin discussed the film business with President Albert Lebrun of France. President Lebrun was a close friend of Mr. Cowdin's uncle, the late Robert Bacon, former American Ambassador to France.

Mr. Cowdin added a new star to the roster of 'New Universal' while abroad, completing negotiations for the services of Danielle Darrieux, Parisian comedy and dramatic star.

Mlle. Darrieux is the wife of the French writer, M. Decoin.

Confers with Soviet Leaders

The "movies" are a very popular institution in Russia and the Soviet film industry is moving forward Mr. Cowdin found during his stay in Moscow as the guest of the American Ambassador, Joseph Davies. Mr. Cowdin conferred with Soviet Minister of Films Schumiatsky and also talked with Marshal Vorishilov, commander of Russia's military forces and ranking next to Stalin.

Mr. Cowdin visited England, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Germany, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Russia.

Financial Statement

The financial statement accompanying the earnings report explained that Universal's $1,835,419 net loss in 1936, which includes all subsidiaries, is after providing for all charges, including depreciation and amortization of fixed assets amounting to $392,850. The report also includes write-off of the company's entire investment in its Spanish subsidiary, a write-down of its investment in its German subsidiary and a provision for the prospective cancellation of a German theatre lease, all of which aggregated $292,369. Included, however, is a deduction of a profit of $333,534 realized on the sale of a British subsidiary to the C. M. Woolf interests in connection with Universal's new distribution arrangements in Great Britain.

The letter to the stockholders explained that the report also reflects the adoption of a new practice of closing the accounts of foreign subsidiaries, other than Canadian, one or two fiscal months earlier than the New York closing date in order to make possible earlier reports to stockholders than heretofore. Inasmuch as the new accounting policy was adopted during the fiscal year reported on, the letter points out, the current report reflects the operations of foreign subsidiaries for only 10 or 11 months, whereas subsequent annual reports will cover a full year's operations of such subsidiaries. The combined loss of the foreign subsidiaries would have been approximately $175,000 less had their reports covered the full 52-week period, the letters adds.

Credit Strengthened

Pointing out that control of the company changed during the year, the letter said that the company's credit has been strengthened, an even flow of pictures is assured and the new management is confident that the company has been enabled "to participate to a greater degree in the improved earnings of the motion picture industry."

The letter also states that consideration is being given to a merger of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and Universal Corporation. The latter holds all of the second preferred and 90 per cent of the common stock of Universal Pictures.

The company's profit and loss statement shows income from film rentals and sales of companies operating in the United States amounting to $14,264,466. Sales of accessories aggregated $375,844. Amortization of film costs and other expenses totaled $11,716,572, leaving a gross profit of $2,944,742. Sales and distribution costs amounted to $3,393,151, and general and administrative expenses were $907,829. Loss before write-downs of investments in certain foreign subsidiaries and provision for losses of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories was $1,394,615.

Operating deficit on Nov. 2, 1935, amounted to $699,719, which with the loss for the 52 weeks ended Oct. 31, 1936, left a consolidated operating deficit of $2,535,139, as of that date. The report lists total current and working assets of $7,985,836, and total current liabilities of $3,486,090.

In Hollywood, Universal has combined its serial and action picture departments because of the addition of four action films to the current schedule. The new unit will be known as the action-melodrama department.

The first picture under the new arrangement will be "West Coast Limited." Ben Koenig and Henry MacRae will produce with Koenig and Barney Sarecky handling the production reins on the second, "Night Patrol."

NewsCameramen's Work Restricted

International Photographers' Union, Local 644, has warned its members that a stipulation in the union agreement prohibiting the assignment of newsreel cameramen to work on production of short subjects will be strictly enforced, according to Charles W. Downs, business manager of the local. Violations will be punished by a fine of $500.

The announcement followed complaints that several producers have been assigning newsreel men to take shots for topical short subjects, a practice which the union believes encroaches on work which should be handled by other cameramen.

Mr. Downs denied that the ruling will prevent the use of newsreel library shots in feature or short subject productions.

Bluebook School Member Writes on Vacuum Tubes

vacuum tube. Some have but two, others four or five—even more. Brother Oldham apparently considers the lead-in wire, tube prongs and socket prongs as three elements of a vacuum tube, whereas the elements of a tube are the electrodes inside the tube. They determine the kind of work the tube may perform and exactly how the work is accomplished. In the three-element tube they are the anode, the cathode and the control grid.

"All tubes, regardless of type, have lead-in wires; also, nearly all tubes have prongs. But those parts are not classed as elements of the tube, as is suggested by Brother Oldham. The socket prongs are not part of the tubes, but of the amplifier chassis. It is quite true that the lead-in wires, tube prongs and socket prongs are mounted close to and facing each other; that they are at different potentials and that capacitance exists between them. However, this latter is so very slight, as compared with that existing between the electrodes within the tube, that it is almost wholly negligible.

"While this may be quite true in the radio frequency and detector stages of radio receivers, amplifiers employed in theatre sound work have no connection with radio frequency currents. Knowledge of the principles of radio, particularly as concerns the very short wave bands, would be helpful to projectionists when or if television enters the theatre field, but as matters now stand, sound pictures and radio broadcasting are entirely and wholly separate, even though audio-frequency is used with both.

"Referring to feed-back, Brother Oldham says, 'Where part of a signal that has been amplified by the last tube is fed back to the tubes that have already amplified the same signal . . .' The feed-back due to the grid-plate capacitance takes place inside the tube, rather than from one tube to another. It is possible to cause feed-back in an entire amplifier by permitting the output and input to be placed too close to each other. Such feed-back, however, is due to transfer of current from one wire to the other by induction, rather than by inter-electrode capacitance in vacuum tubes.

"Lastly, Brother Oldham says, 'Therefore, during each signal impulse the tube is in a slight state of oscillation, hence acting as a generator or oscillator.' During each signal impulse there is a small amount of feed-back, in a three-element tube when operating at normal volume. At higher volumes it may be sufficient to distort the sound output of the tube by causing some frequencies to be amplified more than others. However, it is not until excessive load is imposed upon the tube and feed-back becomes sufficiently strong to overpower the normal grid fluctuations, or signal impulses, that oscillation takes place.

"When feed-back causes one frequency to be amplified more than any other, the feed-back then becomes even stronger at that same frequency, and amplification at that frequency is thus automatically increased. If the tube be operating at high volume [As it must be to set up the condition described.—F. H. R.], feed-back may thus increase the amplification of one frequency so far above that of any other that a continuous howl or whistle will result. Once a tube is in a state of oscillation, the feed-back supplies a strong a. c. ripple to the grid circuit, and the plate current of the tube will continue to fluctuate at one frequency as long as the power supply remains on, regardless of the signal impulses normally applied to the grid circuit, or even if there be no further input signals. Thus it is seen that as soon as a tube reaches a state of oscillation, it no longer acts as a regular amplifier, but only as a generator of one, single frequency."

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT • A Victor Schertzinger Prodn. Written and directed by the man who gave you "One Night of Love"

THE THOUSAND DOLLAR BILL • A Zion Myers Production. . . . Based on the Cosmopolitan magazine story of the same title.

DYNAMITE, starring James Cagney • Based on the story "Hot Oil". Produced by Richard A. Rowland. The red-headed dynamo of the screen in another great Cagney entertainment. Different—thrilling—timely.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED: Mary Astor, Melvyn Douglas—Played this double feature on Friday-Saturday. Got by very well.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Rosalind Russell, John Boles—A fine picture of its kind, but not much drawing power. —M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Rosalind Russell, John Boles—This has proved one of the most talked of pictures we have played in a year or more. The women liked it, of course, and even the men acknowledged it was good.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Rosalind Russell, John Boles—Very good picture. Nothing big, but good program picture. —C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams—Fine picture. Holt well liked here. Keep giving him good material, Columbia. Williams also very good in this.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry—Although a lot of people didn't like the ending to this, it is one of the best pictures Holt ever has made.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

LADY FROM NOWHERE: Mary Astor, Charles Quigley—Good programmer. Running time, 60 minutes. —W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MAN WHO LIVED TWICE, THE: Ralph Bellamy, Isabel Jewell—A very small crowd saw this as we played it while everyone was still talking and thinking about the Ohio River flood. But we had a number of compliments on it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—The best Sunday matinee we've had since last fall. All praised the picture. Columbia is coming to the front with good features for our folks.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—A very pleasing picture that held up better than average. Seemed to please. Personally didn't care for it, but the cash customers said it was good. —C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

RIO GRANDE RANGER: Bob Allen, Iris Meredith —Better than average western, but Bob should be given some other type story for a change. This is his fourth picture in a Ranger role, and each one had the word Ranger in the title. Played January 30. —C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala, Small town and CCC patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—Did a good Christmas business on this one. Irene Dunne well liked and Melvyn Douglas great.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvin Douglas—One of the sweetest pieces of entertainment you have run. Promise them plenty and you won't disappoint them. Step on it hard. Equal to "It Happened One Night." Plug it hard. It's good. Played January 27.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—Columbia rings the gong again. Easily on a par with "Mr. Deeds" and ranks with any romantic comedy this year or any year. We had people come to see it twice. Play it by all means and save a date in the future to repeat run. It's 100 per cent. Played February 5-6.—Ted Stump, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

TWO FISTED GENTLEMAN: James Dunn, June Clayworth—Went over fine on Bargain Night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Rockefeller Center, New York

First National

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—The best "Gold Diggers" yet. A good picture from Warner Brothers.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

GUNS OF PECOS: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—Wish they would let Dick sing some wellknown cowboy songs and sing more in his pictures. This is good, but people like to hear him sing.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

LAW IN HER HANDS, THE: Glenda Farrell, Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull—A fair program picture that was not appreciated by our audience at all. The story is too typically American to be interesting for local cinema-goers. Besides, too much dialogue is also no good for us. Business below average. Played December 23-24.—G. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Lewis Stone—Return engagement. Still a swell show.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Foran is coming to be popular with our western fans. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Howard B. Lee, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Plenty good. Not as good as "The Thin Man," however. Played February 7-8.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart —Here is one picture worth every cent we paid for it. Good draw and the type of entertainment our people like. Would have done above average business if the weather had been open. Running time, 105 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor—All but one came to see Robert Taylor, one to see Greta Garbo. If Greta Garbo had died in the first reel instead of the last one and left Robert Taylor for our patrons to look at, all would have been well. Paid film rental.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore—Miss Garbo has come a long way from her first efforts. I think that is the third "Camille" that I have run, and it is my opinion that Miss Garbo is the best of them. She rises to the heights in this picture. And I thought it would only appeal to the older generation, but that was not true. Since it was run last, there has come up another that has never seen the picture of the stage success of other years. It has been produced with restraint and finesse.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Van Dyke has again turned out a picture that gets under the skin. Pulled slightly better than we anticipated and pleased decidedly well.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—I'm afraid Robert Taylor is slipping. This picture didn't do near the business we expected. It looks like he's just a flash in the pan if something isn't done.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—This is one outstanding picture that is entertaining from beginning to end. Some liked it better than "The Great Ziegfeld." Cold weather stopped the people from seeing this one. Book it on any day and you can't go wrong.—Pierce C. O'Donnell, Gayety Theatre, Van Buren, Maine. Small town patronage.

LIBELED LADY: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—Very, very good one you can step on. Comedy, romance. Extra good. Held up good.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford —Just another one of those pictures with good stars that people don't come to see. No drawing power here and not many favorable comments on the picture.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable —Dandy picture which did not do the business it was entitled to do at the price paid for it. Certainly there was something doing from the moment the show started until the end. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MISTER CINDERELLA: Jack Haley, Betty Furness—Very good program picture which seemed to please the majority. Certainly was a goofy plot. Well presented. Running time, 76 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MISTER CINDERELLA: Jack Haley, Betty Furness—Pretty poor stuff. Our patrons were disgusted with it and said so. Worth no more than a two-reel comedy. Played February 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OUR RELATIONS: Laurel and Hardy—About average for this team. Will satisfy most of their fans. Played February 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SINNER TAKE ALL: Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay—Entertaining programmer. Running time, 77 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SUZY: Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone, Cary Grant—An excellent program picture. Pleased all those that saw it. Attendance was poor on account of blocked roads and severe weather. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 29-30.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SUZY: Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone, Cary Grant—A picture that has everything; good story, fine acting, strong cast for the marquee. For our mixed Chinese and European patronage just the kind of a picture-mystery, espionage, murders, war scenes, airplanes fighting, love drama—all very skillfully blended in a swift-moving melodrama. Business good. Played November 29-December 1.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Believe this was thoroughly enjoyed by a little better than average attendance. Women did not think they would care for it were quite profuse in their praise. We thought it a very fine picture. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—On a par with the previous Tarzan pictures, but for business which, except for the children, was off considerably. Weissmuller and O'Sullivan make a good showing again in this one. Played February 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THREE WISE GUYS: Robert Young, Betty Furness—Fine program.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GB Pictures

MAN WHO LIVED AGAIN: Boris Karloff, Anna Lee—A great disappointment in Karloff; not like his others. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 10-11.—Howard B. Lee, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

RHODES: Walter Huston, Oscar Homolka—Fair picture; no draw. GB Pictures won't draw for me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RHODES: Walter Huston—Played this on a double bill, but after seeing it, sure it could have stood alone. One British picture we enjoyed playing. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THIRTY NINE STEPS, THE: Robert Donat, Madeleine Carroll—Not so good for me. Donat is not liked here.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ARIZONA MAHONEY: Joe Cook, Larry Crabbe—Too flimsy material to make a feature. Really only about enough story for a two-reel comedy and folks don't care for Joe Cook. Not what the name Zane Grey has stood for in times past. Played February 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen—Just good entertainment. No special interest as to story, but pep plus, and good clean fun. Nothing big, but good.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Good programmer gunman type. Running time, 77 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye—The members of the cast in this picture should constitute one of the best comedy attractions in the business. Every laugh in this one was an effort and unless the next attempt is better, the value of these players will be doubtful. Business the first day good; second day just too bad. This feature has about one-fourth the entertainment worth of "The Big Broadcast." Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 3-4.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Above average picture that will entertain. Nonsensical plot but full of fun. Only a fair draw for us, however. Played February 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper. Madeleine Carroll, Akim Tamiroff—After reading the reviews on this was doubtful as to its success at the box office. Not only did it pull them in, but it pleased and the comments were highly favorable. Of the players, Tamiroff seemed to be about the whole show with our patrons. Business above average. Running time, 98 minutes. Played February 3-4.—M. R. Harrington. Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—Very good for Mae West.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Martha Raye—Very good. People are watching for Martha Raye.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY SERIES: William Boyd—The most popular of westerns here now. This is a good Saturday night western town and we use double features, which makes more money usually than any other program we can put on. People still go for Gene Autry.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—Paramount forgot to mind their own business when they offered this one. The poorest picture on two Paramount contracts. Alice Brady not liked here. Played this one with "Arizona Mahoney" on double bill. "Arizona Mahoney" proved to be their poorest western. Altogether a poor program.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—Very entertaining program picture. Running time, 76 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronge.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—Very, very good. Lots of good, clean comedy. Don't be afraid to play it on any spot.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

ROSE BOWL: Eleanore Whitney, Tom Brown—Very good. —M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George, Arline Judge—Excellent dramatic entertainment, well played by a nice cast. Unfortunately, lack of cast name strength or something kept most of our seats hungry. Played February 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Puritan

BULLDOG COURAGE: Tim McCoy. Lois January—Good western.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Republic

LAWLESS LAND: Johnny Mack Brown, Louise Stanley—While we suspect that this was meant to be a serious western it actually is an excellent comedy. When the heroine gently slapped the hero upon his manly cheek and said "Get out" it brought down the house. The direction is terrible. You can almost hear the director say, "Here's where you smile and here's where you raise your right hand." Might get by in some spots but out here in the wild and wooly west our cowboy patrons are pretty particular. Incidentally, the "gal" in the picture is exceptionally good looking. Running time, 54 minutes. Played February 10-11.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

LEAVENWORTH CASE, THE: Donald Cook, Norman Foster, Erin O'Brien-Moore—Nothing extra.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

OREGON TRAIL, THE: John Wayne, Ann Rutherford—A historic western with good simple comedy. It did very good at the box office both days. Running time, 6 reels. Played February 12-13.—C. F. Deane, Lorado Theatre, Lorado, W. Va. Mining town patronage.

THOUSAND DOLLARS A MINUTE, A: Roger Pryor, Leila Hyams, Edgar Kennedy—Fine program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Lucile Browne—Good western.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BRIDE WALKS OUT, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond, Robert Young—Good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien, Heather Angel—Thank fortune we country exhibitors get a good break once in a while. This proved one for us. It did the biggest single day's business we ever had and all reports were favorable.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL: Fred Stone, Jean Parker—An average program which we double-billed to satisfied customers. Fred Stone isn't Will Rogers as they would like him to be.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GRAND JURY: Fred Stone, Louise Latimer—Fair program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson—Good. Played second time.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson—This western pleased 100%. It was a departure from the regular wild ridin', wild shootin' westerns. For once Hoot Gibson got a chance to act out a story suited for his age. Our patrons liked it immensely. Give us some more like it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 15-16.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

M'LISS: Anne Shirley, John Beal—A good picture, but did not draw film rental the second night. An attractive title would have helped. Played February 9-10.—C. F. Deane, Lorado Theatre, Lorado, W. Va. Mining town patronage.

PLOT THICKENS, THE: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts—Entertaining comedy drama with James and Zasu solving a murder mystery in clever manner. Played February 10-11.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

PLOUGH AND THE STARS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Not quite enough story to make it a box office draw. Acting very good. Ours is an Irish community and we had some criticisms of the class of people portrayed and the Dublin as shown in the movie. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 7-8.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—Very good. Little Bobby Breen is a wonderful singer. If RKO will continue and give him stories he will be box office.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—Good for any audience. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronge.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—A plenty good enough program offering which was far too short and ended just when it got going at its best. Did not attract the payees but pleased those who did turn out. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This picture had all that was claimed for it through its advertising. Pleased 100%. Astaire and Rogers very popular with our movie fans. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 22-23.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—I would rate this as the most interesting of this team's pictures. It did a little better at the box office than "Follow the Fleet."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

WANTED: JANE TURNER: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—Good programmer. Running time, 67 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—Good program gunman type. Running time, 77 minutes.—W. C. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WOMAN REBELS, A: Katharine Hepburn, Herbert Marshall—Probably okay for Hepburn fans; for others, will not draw or satisfy. Played February 12.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Supreme

BETWEEN MEN: Johnny Mack Brown, Beth Marion—Good western. Brown well liked.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Missisippi River shanty boat people prove most interesting screen fare. Everybody liked it. It had a good title and drew above average Sunday business. Several people came to see it twice. Some children saw it three times. Buddy Ebsen's singing and dancing as well as his and Barbara's dancing was extra good.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

CAREER WOMAN: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—If the careers of the Hollywood stars depended upon what this one did at the box office they would be on the WPA. It is a weak sister, based upon a down south murder, a girl accused of killing her father. Just another murder and killing. In the last three months we have played fourteen pictures that had killings or kadnapings in them and that is the old cycle working with vengeance. The public is getting fed up on the type.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CAREER WOMAN: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Another program affair which at best could only occupy second billing on a double feature program. Used as such it gave fair satisfaction. Running time, 77 minutes.—Played January 29-30.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage. ,

CAREER WOMAN: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen

"These pages from the hand of Martin Quigley have been set down with a characteristic modesty, but also with the very considerable authority of the man who first conceived the need and the growing necessity for the Production Code with which to-day the organized motion picture industry aligns, and seeks to align, its wares with American mores and the civilized standards of a wider world—the man, too, who brought the Code into being and put through its acceptance, against many obstacles."—— TERRY RAMSAYE, author of "A Million and One Nights."

Published by THE MACMILLAN COMPANY available at the QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York City

—Aside from an especially bad title and a slow start this makes for a reasonably good program picture. No breaks for the talented Miss Trevor as usual. Needs support at the box office. Played February 16. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CRACK-UP: Brian Donlevy, Helen Wood, Peter Lorre—Better than average program. International spy stuff mixed with plane crash in midocean with four men aboard, each antagonistic to the others. Peter Lorre, as the Colonel, gave an outstanding performance. Played February 12-13.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan, Astrid Allwyn, Robert Kent—Our patrons thought this a right nice picture and came in regardless of snow and snow blocked roads. Astrid Allwyn and Robert Kent gave good support. Fact that picture dated back to 1852 may have disappointed in some localities. No one commented on that here and many handed us hearty okehs. Played February 14-15.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple—A poor Shirley Temple, and poor attendance.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall—The new star is not liked here.—Seemoan-Seemoan. Pretty good story and good for Herbert Marshall.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: George Raft, Rosalind Russell, Leo Carrillo—A fair program picture to average business. Raft is miscast as an Italian immigrant and looks and talks as a 100% American from the very beginning of the story when he is supposed just to arrive from his country. Miss Russell is not giving a good performance that you would remember long. Carrillo is good as comedy support. The story is quite interesting, has lots of action and moves swiftly, the very thing we like here. Played December 2-3.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—The poorest picture yet. Bought as a special. When we mean poorest of all features you may know it's pretty poor and took in no money.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

LAUGHING AT TROUBLE: Jane Darwell, Lois Wilson—A simple tale for simple folk, a sort of a homespun yarn. Okay where you don't expect too much of it. No drawing power, however. Played February 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou—Double for long runs. Good picture. Needs help in tough spots. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PEPPER: Jane Withers, Irvin S. Cobb—Very full of pepper from start to finish. All liked it.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Fine picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—The people came in the first night early, like they wanted to get there. Bad weather and done a very good business two nights.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—The best Fox picture made. Played in bad weather to a small audience.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, June Lang—Everyone should see it. The best love and war picture made to date. Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 1-2.—Howard B. Lee, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor, Sally Eilers—Considerably revamped, especially in that part which deals with Sally Eilers, but still a great picture which did a fine business in spite of very bad weather. It certainly takes you to the Fair and you enjoy every minute of it. Played February 7-8.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young—Quite an improvement over the unfortunate "Dimples." Most of the folks seemed to think this was Shirley's best. It only goes to show the producers must not rely too heavily on their stars' popularity, forgetting stories and good supporting casts. A diamond is only as lovely as its setting and that goes for a movie star! Played February 7-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNDER YOUR SPELL: Lawrence Tibbett, Wendy Barrie—This rated fair at the box office and it seemed to be very well liked.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

WHITE FANG: Jean Muir, Michael Whalen—A fair program picture with enough action to satisfy our patrons. It is a Jack London story and is good. This picture if given bigger star names would be a very good B.O. As it is now, it is only good for average business on midweek days. Played December 30-31.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborood patronage.

United Artists

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton—This show was too good for two days. Excellent talent. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 8-9.—Howard B. Lee, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor, Paul Lukas—Now here is a picture that's different. Well acted all the way through and a powerful story that will keep 'em interested from beginning to end. It is doubtful, though, if the masses will appreciate this fine picture. We did average business on this one.—Pierce O'Connell, Gayety Theatre, Van Buren, Maine. Small town patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—No good for this spot. Never before have we played a picture and had so many walkouts and unfavorable comments and when I say unfavorable that's putting it mildly. Even those who were more favorably impressed tempered their praises with remarks indicating disapproval of the changes in the original story. All in all, in spite of the photographic beauty of the picture, playing it was all a sad mistake from every angle in this situation. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 7-9.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes—Very fine historic production with plenty of thrills and excitement. The characters were well portrayed. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LA VIE PARISIENNE: Neil Hamilton, Conchita Montenegro—Very poor. One of the worst British pictures I ever had the misfortune to show. Booked it for two days and had to pull it off in a hurry after the first night. Business terrible. Fellow members beware! Played December 11.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—Silent! Yes, it was silent as far as our patrons were concerned. The poorest picture we have shown the past three years. Charlie better wake up and do some talking or his exit will be permanent as far as our audiences are concerned. A complete flop at the box office. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 5-6.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino—Very fine program picture. This Lederer chap is excellent and he had grand support. The story was good and the comedy excellent. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII: Charles Laughton—Yes, we know it is terribly old but we picked it up in place of one we didn't want. It was all right and if we hadn't run into two nights of rain we might have broken even on it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

THINGS TO COME: Raymond Massey—A very impressive and interesting film based on the novel by H. G. Wells. Very good photography and acting, fair sound. Very interesting sets showing a city of the future and all the technical inventions that Wells' imagination could predict. The destruction of a city by an air raid could be a credit to any American super-production. But too little of romantic interest, no continuity in the story and absence of comical relief makes the picture too serious and diminishes its entertainment value. Good business during Xmas days. Played December 25-27.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

FLYING HOSTESS: Judith Barrett, Wm. Hall—Received many favorable comments on this. Would recommend it for any small town. It has everything with no regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward—Nice little program that will please.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS CROSSING: James Dunn, Jean Rogers—Interesting picture in strictly program class. Nothing to make it outstanding. Played February 13. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart—Too slow and too much dialogue and very little action for this country. A good star wasted on a poor and uninteresting story. If the distributors would import here less pictures of this kind, they would spare us and themselves a lot of headaches. Business bad. Played December 9-10.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

POSTAL INSPECTOR: Ricardo Cortez, Patricia Ellis—This is very good but was hard to follow. Made just a fair weekend attraction.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW: Frank Morgan, Binnie Barnes, Robert Taylor—A reissue that I did not play when first released. Good picture. No business. Taylor is good in this.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TWO IN A CROWD: Joel McCrea, Joan Bennett—Fair enough picture. Strikes about the average program quality. Played February 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Anita Louise, Claude Rains, Steffi Duna, Edmund Gwenn—From some of the reports I had read regarding this feature I was rather skeptical as to just how it would go here, but to my surprise it was received enthusiastically and many of the men stopped me and personally praised it, which very seldom happens here. The picture itself was excellent without a letdown throughout. Fredric March and Olivia de Havilland as co-stars were perfect in their roles, and the supporting cast of Steffi Duna, Anita Louise, Claude Rains and Edmund Gwenn gave stellar performances. All in all, this feature should be numbered amongst the first 10 of 1936 and Warner Brothers should be commended for bringing Hervey Allen's masterpiece to the screen. Running time, 138 minutes. Played February 12.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BENGAL TIGER, THE: Barton MacLane, June Travis—Swell programmer. Circus and animals. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. C. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—Best color in a feature to date. Will please majority if you can get them out. We did not get many outside our Saturday patrons. Lots of rough stuff which went over big with them. Make excellent Friday-Saturday show. Just because it's filmed in color does not bring them out. Stars are what count. Played February 10-11.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—Very fine color in this one and it packs a lot of action. Good outdoor picture that will hit with the average audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—Joe has always been a natural for small towns. This is no exception with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—The audience seemed to enjoy it. Thought it just average comedy.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight Theatre, Greensburg, Kan. General patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Average mystery picture, of which we are surely getting plenty these days. Obviously produced for the double bill market. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 9.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

BLOCKADE: This is a British quickie by an unknown producer with unknown players. The story and dialogue weak, sound bad, acting poor and photography terrible but business for two days of showing very good. This is a story of "Q Ships" that destroyed German submarines during the Great War. This kind of war pictures have immense appeal for Chinese and also all the local Army and Navy came to see it. Very good for any second run house in this country. Played December 4-5.—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

IN MY GONDOLA: Color Rhapsodies—A splendid cartoon, chock full of surprises and fun. The swordfish that turns into a saw got plenty laughs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 4: A good bit of visiting with the stars.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SLIPPERY SILKS: Three Stooges—A very funny comedy in the manner usual from its stars.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

FARMER AL FALFA IN THE HEALTH FARM: Paul Terry-Toons—Not a laugh in a carload.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KIKO FOILS THE FOX: Paul Terry-Toons—The usual dull cartoon. Nothing to make it entertainment. They ought to throw overboard all these Paul Terry characters and start in anew.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MIXED MAGIC: Buster Keaton—Good slapstick with Buster assistant to a magacian. Running time, two reels.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MIXED MAGIC: Buster Keaton—Not as funny as "The Chemist" but still good. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

PUDDY THE PUP IN SUNKEN TREASURE: Paul Terry-Toons—Good cartoon. Running time, six minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

SCREEN TEST, THE: Tom Patricola, Buster West —Good dancing, good comedy. These boys are all right. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

WHOSE BABY ARE YOU?: Bert Lahr—The best comedy from Educational so far this year.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHOSE BABY ARE YOU?: Two Reel Comedies—Just fair. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANNIE LAURIE: Ann Rutherford, Stanley Morner —A beautiful and well produced subject. Maybe not so good for so-called "mass" appeal but then there were no complaints. A classic.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BARNYARD BABIES: Happy Harmonies—Another Happy Harmony that was well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DANCING ON THE CEILING: Tabloid Musicals —A good musical offering.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DESERT DEATH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another in the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series, showing the clever workings of an insurance investigation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HURLING: Pete Smith Specialties—A knockout and how! Okay anywhere and your folks are in for some surprises as Pete describes this barbaric sport.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H General patronage.

LITTLE CHEESER: Harman-Ising—Good color cartoon which seemed to please. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE: Charley Chase—If you run Bank Night don't pass this one up. It deals with Bank Night all the way through and there's plenty of laughs to be had. Book it on the same night you run Bank Night and you'll never regret it. Running time, two reels.—Pierce C. O'Donnell, Gayety Theatre, Van Buren, Maine. Small town patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE ROME: Musical Comedies—The worst Metro short we've used in years. Their new conceptions of musicals are pretty much below par. Where are all the "Sunkist Stars at Palm Springs," the "Pirate Party on Catalina" and the "Fiesta de Santa Barbara." Those were the kind of musicals that the folks like. These new ones are terrible in comparison. Too bad.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OLD HOUSE, THE: Harman-Ising—Use this for your Halloween program next fall. It's a pippin. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre. Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

PAY AS YOU EXIT: Our Gang—A great little comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PINCH SINGER: Our Gang Comedies—A good debunking of amateur shows. Alfalfa set them wild with his many attempts to sing. Running time, 2 reels.—C. F. Deane, Lorado Theatre, Lorado, W. Va. Mining town patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLE: Buddy Rogers and his Band—Excellent color and good music, but few laughs. A short feature of beauty. Running time, 2 reels.—C. F. Deane, Lorado Theatre, Lorado, W. Va. Mining town patronage.

QUAINT QUEBEC: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A good travelogue in color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YELLOWSTONE PARK: FitzPatrick Travel Talks —Color good. Very entertaining. Running time, one reel.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

YELLOWSTONE PARK: FitzPatrick Travel Talks —Nicely photographed in color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

BRIDGE AHOY!: Popeye the Sailor—Up to the average of previous releases and as far as our patrons are concerned Popeye is always good. Running time, six minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GYPSY REVELS: Headliners—Despite the good Russian music played, the subject is so poorly handled that our folks didn't like it all. There's no pep to it and too many foreign verses are sung.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

I WANNA BE A LIFEGUARD: Popeye the Sailor —This stands out even in this unusually good series. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

LITTLE SWEE' PEA: Popeye the Sailor—One of the better Popeye efforts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEVER SHOULD HAVE TOLD YOU: Screen Songs—A fair screen song. Cartoon work not up to par. Nat Brandywynne's orchestra featured.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE, NO. 2: A novelty short in color which proved 'way above average. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SINBAD THE SAILOR: Popeye the Sailor—Worth playing. Received many favorable comments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WINGED CHAMPIONS: Grantland Rice Sportlights —Pelicans, sea gulls, ducks and other birds presented in a most entertaining way.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BOLD KING COLE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Poor cartoon. Terrifying for children; fantastic and uninteresting for adults.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

DUMMY ACHE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—This one kept the Saturday audience laughing. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

GRANDMA'S BUOYS: Smart Set Series—Not so hot. Patrons will probably sit through it to see if something will happen. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

GRANDMA'S BUOYS: Smart Set Comedies—Pretty fair comedy of the slapstick variety. Running time, 16 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker,. S. D. Small town patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND DASHING: Sports with Bill Corum Series—The pictorial content is all right but the commentator's remarks are insipid to say the least. This same holds true for every release of this series we have played to date. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LALAPALOOSA: Headliner Series—So seldom do we get a two-reel subject it prompts one to mention it. Here is one that is okay. Running time, two reels. —D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 5: Interesting.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARDON MY SPRAY: Sports with Bill Corum Series—These one-reel Sports Reels, Corum announcing, are interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TROLLEY AHOY: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—A good one featuring Toonerville folks.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHO'S LOONEY NOW?: Radio Flash Comedies —Good weekend comedy. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DOGGING IT AROUND THE WORLD: Adventures with the Newsreel Cameraman—Don't pass this one up. Your dog lovers will thank you for showing it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminance Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: We use two newsreel services, this and Universal. The latter is head and shoulders above the Fox Movietone News. Principal complaint is in the sameness of the makeup. And we could do without Lew Lehr's so-called humorous episodes. Running time, nine minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

ALASKA SWEEPSTAKES: Oswald Cartoons—New ideas in dog sled racing with Oswald and his pooch winning, of course. Extra good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. General patronage.

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS, NO. 32: Interesting subject. A bird sequence is odd and interesting.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MUSICAL AIRWAYS: Mentone Musical Comedies —Unimportant presentation of fair vodvil acts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T GET AWAY WITH IT: Special—A subject every theatre should run. Very interesting regardless of the fact that some parts have been shown before at different times. Running time, 2½ reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE McCOY AND HIS SUGAR BLUES ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A great "swing" band in a unique setting. Should pull the younger generation in if featured. Running time, 10 minutes. —J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison paronage.

Serials

Burroughs-Tarzan

NEW ADVENTURES OF TARZAN (Released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in China): Herman Brix—A very poor serial that the local MGM exchange forced me to play. I understand MGM bought this Tarzan picture to avoid competition for their coming "Tarzan Escapes." In that case they should shelve or burn this one, because releasing it under MGM's banner will only spoil business for their coming "Tarzan." Played it in two series—two days each series to average business. Only lower class of Chinese, some soldiers and all the riff-raff from the neighborhood came to see it; our regular patrons stayed away. This picture will satisfy people with mentality of a 10-year-old child. Played December 18-21—C. Goldin, Majestic Theatre, Hong Kong, China. Neighborhood patronage.

Actors, Musicians in WPA

Nearly 23,000 actors and musicians have been found among the 6,402,171 persons eligible for works progress administration relief, it was disclosed last week in Washington in a report by the Works Progress Administration and not by the Public Works Administration as inadvertently reported by MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Treasure Seeking Release

Treasure Pictures, producing company of Victor and Edward Halperin, is seeking a major release for its series of six Anna May Wong features. The stories from which the series is being adapted will first be published in Liberty Magazine.

Strong Is Producer

Eugene Strong has been named producer for "The Barrier" for Harry Sherman. Harry Knight, former supervisor, will be producer of two forthcoming Hopalong Cassidy films. The Sherman pictures are released through Paramount.

UNIVERSAL AND RKO HOLD SALES MEETINGS

United Artists and Republic Press Campaigns; Columbia British Convention March 13

The unusual sales activity that has marked the present selling season is continuing with the distributors making intensive efforts to increase their gains through the spring. Two-day sales conferences were held last week by Universal and RKO. Columbia, United Artists, Warner Brothers, Republic and Twentieth Century-Fox are engrossed in special drives, Paramount salesmen are busy with the Zukor Jubilee campaign, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is placing special emphasis on its releases.

Sales executives and district managers of Universal cancelled their holiday plans to start a two-day conference at the home office on Monday. Among those attending were James R. Grainger, general sales manager; E. T. Gomersall, western sales manager; Edward Bonns, short subjects sales manager; Sig Wittman, eastern distrist manager; Harry D. Graham, southern district manager; William J. Heineman, western district manager; A. J. Herman, New England district manager, and Clair Hague, Canadian general manager. Sales policies and plans were discussed at the conference.

Executives of the Universal studios in Hollywood were estimating the staff enlargement necessary to augment the current production program by the addition of 30 new features.

RKO Sales Leaders Meet

Eastern exchange officials and home office executives of RKO held a two-day sales gathering at the Hotel Astor, New York, last week. Ned E. Depinet and Nate Blumberg described the coming product and urged liquidation of all contracts so that the company would be ready to start on next season's product immediately after the convention to be held on the coast in June. John O'Connor, Ralph Roylan, Ed McEvoy and Cresson Smith also spoke. "Michael Strogoff" and "Sea Devils" were screened.

Jack Schlaifer, western division manager for United Artists, was touring the exchanges under his supervision in an effort to maintain the lead held by his division in the George Schaefer Drive. A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager in charge of the campaign, will announce the standings of the various divisions in the 14 weeks competition within the next two weeks.

The southern division was reported leading at the end of the fourth week of the Republic sales drive. The leaders in each division were: southern, Charlotte; eastern, Cleveland; central, Chicago; and western, San Francisco.

Grand National Budget Rises

Sol Edwards, eastern sales manager of Grand National, was on a tour of exchanges to confer with district managers and salesmen on the company's new product. He was to visit Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo and Albany. A production budget increase, the third for the season, was approved by Edward L. Alperson, president of the company, now in Hollywood for studio conferences.

The entire British sales organization, head office executives and department chiefs will attend the Columbia foreign convention in London on March 13th, according to Joseph Friedman, managing director for the company. "Lost Horizon" will be shown them.

General Organizes Field

With a production budget set at $1,850,000, General Pictures Corporation has announced that a national distribution organization has been formed to begin selling operations by June 30th. Franchises are now in operation on General's first picture, "Three Legionnaires." Max M. Kravetz, formerly with Fox West Coast theatres and Pickford-Lasky Corporations, has been acting as contact man with eastern investment groups and as assistant to Fenn Kimball, president.

Walt Disney has signed a contract with Technicolor for one year. The agreement, effective March 1st, calls for the production of 18 shorts and one feature.

A. & P. Suit Ended

Federal Judge Martin T. Manton in New York has discontinued the suit of Films of Commerce, Inc., for $16,760 against the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company. The action was for breach of contract which allegedly occurred on November 19, 1930, when the plaintiff produced a silent film as part of a series on commerce and industry for the defendant.

Allow O'Connor Claim

Federal Judge Martin T. Manton in New York has allowed Basil O'Connor, an attorney for Milton C. Weisman, receiver for Fox Theatres, the full amount of his claim for services which amounted to $10,043 covering the period from January 1 to December 31, 1936.

Boston Club Sets Board

Charity Ball Arranged

A motion picture charity ball, sponsored by the Motion Picture Salesmen's Club in Boston, will be held at the Hotel Bradford during the week of March 28, according to Herman Konnis of Universal, president.

New Garrison Quarters

Garrison Film Distributors, Inc., has leased office space at 1,600 Broadway in New York.

Jannings on Board

Emil Jannings, "State-Actor and Culture-Senator" of the Reich; Willi Forst, noted German director, and Counsellor of State Gustav Gruendgens have been nominated members of the board of administration of Tobis Tonbild-Syndikat Aktiengesellschaft in Berlin. The three will form a committee within the board which is to give advice to the management on the planning of films and their production.

Tobis has acquired entire control of its three distributing companies, Tobis Europa-Film A. G., Tobis Rota-Film A. G., and Syndikat-Film Gesellschaft m. b. H. and the responsibility for the establishment of production policies will be shifted from them to the parent company. Production units will be formed under the direct supervision of the parent company and there will be a central scenario department and casting office.

Sigmund Jung, former member of the board of administration and member of the Culture Senate of the Reich, and Fritz Mainz, former manager of Tobis Cinema-Film A. G., have been elected to the board of directors of the parent company.

Close Mexican Deal

Union Artists has closed a deal with Educational for the Mexican release rights of a group of the latter's short subjects including "Kiss the Bride," "Clever Critters," "The Seeing Eye" and "Animal Cunning," all of which have been super-imposed with Spanish dialogue titles and sound tracks.

Landis to Jam Handy

Cullen Landis, director and former star of silent pictures, has been appointed to the Detroit staff of directors of Jam Handy Picture Service, Inc. For the last five years Mr. Landis has been directing commercial pictures.

Protest Against Agents

Lewis Frey and Leslie Kriedberg of the Massachusetts Theatrical Agents' Protective Association in Boston have lodged a protest with the attorney general against unlicensed booking agents.

Grand National Representative

Alfred Crown has been appointed representative of Grand National in all Latin American countries. He will leave New York March 1 on a tour of his territories to contact exhibitors and to open exchanges.

Korson Buys Franchise

Mack D. Weinberger, General Pictures sales manager, has sold his company's franchise for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia to Louis N. Korson of Masterpiece Film Attractions.

Branch Manager Named

Lester Sucker, former salesman in the Columbia Cleveland office, has been renamed to that branch, this time as manager. He succeeds Holbrook Bissell, who resigned after six years.

Danubia Acquires Film

Danubia Pictures, Inc., in New York has acquired "Maria Novere," Hungarian feature, for release in America. The picture will be shown with English sub-titles.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

JUST DRESSED UP

It's a personal opinion, perhaps, but this pen does not overwhelmingly subscribe to the remark made recently at the lunch table that "you're in a new business with every change of program".

Statements that have no real basis for truth through reiteration ofttimes become accepted as such and the above is one that so qualifies. We disagree.

Showbusiness is an old business and in one shape or another known to historians from away, way back, even before the first finish fight between lion and man in the Roman arena. The old-time tribal medicine man, court magician and all the other hokus-pokus ballyhoo purveyors of antiquity can with good reason be termed the pioneers of showmanship, for they realized even then that folks want to be amused, entertained, thrilled, just as they do today.

One can say that showbusiness as we know it stems from the advent of P. T. Barnum, but P. T. just picked up where the old-timers left off by rubbing down the rough edges and further refining the process of bringing the folks up to the boxoffice. And Barnum worked with the same old tools to attract attention.

For further study on the subject, one need only turn the pages and regard the Easter and Spring campaigns arranged by representative theatremen in various parts. Much of interest may be found not because of any particular startling newness but because of the ingenious twists executed to freshen up the old reliables.

For instance, there is Dave Dallas' fashion show idea wherein the models will publicize coming attractions in addition to Easter clothes. There is Joe Kinsky's slant of taking the venerable amateur idea and tieing it in with motion picture movie scripts. There are also Dean Hyskell's suggestion for native wild flower exhibits, Harry Long's electrical display in the annual lobby garden show, Matt Saunders' atmospheric style revue in his spacious foyer, and of course Dick Wright's "old bonnet" contest.

Now, no one claims that these showmen have made any sudden discovery that confuses the fundamentals. The ideas they are executing have proved their worth time and again in attracting business. But they have taken the old-time snappers and polished them with ingenuity gathered, in most instances, from long experience.

The complete showman is a well-balanced combination of years of experience plus a vigorous mind keen enough to reach for current angles that most folks understand and that can be grafted on to the fundamentals found profitable by the earliest known miracle maker.

It's not a new business with every change or without. It's the same old business that showmen with savvy are smart enough to dress up in modern boxoffice finery.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

To Hollywood hunting about for story material to keep patrons on the edge of seats, for a flood yarn that packs a real boxoffice wallop, the following outline is offered:

Theatre manager in Southern city hit by rising waters throws open house for 2000 refugees, including infants and children. Phone service dead, manager broadcasts over local station to gather house crew. No food to be had for hungry mouths but theatreman digs up milk, coffee, sandwiches. Stage is transformed into hospital. Doctors working by lantern and flash light remove appendix, deliver baby. After 28 hours of struggle, rising waters make evacuation imperative. Transportation limited but showman arranges removal of refugees to high ground without disorder and then pitches in to salvage theatre equipment.

In all this time he is completely out of touch with his wife and children but, as anxious as he is about the safety of his family, stays right there to succor the thousands under his care.

There you have it, gentlemen. Action, drama, love, pathos, duty, sacrifice, danger, suspense, excitement—all the surefire ingredients of a hit picture and for further details interested studios are instructed to contact Harry Rice, United Artists exploiteer. Rice was on the scene and stopped off recently to tell the story of George Hunt, of Loew's Louisville Theatre, the manager referred to above.

We don't believe Hunt will have much to say about it. To him it probably was just another job to be done in a theatreman's day of work.

Dancing Girl in Window Ballys "Scotland"

A neat attention-getter was the stunt arranged for "Mary of Scotland" by J. Dunn, State Theatre, Wellington, New Zealand, when he planted pupils from local dancing school in window of store on main street, girls doing highland dancing to the tunes of a Scotch piper. Dunn reports the gag as a traffic stopper every time the girls appeared.

On opening night the local highland pipe band marched through the streets and wound up in front of theatre, where they played a brief concert (see photo).

Sound Screen Display Plugs "God's Country"

J. R. Rodgers of the Fox Theatre, Phoenix, used an effective and unusual lobby display in connection with "God's Country and the Woman" by rigging up a sound screen display consisting of a 35mm sound projector placed on the mezzanine and projected down on a large display screen. The sound horns were behind the screen and trailer for the picture was run continuously during peak hours attracting plenty of passersby.

Rodgers also sent out novelty cards to ballyhoo the film and made tieups with libraries and bookstores. One prominent photographer devoted his entire window to forest scenes with picture title and playdates.

Cracks Tough Sheet

Six-day serialization on "Beloved Enemy" planted by Manager Allan Sparrow, Loew's, Norfolk, Va., was said to be the first publicity of this kind used by the conservative Star, leading local sheet. Each installment carried ten-inch announcement and two-column cut. Allan is taking bows for breaking the ice in Norfolk, said to be very rough for newspaper tieups.

Official Welcome Given Mirrophonic System by Mayor

To retain the familiar theatre exploitation mediums and at the same time strike upon a different method of appeal to sell the installation of Mirrophonic sound equipment at the Indiana, Indiana Harbor, Mich., was the job done successfully by Manager Jack Albertson working with Rex Williams, who came over from the Hoosier, in Whiting, to lend a hand.

Their first efforts were concentrated on selling the new name and through a wide campaign in the city and drawing area. This was done by sound truck at carnivals and picnics, banners on stop-and-go traffic signs, bus cards, bumper strips, tire covers, programs, heralds, stickers and giant street nets (see photo). Guest tickets were also offered in an essay contest on why Mirrophonic gave perfect reproduction.

Mayor Starts New Equipment

Other exploitation was in keeping. A "Miss Mirrophonic" was selected and toured the city in a bannered Ford at the head of an auto parade, stopping off to visit stores. The winner was also interviewed on the radio and participated in the dedication ceremonies on the stage of the Indiana, where the Mayor pressed a button to start the new sound equipment. Miss Mirrophonic greeted patrons in the flower-banked lobby on opening night and distributed.

Newspapers cooperated heartily with page one breaks among which was featured a front page photo of Jack Albertson being congratulated at the theatre by leading merchants on the receipt of the new system. These merchants carried window displays and participated in a full page co-op day ahead, ad copy tying in with the sound equipment. In all the publicity every effort was made to evade the technical in copy and to explain the installation in simple terms. This was also done in talks from the stage calling attention to various spots in the picture "San Francisco" where the improvement could be readily noticed.

Foyer was decorated with Erpi displays, cutout letters above doors and lobby mirrors lettered. Same idea was executed for the lobby with announcement carried on marquee, special valance and attraction board. Williams writes the selling job was so complete that patrons pointed out actual scenes in the picture where they noted improvement.

Fish Benefit Aids 'Hunter' Campaign

The very active Fish and Game Association of Holmesburg, Pa., in the market for extra funds listened readily to the idea put forward by Manager Wm. C. Gallagher, of the Holme, in that spot, for a benefit tiein on his date for "White Hunter." In addition to the screen program an unusual stage entertainment was conceived, the entire thing labeled an annual sport exhibition by the association and theatre and sold as such to the members.

Top stage attraction was a prize dog show in which was included the difficult feat of having a bird dog pointing a pheasant under artificial conditions and Gallagher writes this was the second time the trick was accomplished on a theatre stage.

On theatre stationery and signed by the association president, letters were mailed to all the members detailing the schedule of entertainment with a strong buildup for the picture. Other organizations were contacted in the same manner, all of which brought in a high total of tickets sold in advance. Gallagher sold the event in all advertising, heralds and outside publicity.

For display, the state hatcheries were called upon to put in a live fish exhibit and the local association cooperated further by posting other theatre literature.

"Winterset" Lobby Display Created by Fishkin

From Louie Fishkin, Commodore Theatre, Brooklyn, comes accompanying photo of eye-arresting lobby display created for the "Winterset" engagement at that house. Fifteen-foot suspension bridge was constructed in front of black velvet board, compo board for sides with rope for cables plus tie wire.

Towers on both sides were painted in stone effect with interior lighting, figures from six-sheet were cut out and pasted on back and foreground with title letters, also cut from six-sheet. Louie borrowed traffic signal, toy automobiles, ferry boats, tramp steamer, lighthouse, pier, etc., from local toy store. River under the bridge was made from green crepe paper with white and blue strips and stones placed at the river bank to frame in the water scene completed the effect.

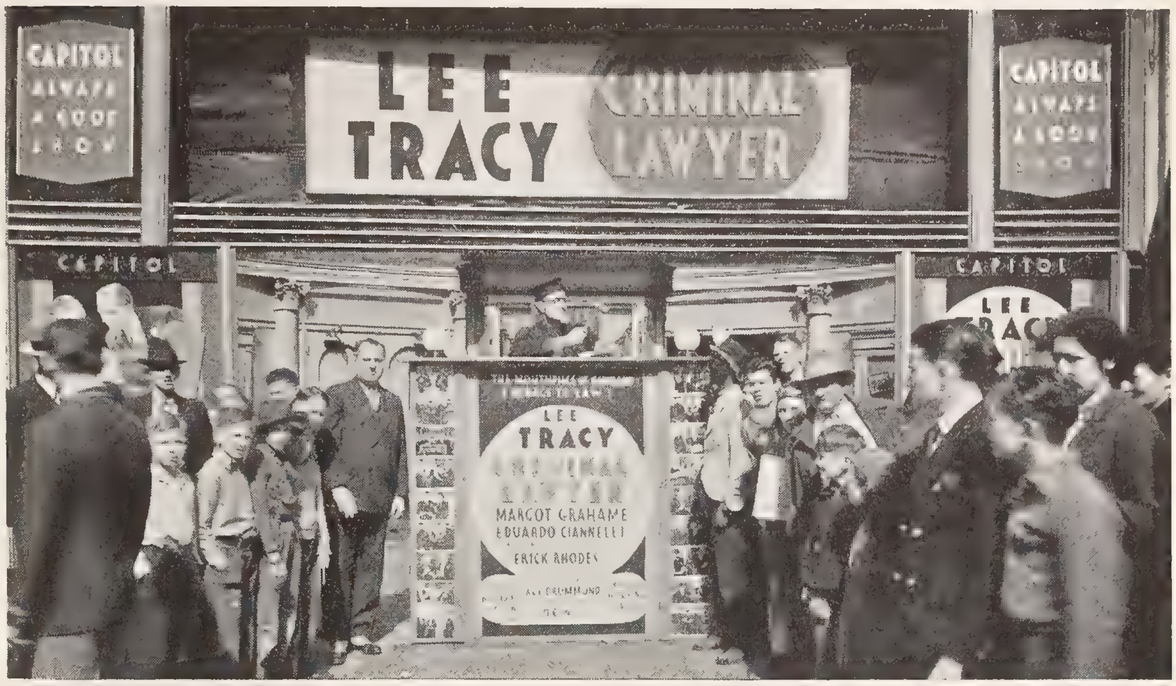
That Louie Charninsky of Dallas Now Becomes District Attorney



To the number of roles he has played in costume and otherwise to put over the various attractions at the Capitol, Dallas, Texas, Louie Charninsky now adds that of District Attorney in the spectacular bally put on out front on "Criminal Lawyer". The "judge" is planted up on the stand placed in front of the ticket window and is laying down the law for the "prisoner", the lad in blackface to the right. The Charninsky who is seen on the left next the judge's stand is playing his part even to the stern expression that all conscientious D.A.'s in action should carry. The "courtroom" seems to be well filled.

Pollock Gives Candy On Valentine's Day

Sentimental Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, couldn't let the gals of that city go by Valentine's Day without candy, so a contest was planted in the classified section of the Rochester Journal in connection with opening of "Women of Glamour."

Candy and guest tickets went to those correctly assembling the first letter of the first words of various ads until title was properly constructed. Ads containing correct letters had then to be clipped and pasted on sheet of paper for submission to contest editor. For newspaper ad, picture of large heart was used with Virginia Bruce's photo in center.

Halving a cut of James Cagney and printing each portion on different colored cards, Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Majestic Bridgeport, Conn., invited the folks to match up the two halves "perfectly" for tickets to see "Great Guy" on the house. Cards were distributed around town with care taken that too many did not match "perfectly."

On "Plough and Stars," Rosy mailed to members of K. of C., Hibernians, Better Films Council, etc., neatly printed postcards with a dignified buildup for that picture, stressing the participation of the Abbey Players from Dublin, in the cast.

Live Seahorse Display Builds Interest In Short

Salt-water aquarium containing live seahorses was spotted out front next the boxoffice (see photo) at the New York Broadway Trans-Lux as a buildup for the date on the short, "Trailing the Seahorse." Background of underwater subjects was placed behind the tank, masked off to show only the background and interior.

Crowds collected to view the unusual flash especially at feeding time and the bally broke some neat notices in the dailies. Outfit was promoted from the Aquarium Stock Co., and installed with the cooperation of Manager Schoning and publicist Edsmon.

NATIONAL LEGISLATORS ENDORSE M-G-M SHORT

January Bronze Plaque Winner Arranges Special Showing On "Servant of the People" Date

Outstanding was the campaign put on by Ray Bell, Washington, D. C., Loew's Theatres publicist, under the supervision of Carter Barron, divisional director, on "Servant of the People," M-G-M's two-reel short picturing the history of the United States Constitution. And among the unusual slants that commanded wide attention was the special preview in advance of the date at Loew's Palace for Capitol top-names including prominent senators and other high federal executives who forwarded written endorsements on the picture. Local columnists also noted another showing at the White House for President Roosevelt.

Pinched for Street Stunt

In all, the newspaper publicity was far-reaching, for in addition to many out of the ordinary breaks, contests and feature angles were covered. A stunt that caught on for conspicuous planting was the idea of projecting the short against the white marble side wall of the new Supreme Court building. This was done about dusk with a truck upon which the projector was installed and came to an end with a pinch by government guards. The gag was properly kidded by the newspapers and the title included which of course was the result that Bell had in mind.

Other publicity standouts were put over with a screening for 150 essay winners sent to the Inauguration as guests of Hearst papers throughout the country. Through reporters who accompanied each group, the showing was highlighted in all the Hearst papers. Local papers aided further, one sheet with a classified tiein for guest tickets and another using the title as a slogan for institutional display ads, the slogan and theatre copy carried on the newspaper delivery truck banners. Search for local descendants of the designers of the Constitution to attend the showing as guests also brought added stories.

Prominent windows were featured with the city's top department store showing a display (see photo) built around the history of the Constitution. Photostatic reproductions of the famed document, portraits of signers and other material borrowed from the Constitutional Commission were shown. Dignified theatre cards were included. Book stores also cooperated and public libraries prepared special bookmarks with supplementary list of books on the subject issued by various branches.

The title was used also by Western Union on a miniature telegram applied to the services offered by the wire company and radio plugs obtained daily from Station WOL which also used the title as a slogan of service. Dash cards on street cars, said to be a "first" in Washington as a means of publicising a theatrical attraction, were promoted, a strong billing campaign employed including 24-sheets and further attention garnered by a banner across the entrance of the Willard Hotel (see photo) during the Inaugural parade.

Novelty Matches Used For "Flanders" Date

Maxwell Weinberg at the Little Theatre, Baltimore, Md., for his showing of "Carnival in Flanders" painted up midget match books advertising the theatre. Inserted inside, when the cover opened a strip of paper mentioning the film and its selection as "the best film of 1933" greeted the user.

These matches were distributed to all downtown hotels, night clubs and better class restaurants who were glad to accept them as novel giveaways.

SMART TIEINS FEATURE HAL GRADY CAMPAIGN

January Silver Plaque Winner Employs Effective Devices To Put Over "Plainsman"

Previous accounts in these pages have told of the tieups made by Manager Hal Grady, Palace, Lubbock, Tex., with local columnist known far and wide in those parts as "The Plainsman." And with the booking of the picture of that name, Grady cast about for some different method of utilizing the newspaperman's title for further publicity and found it in the fact that the time of the booking coincided with the 13th anniversary of the columnist's unique feature in Lubbock. On this, three pages of display ads were obtained, one a single co-op and the other a double truck, the former of merchant's ads with congratulations and the latter a giant scroll of good wishes with signature cuts of the columnists' friends. Copy atop featured "The Plainsman." Columnist showed his appreciation of the honors by publicising a free party at the theatre for all "pioneers," folks who had lived in that sector continuously since March, 1891, when Lubbock County was founded.

127-Mile Road Bally Clicks

The local press was again called upon in the unfolding of another of Hal's smart slants in which a local lad, dubbed "The Plainsman," was engaged to hike from Amarillo to Lubbock, some 127 miles, in four days, carrying banner reading "I'm walking from Amarillo to Lubbock to see," etc., etc. Hiker carried camping outfit, was dressed in "plainsman's" clothes, including coonskin hat, carried rifle and other accessories. In addition to the thousands who passed him on the roads, the papers ran daily accounts of his journey.

When this was fully exploited, Grady turned on the gas again and hooked up with the students at the local Texas Tech in a beard-growing contest tied to a college celebration with winners attending the show on the house. Stunt not only broke the news sections but also landed notice in "The Woman," woman's page feature. Next tiein was a classified hookup, a five-day coloring contest for children, with a different Indian chief figure being used each day. Prizes were theatre tickets.

The picture thus being thoroughly publicised, Hal let loose with his top stunt, an old time chuck-wagon in front of the theatre with "cowboys" passing out real coffee made over a fire built in the street. Over 1,000 cups of coffee were served with everything promoted. All the proper atmosphere was preserved even to the campfire fuel. The cowboys, employees of the theatre, were dressed in character and the accompanying photos show the crowds around the wagon. Also note giant cutout of Gary Cooper against side of building.

Ties In Boy Scouts

Boy Scout tiein made in addition to the national contest, gave prize of pup tent to the troop having the best attendance at one night of the picture and another slant was a voting contest, the troop winning receiving a bugle. Windows were not neglected and below is reproduced prominent display showing desert sand, cactus, skulls of cattle, etc. Center was occupied with miniature covered wagon and oxen, wagon being exact replica of old-time prairie schooner all made by hand. Other windows were in keeping.

Formal invitations to the city's top names were issued for special screening, letters mailed to teachers in rural schools and history instructors in high schools and colleges and a special Hollywood premiere with broadcast from lobby were among the other smart slants Grady used to put over his date and win his well-deserved Quigley honors for which he generously credits cooperation of his assistant, Hoenschiedt.

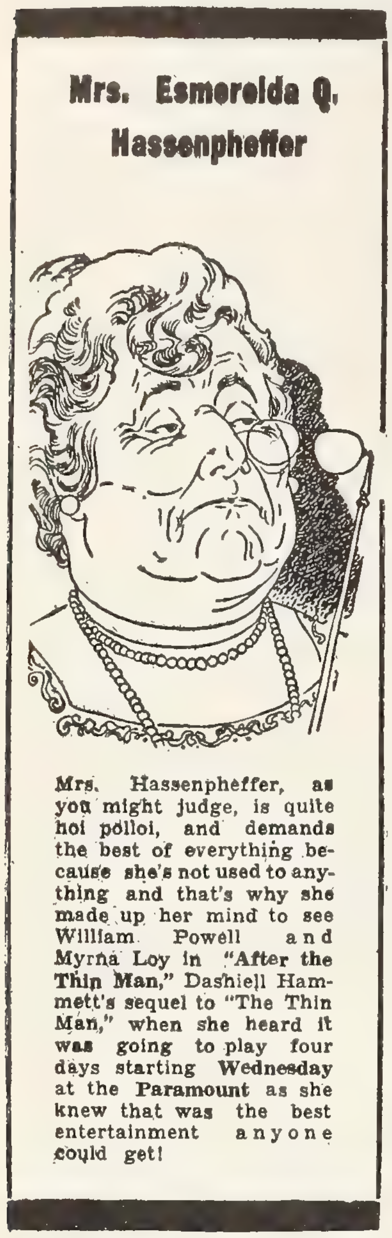
CARTOON TEASER ADS



Mrs. Esmerelda Q. Hassenpheffer

Mrs. Hassenpheffer, as you might judge, is quite hoi polloi, and demands the best of everything because she's not used to anything and that's why she made up her mind to see William Powell and Myrna Loy in "After the Thin Man," Dashiell Hammett's sequel to "The Thin Man," when she heard it was going to play four days starting Wednesday at the Paramount as she knew that was the best entertainment anyone could get!

Mr. Pink E. Pinkus

Mr. Pinkus is a very retiring man, particularly around his wife, and now he's worried stiff because after he found out that William Powell and Myrna Loy in "After The Thin Man" was playing four days starting Wednesday at the Paramount, he flew into a rage and told his better half he was going to see it whether she liked it or not. Of course Mrs. Pinkus was going to see it anyway so Pink just put his proverbial foot in it for nothing! No wonder he's worried!

CARTOON TEASERS. To convey the light comedy touch to "After the Thin Man" at the Paramount, Lynchburg, Va., Manager Dick Eason broke out in advance with a series of one-column cartoon teasers as illustrated. In all, five were used, one each day in advance of the regular ads with the unusual buildup said to heighten interest in the date.

Showmen Arrange Contests, Displays For Quint Tieups

For the cost of the Quintuplet dolls and lobby display of same, reports Fred C. Souttar, Fox Midwest district manager, Manager Max Tschauder, Lincoln, Belleville, Ill., working with the local Advocate, secured a whale of a lot of publicity and free display space for an excellent buildup on "Reunion."

The contest was arranged around the five most popular little local girls with votes determined as a means of discovering the winners. Each admission at the Lincoln was good for a certain number and three, six and a year's subscription to the paper were scaled accordingly. Contest ran 12 days, with girls under 10 eligible for the prizes. Vote blanks were run each day in the paper and given out at the theatre. Top girl received the five dolls, with runners-up voted two and one.

As to be expected, much excitement was aroused, especially since the paper ran smash displays on the tiein, page one stories and also a serialization of the scenario. Tschauder also plugged the contest at the theatres and with the daily breaks and other hookups did a smart job in letting the folks know about the date.

Quin Cutouts Display Creates Local Record

Called a record for such exploitation in Hamilton, Ont., Canada, was the display promoted by Manager Jack Purves, Tivoli, on "Reunion" in ace window of the T. Eaton main street store. Center piece was made up of seven-foot high cutouts of the Dionne Quintuplets (see photo) bordering proportionately sized theatre poster with stills which Purves says attracted such crowds from early morning to late at night that the store officials allowed the display to remain for five days, an unprecedented number for tieins of this kind.

Similar striking displays were also forwarded by Jack on other attractions, such as a long lobby panel on "Talent Quest Night" and another, a setpiece on the inauguration of a policy change with the copy held by one of the Laurel-Hardy team as the other looked on, to advertise "Our Relations."

Ingenious Egg Hunts and Style Shows Featured; Elaborate Floral Exhibitions Planned to Inaugurate New Season

GARDEN SHOW AND ELECTRICAL EXHIBIT IN LOEW'S STATE LOBBY

USHERETTES AS MODELS IN LOBBY STYLE REVUE IN BRIDGEPORT

Already in operation by showmen in various spots and set to start generally are drives to celebrate the coming of Spring, to signalize the advent of Easter. Round Tablers in many quarters have reported the highlights of what they have in mind for the coming months and in some instances the top stunt of last year's Spring campaigns, all of which are set down on this and following pages. Typical of the flower and fashion tieins are the campaigns arranged by Loewmen in Cleveland, Ohio, and Bridgeport.

Elaborate floral displays in the lobbies of the Loew Cleveland theatres are a part of the annual unfolding of the Easter and spring season and this year is to be no exception according to the report from Milt Harris, zone publicity director, on the arrangements made by Col. Harry E. Long, division chief, and Manager Everett A. Steinbuch, at Loew's State. Display is put on in the expansive foyer with Halle Bros., leading department store, which spends a lot of money annually to make the show outstanding.

The setting is a garden with colorful array of flowers and formal landscaping and the latest creations in garden illumination exhibited in the display by the Electrical League of Cleveland. An idea of the flash may be obtained from the photo above on last year's exhibit.

An effort is being made this year to combine the flower show with a fashion prevue sponsored by local top style stores. At peak-hours of the day, manikins would parade in the lobby among the exhibits and demonstrate the clothes fashionable women have in mind for such occasions and others.

The Cleveland Florists' Association also cooperates annually by supplying thousands of assorted Easter flowers. To these are attached gummed stickers exploiting the Easter attraction and crediting the florists. The blooms are distributed in downtown stores and corners in the shopping area by attractively costumed girls (see photo on following page).

Annual tieup is also made with Postal to place jumbo wires in windows with Easter messages from stars in the season's attractions. Heralds on the same tiein are delivered week ahead by messenger boys wearing silk badges with copy from star in the picture extending greetings via Postal, theatre and date included. Egg coloring contest with the Cleveland Press is another yearly stunt with guest tickets as prizes and outstanding entries exhibited in the State lobby.

As all the other hard-hitting Loew-men, Matt Saunders, Poli, Bridgeport, Conn., has a lot of slants ready to hike the spring business. With the local Times-Star, a ringer contest is being sponsored whereby the paper takes photos of audiences, street groups, shopping crowds, etc. Circles are to be drawn around some of those pictures run in the daily with those so selected eligible for guest tickets. Personal appearances of picture stars visiting the nearby Westport, swank suburban section, is another slant of Matt's. Recently he had Rex O'Malley take a bow as did Arline Judge. Others are slated, he reports.

Easter egg-hunt is of course on tap to be put on with the local sheet. Full-page breaks are scheduled week ahead with credits for the current picture. Stunt last season was good for six page-one stories, according to Saunders. Three large eggs filled with shiny new pennies were buried at local park and smaller eggs held tickets to the theatre. Children under 14 were eligible to compete by registering their entries in coupon run daily in the paper.

For date on "Maytime" Saunders has lined up a lot of smart slants. Mailing list of local musical club under whose auspices Nelson Eddy recently appeared in recital is to be used with officers of the club contacted to hold a Maytime Party in the lobby a week ahead and also act as hostesses on opening day. All music and vocal teachers are also to be informed and it is planned to have schools get behind a musical Maytime Community sing. Above is illustrated fashion show at Poli Theatre with usherettes acting as models.

BUNNIES TO BE GIVEN AS PRIZES

Bunny Show in Lobby Is Offered by Pollock

Always sure to attract fat crowds is Les Pollock's bunny show in the lobby of Loew's Rochester, N. Y., with live rabbits in a cage playing around tiny house illuminated from inside. Last year the stunt in addition to plugging the Easter angle also called attention to coming attractions (see photo) through cards inserted in the paws of cut-out rabbits around the display.

Pollock's annual Egg Hunt is also lined up, the stunt put on annually with the Rochester Times Union. Paper goes to great lengths to insure success even to the extent of running detailed maps showing where the eggs are buried. This year Les expects to bury eggs the night before and have the area fenced and patrolled all night by the police. The hunt is in two classes, children up to eight and those over eight to 13. Paper runs coupon daily and children to enter must fill these out, present them to officers at the park and receive Egg Hunt tag to be eligible for the prizes. Cash is given for "gold" and "silver" eggs; theatre tickets for those marked with rubber stamp.

Flower giveaway to attract women is a tiein with paper and local florist to present 50 Easter corsages to careful female drivers. Each day 10 good drivers are spotted at downtown corners, their license numbers run in the paper the following day. Those who identify themselves receive the flowers to wear with Easter clothes. Last year Pollock tied in on this with his Easter date and finds it good enough for a possible repeater.

In Dayton, Ohio, Loew man M. C. Burnett has arranged tiein with Retail Merchants Association to publicize at one time four MGM specials with enlarged colored stills and theatre credits for all windows. This is being done in conjunction with the annual spring opening, the idea being sold because Burnett was able to furnish stills in which stars appeared in apparel for all occasions.

Spring Dance Recital Starts Limerick's Seasonal Activities

Already chalked up by George Limerick as the starter for his spring drive for business in Cleburne, Texas, was a dance recital a few weeks back put on by leading dance school. Show ran about an hour with 30 star pupils and the outfit being very popular locally played to standout grosses. Next in line to be held on the night of March 12th, in conjunction with top local store and another dance school is a Tiny Tot Review and Spring Style Show for Kiddies. About 50 children are to show the new juvenile models supplied by the store, after which the dance pupils will do their numbers.

On March 26th, George with the same tiein will present his annual Spring Style Show and Cotton Frolic, preshowing of new bathing suit styles and beach apparel on the stage of the Yale Theatre. This is an annual affair and always good for added grosses. Then the next day, Saturday, the 27th, with the Lions and Rotary the annual egg-hunt takes place which Limerick reports another highlight event for publicity and good will.

STYLE SHOW MODELS WILL PLUG PICTURES

The 25 girls who are to model the new Spring styles in Dave Dallas' Easter fashion show will carry metallic-lettered cards publicizing the coming attractions at the Grand, Holdenville, Okla. Patrons will be asked to express their wishes on the pictures they are most anxious to see by applauding girl carrying card on that attraction. The model who receives the biggest hand on that score will receive prize cup in addition to Easter ensemble.

Walt Davis to Celebrate Anniversary at Easter

It so happens that the 16th anniversary of the Capitol, Regina, Sask., Canada, comes at Easter time and thus Walt Davis is putting on a big show for the double occasion. In addition to the picture program he is setting a special stage show to be furnished by the Robert Simpson department store chain. For Easter Saturday, Davis is putting on a Kiddie Revue for the youngsters. Extra merchandising on the program will include special trailer, extra billing, individual programs, locally-made newsreel, bakery tiein for mammoth anniversary cake and atmospheric decorations in foyer and out front. Walt has promoted three elaborate pots of lilies for display to be given away on a lucky number drawing on Easter Saturday matinee.

The famed Davis foyer courtesies are still clicking, many of which have been publicized in the pages. These include match stand, kleenex stand for frosted glasses, reading tables with fan and trade magazines, candy suckers for tiny tots, community candy sales two afternoons a week. Walt also is plugging his highly profitable idea of theatre gift tickets and reports many being sold for bridge prizes, merit awards and as personal gifts.

Grove and Merchants Cooperate On Formal Spring Opening

For some time in March, Herb Grove, Fort, Rock Island, Ill., has worked out a campaign with leading merchants for a Formal Spring Opening which will feature a window-shopping contest the night previous to the opening. The spring apparel displays will all be shown at one time and each window will include a star or scene still from coming attractions at the Fort. Shoppers will be asked to list correct names of stars and pictures in which they will appear; to name the pictures from which the stills have been taken. Answers are to be brought to the theatre, with prizes donated by merchants and guest tickets included.

Also to be stressed by Grove is his part in the car and trailer giveaway put on by the Quad City Theatre Managers Association, as detailed by Joe Kinsky, district manager, in this issue. Hair style show in connection with a spring fashion revue is also planned. The egg hunt with aid of the American Legion is another slant.

Hal Grady to Repeat April Fool Revue

In addition to the annual egg hunt put on with the aid of the local Lions Club, Hal Grady will hold another April Fool's Revue, on the night of March 31st, at the Palace, Lubbock, Texas. Grady's account of this highly effective tiein was detailed in the Round Table when it was first reported.

For latter part of March, beauty shop operators' convention is slated for Lubbock with a hair dress show put on at the Palace and about that time or when the latest Temple picture is released, Hal is planning his annual "Lubbock Shirley Temple of 1937" contest, an idea that has clicked for two consecutive years. Then in April an old-fiddlers' contest is set with local Station KFYO, which for five weeks, on Saturdays, will invite fiddlers to compete over the air, with two winners selected weekly. Finalists will appear on the stage of the Palace for final judging and broadcast.

Easter Giveaway, Kid Club Arranged by Charninsky

To the first 150 adults in line at the boxoffice on Easter Sunday, at the Capitol, Dallas, Louie Charninsky is planning to give half-pound boxes of candy and to each child a chocolate Easter egg. All the candy is to be promoted. National Screen Easter trailer of welcome will also be run. For spring, Louie is set for a "Dick Tracy Detective Club" to be organized with the Dallas Police and the Dallas Dispatch, the paper running the Tracy strip. Purpose is to safeguard children against crime and accidents.

Charninsky's best tiein last year was a drawing night before Easter Sunday with department store contributing 10 Easter frocks as prizes for the usual credits and lobby display. On account of state tax this year on all drawings, this idea will not be worked and to avoid this payment the candy giveaways are being handled by distribution to patrons before they enter the house.

MOVIE SCRIPT CONTEST IS ARRANGED

"April Brings Shower of Hits" Is Mike Guttman's Slogan

Flooding of all surrounding towns with window cards on spring attractions and one-sheets with institutional copy is scheduled by Mike Guttman, for the Colonial, Watertown, S. D. Slogan for the drive is: "April Brings a Shower of Hollywood Hits to the Colonial in Watertown." Planned also is an extensive billing of sixes and 24's, use of ballyhoo car through the territory to wake up the folks after the long, hard winter.

Style show is also in line on which Guttman suggests a smart slant that sounds inexpensive. In building a runway, he uses a turntable in the center made of an old truck wheel covered with flooring and run by small motor. As model steps and poses on turntable, wheel is turned for extra smart effect. Special Easter edition of Shopper's Guide is to be put out, and during school vacation there will be special morning cartoon shows.

Mike also mentions his imprinted miniature photos, one of which was run some time back. The photo is about three by four, taken off a regular eight by 10 scene still and at the bottom the theatre credits are lettered by photographer, who is also allowed to place his ad alongside. Photos are distributed in various ways at no cost to Guttman.

Wild Flower Display Suggested by Hyskell

In those sections of the country where wild flowers are available and in the news as they are in California, theatremen might give ear to the slants recommended by Dean Hyskell, Fox West Coast Theatres ad head. In one of his bulletins last year, Dean spoke of the interest in the wild flower and advised gathering these for display to inaugurate the spring season. Chambers of Commerce and National Parks Association were listed as of possible assistance. Spring Flower Show in which residents are invited to display blooms from their gardens is another California item from Hyskell in pointing out tiein possibilities with florist, garden implement stores, etc.

Spring suggests the outdoors and thus the West Coast ad head stresses advisability of tieins for display of sports stuff, hiking, camping and motoring apparel. Where space permits, outdoors scene is in line against scenic backdrop with miniature pool, waterfall, etc., camp equipment, etc.

Among the egg hunts put over in that sector last year, the Fox West Coast circuit organ describes how Manager Ernest Silcocks, Granada, Inglewood, Cal., put it on with cooperating merchants. Two sets of prizes were given for two different hunts, one set aside for the younger children, both held in the same park. Eggs bearing the date of Easter Day were good for one-month passes at the Granada, eggs bearing the date of the hunt were good for a two-weeks pass and eggs bearing the date of Good Friday brought a one-week pass. In addition, other eggs bore the names of participating stores and the eggs when presented to the individual merchants brought single tickets.

UNIQUE AUDIENCE GAG CLICKS FOR PETERS

To call attention to coming date, Dean Hyskell, Fox West Coast ad head describes unusual audience gag pulled by Hank Peters, at the Paramount, Hollywood. Peters had a plant in the house and before each feature showing stepped up on stage and called for the plant by name, excuse for interruption being receipt of important telegram. Plant answered to name and requested wire be read publicly. The message was about the coming attraction.

Quad City Managers Ass'n To Give Away Auto, Trailer

From experiences of last year, the most effective promotion offered by the Quad City Managers' Association and reported by Joe Kinsky, Tri-States district manager, was a car giveaway put on for Holy Week, which, plus a car trailer, is to be repeated this year. The association is made up of managers in 14 theatres in four nearby cities and account of which was given by Kinsky in the issue of May 9, 1936. The association works together on all promotions.

In addition, the best of product is planned and advertising is to be held to a minimum with arrangements made for free space and radio announcements. Kinsky also reports a concert by the high school band and glee club, of 160 members, at the Capitol Theatre, in Davenport, Iowa, for the Thursday evening of Holy Week and is scheduling a ticket drive in advance. The Tri-States chief also outlines a contest to be put on by Herb Grove, at the Fort, Rock Island, Ill., who on the same night will sponsor in conjunction with local radio station, an opportunity for patrons to read movie scripts of pictures already played. Individuals will take different parts and talent is being recruited from 20 surrounding towns.

Street Flower Girl Stunt in Cleveland

Loew-man Deering Now Building Campaign on "Big Five" Dates

Already started is the drive now in operation by Francis Deering, at Loew's, Houston, Tex., to sell the "Big Five," outstanding spring attractions from MGM—"Maytime," "Last of Mrs. Cheyney," "Parnell," "A Day at the Races" and "Captains Courageous." Featured are lobby setpieces, one an animation in which titles and stills from each of the attractions revolve on a belt in front of attractive display cards, one still coming to view at a time. Behind the setpiece, repeating phonograph plays hit tunes from "Maytime." On the latter, second display represents front of a house with stars gaving through window which is shaded with flower-covered arched trellis in keeping with the picture and the spring season. Newspaper contest is also planned with prizes awarded to readers identifying scenes from each of the five pictures advertised.

Deering also sends along tear sheets on his last year's "Loew's Easter Egg Hunt" put on annually with the Houston Chronicle at one of the city's parks and attracting some 5,000 or more children. Held on Saturday morning, thousands of eggs are hidden with extra prizes for special egg finders, some donated on behalf of star whose pictures are dated at Loew's. Prizes include tickets, bunnies, dolls, etc. Police department cooperates each year and the publicity is very generous, including photo layouts and feature stories.

Dave Dallas Sets Spring Campaigns From Valentine to Mother's Day

In full stride is the drive for spring business inaugurated by Dave Dallas, city manager, Grand, Dixie and Liberty Theatres, in Holdenville, Okla., and successfully put over in the past few weeks was a Valentine Sweetheart Prevue on "God's Country and the Woman" at the Grand. Drug store contributed boxes of candy for a drawing stunt and the prevue was advertised by an ingenious two-for-one idea in the form of a heart-shaped valentine folder card. Copy invited girls to bring their boy friends, or husbands, and present the card, which was good for one admission with the other paid.

Dallas next put on a Washington's Birthday Party for school students, the stage program presented by the local P. T. A. and the W. P. A. sewing room. Costumes of the Washington era were worn and bakery furnished cake to oldest person present who celebrated a birthday on Feb. 22nd. The high school art class was invited to compete in a poster contest to advertise the event and to the entrant showing most originality, a 30-day guest pass was awarded.

Arrangements are set with the De Molay organization particularly active in Holdenville to present a special program in keeping with the occasion at a prevue on the night preceding Easter Sunday. Officers of the society in robes of their office will appear on the stage and music adaptable to the day will be featured. For St. Patrick's Day, local grocers and national distributors will be tied in with special show to include Irish music, quartets, shamrocks as favors, etc.

Dig Out the Old Bonnets For Prize Easter Contest

Unique Laugh Slant Tiein Suggested by Round Tabler

by DICK WRIGHT
District Manager, Warner Theatres

The importance of continual promotional activity at no cost to the theatre cannot be stressed too often. Such activity need not be limited to ballyhooing specific attractions, but can also be utilized institutionally in keeping your theatre in the limelight.

The following may be of some help to you in laying a foundation for your extra selling plans in March:

In Akron and Canton, Harvey Cocks and Doc Elliott are completing arrangements on an "Old Easter Bonnet" contest. The idea is to tie in with a local department store in the search for the funniest looking old-fashioned outmoded Easter bonnet that once was the last word in fashion.

Contestants are instructed to bring their entries to the store and register them at a specially provided booth. Ten days before Easter a committee of judges will select 12 hats that strike them as being the funniest. Those selected are then displayed in a prominent window of the store a week before Easter. Prizes for the winners of the 12 hats may be determined by the store and theatre management. The store to further interest the public will invite them to pick from these hats displayed in the window the funniest, and tell in 25 words why they think their selection is the funniest. A neatly costumed girl stationed in front of the window display provides contestants with ballots and disposes of them in a box provided for same.

On Wednesday night preceding Easter announcements of the winners of the window contest and presentation of the prizes will take place from the theatre stage. A complete Easter outfit for the lucky woman winning first prize with various accessories as prizes for the runners-up.

Store Publicizes Contest

Department store benefits from the tie-up by pulling people inside their store for the "Old Bonnet" registrations and further by attracting them to their windows to see the display and fill out their ballot. Theatre benefits by additional patronage on one night during Holy Week when the winners are announced from their stage and prizes awarded plus the tremendous amount of publicity received. The store publicizes the contest through the mediums of paid newspaper space, radio, store's own shopping news circulation and window displays.

Theatre publicizes contest in newspaper, screen and lobby. Editorial newspaper spot would be of tremendous benefit, making it a three-way tie-up. Current theatre attractions should be tied in with all mediums of publicity in the contest which can be put on at practically no cost to the theatre. It should not be difficult for you to obtain stills for window or lobby display showing movie stars in outmoded hats as there have been a number of attractions recently from which these could be obtained.

With kiddies on their Spring vacation around Easter time, a miniature menagerie in the mezzanine as an extra added attraction will definitely help to build kiddie patronage if handled properly.

Of first importance, however, is the physical construction of your theatre. If your house has a mezzanine which is far enough removed from the theatre auditorium, either below your main floor or on the second floor, so that any noise emanating from same would not be disturbing to your patrons, the setup is ideal.

Contact your various pet stores first and sell them the idea of the publicity which they can receive in being represented in your menagerie. Small pets such as rabbits, turtles, lizards, parrots, kittens, dogs, white rats, monkeys, etc., placed in separate cages around the walls of your mezzanine. An artist could draw displays up with beaver board circus wagon cut-outs, elephants, camels, etc., tying in the cages with a continuous display and giving it a touch of color. Add a touch of comedy to the display by placing cards on each cage, giving the pets ridiculous names. As an illustration you might place card on the cage containing the white rabbits as Alaskan Wiffenpoof. Palms and ferns spotted about will add to the general effect. Balloons, candy samples, etc., would further add to the interest. Plug same from your screen with an announcement, "After you have enjoyed the show, be sure to take the kiddies to the Miniature Menagerie on our second floor." Play up in your ads as an extra added treat for the kiddies. It really works. The writer has previously put on this stunt and recommends it as a kiddie attraction of genuine merit. Of course, it entails an amount of extra effort, but is justified as it means extra money at your box office without extra cost to the theatre.

Spring style shows, radio home talent broadcasts from the theatre stage, refrigerator shows tying in with cooking schools, kiddie Popeye shows, tie-ups for benefit ticket shows with women's organizations, all of these things click. With transient trade picking up in the hotels of your town, satisfy yourself that your attractions are brought to the attention of their guests.

Clyde Smith's Cutout Rabbit Display

More Eastertide Slants and Stunts

Men and Women Fashion Show Plugged by Clyde Smith

Not only the leading society debutantes but also prominent men of Hot Springs, Ark., have accepted invitations of W. Clyde Smith, Malcolm City Manager, to take part in his Easter style show at the Paramount Theatre. Leading band has been secured to furnish music for the show and revue included in the program. Co-op ads and wide publicity are set. Smith also recommends bunny and baby chick giveaways and is arranging floral tieup for an "Easter Flower Garden" for lobbies. A "Bunny Revue" tied in with leading dance school is also set. Neat attractor used last year (see photo) was cutout bunny and lillies out front.

Fashion Show Slants Stressed By Warnerite Frank La Falce

Sound and timely advice on the staging of the Spring Fashion Show is contributed by Frank La Falce, advertising chief, Warner Washington Theatres zone, who points out the advisability of staging the show with a picture of great entertainment value but no outstanding sales angles; not a "cheater" but a picture perhaps hard to sell by itself.

On the store tiein, La Falce speaks of contacting merchant sufficiently in advance to allow time to get gowns, models, etc., without rushing. Theatremen should work with store in laying out newspaper ads, heralds, etc., and the merchants are usually promoted to pay all costs. Store mailing list can be used for theatre's advertising and newspaper mat service can be utilized for displays. Women's page and fashion editors can also be contacted for stories and reviews.

For inexpensive stage setting, Frank recommends huge book which opens between each series of models, girls stepping on to stage from the pages. Covers may be duplicates of Vogue, Harper's Bazaar or other smart fashion magazine. For child costumes, Frank Boucher, while at the Maryland, Hagerstown, Md., used cute local twins whose appearance almost stopped the show. Cooperating store has also been promoted to give away dresses during the performance.

La Falce lists Easter ideas of strength, stressing Easter spirit in programs, lobby displays, etc., and encouraging florist tieup for lobby flash. He also speaks of live rabbit giveaways, citing theatre which increased Saturday matinee grosses by offering 12 bunnies. Decorative Easter eggs as the basis of a contest for children is another slant suggested with the winning efforts shown in the lobby.

Candy Eggs and Flower Lobby To Feature Siegal's Drive

Up at the Jerome, in the Bronx section of New York, Ed Siegal has promoted local candy manufacturer for Easter eggs and florist for plants and lobby decorations week ahead. Community singing led by house organist is also planned, as are colorful cut-out bunnies and other atmospheric decorations for further display.

FROM HERALD READERS

"GET WHAT YOU PUT INTO IT"

To The Editor of The Herald:

I was very much amused upon reading what exhibitor Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Ontario, wrote in a recent issue of the Herald regarding the way many theatres are operated and expect to get business. I am well acquainted with and have met with such conditions. Mr. Rankin is a "live wire" exhibitor, to be sure. Too many exhibitors are content to just announce they are going to exhibit a certain picture, then sit down and wait for the crowd to come. They forget an important fact that there are all kinds of people in this world and there are different classes of people who like certain types of pictures.

Just how are your patrons to know this if too little stress is put in advertising in telling them about it? It's up to you to get every possible customer of this certain type patron because there is always a class who will "go" for a certain type picture rather than others. A good many people seeing a different type picture than they expected become sour on all other pictures and consequently stay away.

I am an "ex" exhibitor just now, not being in the "game," but I have in mind a certain fine picture I just recently witnessed, an RKO picture, that they should be proud of — "Rainbow on the River," starring the child singing wonder, Bobby Breen.

This picture has universal appeal but its biggest asset is the beautiful music and the heart appealing singing of Bobby Breen. Therefore this picture should have special appeal to music lovers. Therefore "form" letters should be sent to all known music teachers advising them that you have a treat for them and their pupils and you feel they should avail themselves of it. Do the same to other musical organizations. If I know my human nature most people like to know you are interested in them. As there are scenes and a song or two of interest to those of the Catholic faith here is another angle for exhibitors who happen to be in a Catholic community to make known.

Press books put out by all exchanges are too little used, usually looked upon as a necessary evil. That is a sad mistake. In the theatre business like any other business, you get what you put into it.

In closing I heartily recommend "Rainbow on the River" to please as near 100 per cent of any type audience as any made for some time and should make any live exhibitor money. Congratulations R.K.O., and Producer Sol Lesser, and all concerned in the production of this clean little gem. It's a credit to the industry — H. C. Mauler, Bellingham, Washington.

P. S. I note "Rainbow on the River" is one of eight Box Office Champions for December, in January 30 issue of the Herald.

SUGGESTS RECIPE FOR BANK NIGHT FILMS

I have profited so much by reading "What the Picture Did for Me," the opinion of different exhibitors throughout the country, that I am going to contribute to the service this week. Before going any further, I want to say that these reports are ideal for the exhibitor because they are the frank opinion of each individual exhibitor and not reports from critics who are not always right.

I hope that you can find space to print this little item. Recently while on a trip I noticed quite a few theatres playing very small program pictures on their Bank Night. I think this is very unwise because on Bank Night we get people sometimes that have never been in a theatre. By showing a good picture this new customer will leave the theatre contented and will come back. On the other hand, if the picture is not interesting he will leave and perhaps never come back. I wonder how many exhibitors realize that Bank Night has brought us new customers, some who have never seen a picture. Some of these people have come to our theatre just to have a chance on the award which is drawn on Bank Night and regardless if they do not win have been so impressed and well entertained for the small admission price that they have turned out to be regular customers. We have made new customers this way, so this is why I suggest that a good picture be booked on your Bank Night along with a good program of short subjects. You will find that this is a good investment and will repay you double in time to come. Bank Night is probably one of the greatest business stimulants for any exhibitor in the show business today. I find that this is a good recipe to keep Bank Night from getting stale:

1—Keep plugging for new registrations.

3—Get a special trailer announcing the award for every week.

4—If a number is drawn and the person is not present, the manager should write a letter to that person informing that party that if he had been at the theatre on that certain night he or she would have won.

6—Give 'em the best show you can book.

Results: You'll do business.—Pierce C. O'Donnell, Gayety Theatre, Van Bueren, Maine.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

McAllen, Texas

Dear Herald:

We will probably be criticized a whole lot for what we say in this letter, and probably we ought to be, but we have been criticized so much that our hide has become as tough as a rhino's.

We wonder if it is generally believed that about one-half of the people of the United States are crazy on various subjects and the other half don't know any more than they ought to. We belong to both halves.

Back in the days of the Pilgrim Fathers if a person complained that a certain old lady bewitched him she was taken to the public square and tied to a post and flogged in view of the people, but later on a mayor was elected who had some sense and he issued an edict that anyone complaining of being bewitched was to receive the same treatment, and from then on witchcraft vanished.

Ladders, Cats, Nosebleeds

Superstition dates back to the Dark Ages and continues more or less to the present. Some won't start on a journey on Friday; others won't walk under a ladder. Some believe that if a black cat crosses ahead of them in the road they should turn back. Some believe they should rap on wood to avoid some calamity. Some think it is dangerous to walk over a broomstick. We knew an old lady who would tie a red string of yarn around her neck to stop nose bleeding.

Some folks can look at a new moon and tell us what kind of weather we are going to have; some books tell us a year ahead just what kind of weather we will have, and some folks believe it. Some will plant their potatoes in the dark of the moon and some in the light of the moon, and both believe they are right. Some won't sleep in a hotel room numbered 13 and others claim to tell what the coming winter will be by the thickness of the corn husks. One lady will tell our fortunes over the radio if we will write her our age and where we were born, and will enclose a dollar. Lots of people reply, which inclines us to believe that Barnum was right, and if it weren't for the suckers some people would have to go to work.

Sowing Flax in Shirttail

We heard our father tell that when he was a boy they had a neighbor who raised a small patch of flax each year. He had certain rules to go by. One was to sow his flax on a certain day, regardless of weather conditions. He would get up before daylight and cut a peach tree sprout the exact length he wanted the flax to grow, then he would carry the sprout in his mouth and go out in his shirttail and sow his flax seed, and ever since that we have been wondering whyinhel we took this country away from the Indians and Mexicans.

We spend millions of dollars dredging the lakes and marshes of the upper Mississippi and Ohio and other rivers so the water can run off quickly, and then go down the lower Mississippi and spend hundreds of millions more to take care of the water. We pay people for killing five million pigs to make the price of pork high; we pay farmers for plowing up crops and spend hundreds of million of dollars to build dams to irrigate land to raise more crops. We build "shelterbelts" and can't get enough dogs to irrigate the trees. Doggone the doggone luck, anyhow, and then there's another thing, as Andy Gump said to Min, but we'll skip that.

Losing Sleep at Theatre

Did you see "Sing Me a Love Song"? It has James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts and Allen Jenkins in the cast, and if you know anything about casts, and we think you do, you will agree with us that this is a good one.

We don't pretend to know very much about pictures, but, as we saw it, we would class this as mighty good entertainment.

We saw this picture the other night at Shine Mason's Palace theatre, and this is the same theatre where we see a lot of good ones, and if Shine don't watch out we will have him in that kangaroo court on a damage suit for making us lose a lot of sleep, see if we don't.

We have to laugh every time we think of Jimmy Melton and Zasu Pitts in that picture when they were singing—

Oh, carry me back to the lone prai-re-e-e-e
Where the coyotes howl and the winds blow free,
And when I die you can bury me
'Neath the western sky on the lone prai-re-e-e-e.

Even Zasu had to laugh when she was singing. She reminded us a whole lot of a swamp angel prima donna singing a hillbilly song back on the Kankakee river in Indiana. That famous cowboy classic will go roaring down the cycles of time, like a hound pup after an alley cat.

Up in Nebraska we have a state constitution which prevents the state from going into debt, and we don't owe a nickel to anybody, and we have never heard anyone suggest that the Constitution be amended. A suggestion of that kind would be very unpopular. The Nebraska folks don't believe that they could spend themselves into prosperity.

Hammerheads and Whistles

About 200 feet from where we are living is the Missouri-Pacific railroad and three or four fruit trains go through here every night and the engineers seem to take delight in pulling their whistle cords right in front of our bedroom window. These hammerheads, and Shine Mason of the Palace theatre, are responsible for us losing a lot of good sleep. There's got to be something done about that.

Some of these nice, warm days we are going to go down to Brownsville and go fishing with J. C. Fanning. J. C., as you probably know, operates the Brownsville theatres, and fishing or anything else don't interfere with his theatre work, but—

When the wind begins to blow
And it starts to getting warm,
When the fish come up the channel from the bay,
It is then that you will know
That as sure as you are born
That J. C. will go out fishing every day.

But the fact is that J. C. never neglects business to go fishing, and we wouldn't give a nickel a carload for those who do.

We knew a guy back in Indiana once who put in the most of his time fishing while his wife took in washing to support herself and 11 kids. Somehow those Hoosier fishermen always seemed to raise big families. It never seemed to interfere with their fishing. We understand that J. C.'s health is not of the best and his doctor has ordered him to stay out of doors as much as possible. We are going to get that doctor's address, but if he puts us on a diet we are going to tell him to go jump into the Rio Grande. Aufweidersehn.

Gene Autry

OH, SUSANNA!

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE

THE BIG SHOW —Texas Centennial Special

THE OLD CORRAL

ROUNDUP TIME IN TEXAS

GIT ALONG LITTLE DOGIES —Special of the same calibre as "The Big Show"

—and two more to come

Gene has become the screen's ace western star!

—BUT DON'T TAKE OUR WORD FOR IT!

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Kay Hughes—A perfect picture for our town. Drew above average and pleased everyone. We probably made a mistake playing it only one day. When your patrons complain about an eight-reel picture being too short, well, you know it's a good show You'll be glad you played this picture. Played January 9.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

SINGING COWBOY AND OH, SUSANNA! Gen Autry—From my observation after showing "Singin Cowboy" and "Oh, Susanna," Autry is the best be an exhibitor can make, for in my estimation Autry will be greater than Tom Mix was in his palmies days in silent pictures. Autry's combination of singing and riding makes a happy medium for clicking a the box office. This is the first comment on an product in 26 years of business here, but I feel credi is due, even though Republic is a newcomer in th business.—Johnnie Griffin, Orpheum Theatre, Chinook Mont. General patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Our box office jumps every time we play Gen Autry westerns. This is the best Western star w are using Autry pictures gross with the bigges pictures we play Played January 6-7.—Gavin Bros American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small tow patronage

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Kay Hughes—Th result of the national poll as recorded in the HERAL and in FAME notwithstanding Gene Autry is wa and above any other western stars at our box office "The Big Show" is well produced and better tha any previous Autry we have shown. Pleased everyone, including myself. Excellent business. Runnin time, 70 minutes.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—When better westerns are made Gene Autry will make them. All Gene Autry pictures do a fine business for us. Played December 4-5.—Gavi Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Smal town patronage.

SINGING COWBOY, THE: Gene Autry, Lois Wild —Autry musical westerns outdraw all other picture so typed. Of course they please; otherwise the wouldn't do so.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatr Decatur, Ill. General patronage.
